ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, September 6, 1865.

THE "LOAFER" IN INDIA.

ONE of the anticipated consequences of "the free influx of British energy and enterprise to India" has come to pass. The "pioneers of progress" have brought with them their camp following, and the Presidency towns are overrun with "loafers." Even the Mofussil is not free from the visitation, but the ports are thoroughly infested, and Bombay in particular is attacked as by a plague. In the old days of the Company the spectacle of a poor European was unusual indeed. There might be a few drunken sailors in the bazaars, and a drunken soldier might help to make up a disorderly party in the streets. Their proceedings might occasionally, in the comprehensive language of police magistrates, be disgraceful to all parties concerned. But their excesses were within control. They did not even outrage native opinion, which was accustomed to consider sailors and soldiers of a caste apart from the rest of our countrymen, and privileged to anticipate the enjoyments of "Fiddler's-green." But the thorough British blackguard, not only dissipated but destitute, was almost unheard of in the days when the Government would almost deport a man for dropping his h's, in order that he might not disgrace the dominant class. We have changed all that indeed in these times; and the difficulty among respectable Europeans is to keep out of the way of their vagrant countrymen. In Bombay the evil has grown to such a height as to cause a panic, and, except in the most frequented places, men are afraid to go about even in broad day. In the papers received by last mail there are several cases of robbery and outrage detailed by actual sufferers. A Mr. Sheridan, for instance, writes to say that while proceeding in his buggy along the Esplanade—rather a public place, by the way—he was met by five European ruffians, who stopped his horse, pulled him out of the vehicle, inflicted upon him several wounds with a bamboo stick, stripped him of everything he had on his person, and left him naked on the spot. From a certain appearance of exaggeration in the account it was supposed that Mr. Sheridan was a myth, but another writer vouches for his authenticity, and adds an illustration of the nuisance from his own experience. He and some companions were seized in a similar manner, also on the Esplanade, by four European loafers, who were only scared by the noise of approaching wheels. Similar accounts are given by other persons, who, however their fears may lead them to overstate the formidable front of their assailants, establish the existence of a state of things highly dangerous to the community. The addition to these complaints, in nearly every case, is that the police are never to be found when wanted, so that the ruffians usually get clear off, and there is a general cry for special action on the part of authority.

We can understand that it may be difficult to deal with the evil by merely repressive means, though peaceful citizens have an undoubted right to expect proper protection; and it is satisfactory to find, therefore, that the Government are making inquiries with a view, it is hoped, of dealing with the cause as well as the effect. The Commander-in-Chief has called for a return of such persons among this vagrant class as have served in the army; the intention, apparently, being to make them useful again in a similar capacity. There seems, indeed, no reason why the army should not be recruited in India as well as in England, if a class exist for the purpose, and most able-bodied men would be available, whether they had already served or not. For a local European army—which many persons are beginning to look at as inevitable before very long—such material would be particularly adapted; for the "loafing" classes are likely to contain many men who are not desirous to return home, which is evident, indeed, in the case of discharged soldiers, or they would have availed themselves of the opportunity afforded them when leaving the service.

It is to be regretted that not only the vagrant desperate characters among our countrymen bring disgrace upon our name in India, but men and even women in respectable positions cast the reverse of credit upon it. A case in point has just arisen in the Bombay Presidency. An engine-driver in the service of a railway company was served with a writ, which he could not read, as it was in Guzerati, so he resisted its execution, and sadly maltreated the poor bailiff, being assisted in the latter proceeding by a person in female form, who threatened the unfortunate man with a pistol. The incident has given rise to an animated discussion between the Times of India and the Bombay Gazette, who cannot agree whether the engine-driver was committing a disgraceful act, or was merely doing a free-born British thing in resisting the emissary of the law; the controversy extending, moreover, to the delicate question whether his ally, to whom we have so guardedly alluded, is to be considered in the light of a lady or a woman, or whether such names as Jezabel, Amazon, virago, &c., are appropriate to her conduct. The merits of the case, in fact, have been made a party question, which is a great pity; for though it would be too much to say that a man should not be arrested in any language in which he has not "passed," still there was some excuse for the person in question resisting under the circumstances, and resistance, with a large class of our countrymen, is very apt to resolve itself into ruffianism. It cannot be expected that uneducated Europeans will be governed in their intercourse with the natives by an enlightened spirit of statesmanship; and the Government would do well to force the two into collision as little as possible. Had the engine-driver alluded to been saluted by a countryman of kindred temperament, bearing an expression of her Majesty's wishes as to the disposal of his person in unmistakable characters on the usual slip of paper, he would have taken it in all probability like a lamb; but a native and an unreadable authority were too much for his bile, so he broke out as we have seen. Mr. Dickens tells us of a schoolmaster who, when the young gentleman objected to be flogged by the butler, said that if he performed the operation himself it would be more satisfactory to all parties. The conclusion was a sagacious one, and its spirit might be acted upon with advantage in all legal relations between natives and Europeans of so delicate a character as the serving of writs.

Returning for a moment to the main object of our remarks, we may notice that a movement is on foot for the relief of some five hundred unemployed sailors in Calcutta, who are, of course, "loafers" of a very awkward character. It is suggested that the owners of the ships that take them out are bound to bring them home again; but we can scarcely fancy that such a responsibility can attach to an engagement with seamen as a matter of course. But even were such the case, the chances are that the men have had their opportunities of returning, and have not embraced them, as in the case of the discharged soldiers already alluded to. It is not unnecessarily, therefore, that benevolence has stepped in to their aid. It is to be hoped that the local authorities will give their serious attention to the "loafer" evil, which is growing a curse to the country. A system of "refuges" on shore, and free passages from time to time, either home or to Australia, or some place where such persons might calculate upon earning their bread, would be something towards dealing with the difficulty.

A GRIEVANCE.

THE Royal Warrant for the amalgamation of the Indian Army with the Line contains the following provision :—

"24. Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to give to every officer of her Indian armies a Royal Commission under the sign manual, conferring rank and command in her Majesty's army in any part of the world. Nominal rolls of all the officers in the armies of the three Presidencies will be immediately transmitted by the several Governments of India to her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, in order to the preparation of the new commissions."

The Warrant is dated the 16th of January, 1861, and the commissions, in due course of the "immediate" arrangements, are now being issued. We can quite understand that the officers might have waited a little longer for these documents without much inconvenience; but if the formality be necessary, it should at least involve no cost to the recipients. We hear, however, to our surprise, that the ordinary fees are being charged, as if the commissions were issued independently, instead of being in substitution for others hitherto held. The amount is not large, of course, but the charge is wrong in principle, and is, we know, the source of some dissatisfaction. It has possibly been made only as a matter of routine, and in the absence of a special order to the contrary, in which case it is to be hoped that the omission will be supplied. Fees are always vexatious, and are never willingly paid, even for high honours. We think it was the late Admiral Napier who steadily refused to pay for his K.C.B.-ship, and never did pay, perhaps, to the last. It is difficult to say what pressure could be put upon a man in such a case, as the charge is not a legal one, and depriving him of the honour altogether would be an extreme step.

EXTRAORDINARY ABANDONMENT OF A SHIP.

The following has been received at Lloyd's relating to the most extraordinary abandonment of the English ship Sir Ralph Abercrombie, laden with a cargo valued at £50,000, by her officers and crew, and the vessel being afterwards picked up, and taken safely into the Cape of Good Hope :—

"The ship Sir Ralph Abercrombie, of the burden of 703 tons, left Pondicherry on the 24th March last, on a voyage to London, laden with a valuable cargo of cotton, indigo, saltpetre, and hides, and was tight, staunch, and sea-worthy at the time of leaving. The voyage was prosecuted without anything worthy of note occurring till the 18th of May, when in a heavy gale of wind off the Cape of Good Hope the rudder was lost, and the bowsprit sprung at the outer end, but not in a manner to compromise the security of the foremast and foretopmast. The vessel continued tight and seaworthy in all other respects after these accidents. The only thing required to enable her to continue her voyage was a jury rudder; for such a rudder there were sufficient materials on board. The day after the rudder was lost the ship Feronia passed near and offered assistance, which was not accepted, under the impression, apparently, that none was required. The Sir Ralph Abercrombie's head being to the south-west, the commander was anxious to wear her, lest, as he states, he should get out of the track of vessels. To effect this, various experiments were tried without success. On the 20th, the ship Martaban being observed running to the eastward, signals of distress were made on board the Sir Ralph Abercrombie, upon seeing which the Martaban shortened sail, and hove to to leeward of her, and Captain Gilbert ordered his officers and men to abandon the ship and go on board the Martaban, he himself preceding them for the purpose of explaining his intentions to the commander of the Martaban. He was received on board of that vessel without difficulty, and the officers and the remainder of the crew followed in an hour or so, and they were also received on board. The abandonment of the Sir Ralph Abercrombie was thus complete, and not a living soul was left on board. It was made by the order and on the sole authority of her commander. He held no consultation with his officers, he asked no one's opinion or advice, but ordered the vessel to be abandoned because he could not succeed in wearing her with her head to the northward. Neither the first nor the second officer made any remark on this extraordinary proceeding, but did as they were told. They all (by the captain's statement) appeared to be glad to get away, and packed up their things and followed him to the Martaban. The officers admit that there would have been no great risk in remaining on board their vessel, and this was evidently the opinion of Captain Hepburn, of the Martaban, who having remained near the abandoned ship during the night, went on board of her the following morning, and was so well satisfied that she could be taken into port, that he placed his second officer, carpenter, and ten men on board for that purpose. The Mauritius Marine Board, who held an official inquiry into the case, have unanimously concluded that the abandonment of the Sir Ralph Abercrombie was altogether unwarranted by the circumstances, and that 'it is their duty to suspend the certificate of Captain Gilbert for two years from the date of this inquiry. And inasmuch as the chief and second officers admit that whilst in their opinion the Sir Ralph Abercrombie was seaworthy at the time she was abandoned, with the exception of the loss of the rudder, they neither remonstrated nor protested in any way against the abandonment of the valuable vessel and cargo which were entrusted to their charge, as well as that of the commander, the board further decided unanimously that it was their duty to suspend the certificate of the chief mate for one year, and that of the second mate for six months.' The Board of Trade have confirmed the decision of the Mauritius Court of Inquiry, and a special agent has been despatched to the Cape of Good Hope by Lloyd's Salvage Association to arrange with the salvors, the ship and cargo being insured by the underwriters for £50,000."

SUPPOSED LOSS OF THE P. AND O. STEAMER "COREA."—On the second ult. a communication dated Hong Kong, the 11th July, was received relative to the missing steamer Corea (Captain Bird), which it is feared foundered with all on board during a fearful typhoon on the night of the 29th June. She was despatched from the port of Hong Kong on the 29th June, at 6 o'clock in the evening, on the usual east coast voyage to Swatow, Amoy, and Foochow. The storm the steamer encountered and foundered in, burst on the coast with great suddenness, as was gathered from the report of a steamer called the Oriflamme, which left Hong Kong only two hours before the Corea, and narrowly escaped foundering. The managing directors have received telegrams from Hong Kong up to the 31st July. Nothing further was known of the Corea. The following is a list of the officers who were on board: Captain J. W. Bird, commander, Mr. J. M. Gay, chief officer, Mr. J. D. Muir, acting 2nd officer, Mr. Richardson, 3rd officer, Mr. W. Young, 4th officer, Mr. H. Mappleback, head steward, Mr. John Forrest, chief engineer, Mr. R. K. Orr, second engineer, Mr. R. Campbell, fourth engineer, and Mr. A. C. Alford, boiler-maker. Her crew numbered in all 100 hands. The Corea was 600 tons register, and 200-horse power.

TROOPS FOR INDIA.—A draft consisting of 1 colour serjeant, 4 serjeants, 1 bugler, and 148 rank and file of the 90th (Perthshire Volunteers) (Light Infantry), in command of Ensign Lawrence, left Chatham last week for Gravesend, and embarked on board the chartered troop ship Beaumaris Castle, which has been taken up by the hon. Council of India for the conveyance of troops to Kurrachee. Besides the above, were troops from other stations—viz., a draft, consisting of Lieut. W. S. Jervis, and Ensigns Rundall and E. A. Free, with 3 serjeants and 50 rank and file of the 101st Royal Bengal Fusiliers, from Walmer, Captain W. Green, Ensigns A. W. Warrand and S. G. Hulse, with 80 men of all ranks, of the 42nd Highlanders, from Aberdeen; and 51 non-commissioned officers and men, 79th Cameron Highlanders, from Aberdeen; and 26 men of the 95th (the Derbyshire), with Lieut. J. Gabbett. There was also 1 man of the 93rd Highlanders, 1 man of the 51st, 1 man of the 21st Hussars, and Captain J. Lane and wife, 82nd Regiment. The medical officer in charge of the troops on board is Assistant Surgeon T. A. Thornhill, M.B., 7th Queen's Own Hussars.

WAR BETWEEN RUSSIA AND BOKHARA.—MOSCOW, August 25.—Advices of considerable interest have been received here from Bokhara. It appears that after the capture of Tashkend by the Russians, when the leader of the Khokanese was killed, the Emir of Bokhara, a relation of the deceased, captured a Russian caravan valued at two millions of silver roubles. The Russian merchants accompanying the caravan were thrown into prison, and a war was declared against Russia. Upon this the Governor of Orenburg ordered all the Bokharians in the government and town of Orenburg to be imprisoned and their goods to be confiscated. Preparations for war with the Bokharians are being made with the greatest expedition and on a most extensive scale.

DEATH OF CHIEF JUSTICE ADAMS.—We have to record the decease, in his fifty-sixth year, of William Henry Adams, Esq., Chief Justice of Hong Kong, and formerly M.P. for Boston, which melancholy event occurred on Tuesday, the 29th ult., at the residence of his son, Captain Adams, Plas Llyssyn, Carno, Montgomeryshire. The deceased gentleman, who was the son of the late Mr. Thomas Adams, of Normancross, Huntingdonshire, was born in 1809, and while still a boy entered a printing-office as a compositor. He employed his leisure hours in reading for the law; for some years he was connected as law reporter with the establishment of the Morning Herald, and was called to the bar of the Middle Temple in 1843. He was subsequently an auditor of the poor-law accounts, and successfully contested Boston in 1857, which constituency he represented till 1859, when he received the appointment of Attorney-general of Hong Kong. In the previous year he was appointed to the Recordship of Derby.

THE CALCUTTA AND CHINA MAILS.—(SOUTHAMPTON, Friday.)—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Pera arrived here this evening, with the heavy portion of the above mails, ninety-six passengers, and a general cargo, including 2,810 bales raw silk, value £200,000.

THE BOMBAY MAILS.—The P. and O. Co.'s steamer Euxine, Capt. Roskill, with the above mails, arrived at Southampton on Monday, 28th ult. She brought sixty-three passengers, fifteen packages specie, value £4,262, and a general cargo, including 1,992 bales raw silk, value £120,000 sterling.

THE NEW THEORY IN RIFLES.—

Lieutenant James Forsyth, in his excellent work, "The Sporting Rifle, &c.," first promulgated the startling theory that Rifles could be so constructed as to lessen the elevation by increasing the charge of powder. This theory, which the Advertiser has proven to be correct, alters the whole position of Rifles in favour of the sportsman. Formerly, with a high trajectory, the bullet would have hit a tiger in a vital part at 100 yards, would pass over his back at 25 or 50 yards. By the new system, as elaborated and perfected in DOUGALL'S LOCKFAST BREECHLOADERS, there is a point-blank range to 150 yards, combined with a velocity and smashing power hitherto unknown. (See Times, 11th October, 1864.) No other Rifle possesses the same advantages.

SARSAPARILLA.

WILKINSON'S (late BRIDGE'S)

ESSENCE OF FLUID EXTRACT OF RED JAMAICA SARSAPARILLA is appreciated for its Purity, and marked superiority, daily prescribed by the Faculty for Impurities of the Blood, Affections of the Liver, Constitutional Debility, Attenuation of Body, as an Alterative Medicine at the Changes of the Seasons, and for freeing the system from the effects of Mercury.

In India and the Colonies it is extensively used to prevent taking complaints incident to Tropical Climates, and as a renovator of the system after Sickness inviolable.

"A superior preparation, that may always be relied on."—Sir Asley Cooper.

"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.

"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medical Review.

"Laterly, in consequence of much debility, &c., subsequent to Cholera, I have freely used 'Bridge's Sarsaparilla' myself, with complete benefit and success."—J. POTT, F.R.C.S.

Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints. One pint is equal to eight pints of the ordinary preparations.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against cheap preparations of Sarsaparilla, which, instead of being what they profess, are nothing but a decoction of common herbs, sweetened with molasses, and flavoured with American Winter Green. The genuine has "Thos. Wilkinson (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London," engraved on each bottle.

AGREEABLE SIDLITZ POWDER in one bottle, protected by a case with measure and spoon included. This preparation is highly recommended, not only as a Mild Aperient, but to allay Fever, Thirst, &c.

AROMATIC TINCTURE of QUINODINE for the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria. No person exposed to the influence of or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for if taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria. Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by Thos. Wilkinson (late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

MRS. JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR TEETH.

This invaluable remedy has preserved hundreds of children from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as elixirs, tending to produce the teeth with ease; and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery where there are young children; for, if a child wakes in the night with pains in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and copying parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bills, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle.

Sold by all chemists and medicine vendors.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS,

Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided: a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price, 1s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d. JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

BRAGG'S CHARCOAL BISCUITS afford

speedy relief in case of bile, acidity, indigestion, heartburn, flatulency, impure breath, and children suffering from worms; are an excellent preventive for sea sickness, are made of the purest vegetable carbon, and are recommended by the most eminent of the Faculty.—See Dr. Hassall's Report.

Sold only in tins, 1s., 2s., 4s., and 8s. each, by J. L. BRAGG, Sole Maker, 2, Wigmore-street, Cavendish-square. Also the Pure Carbon, in bottles, 2s. and 4s. each.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

In bad legs, ulcers, scrofulous sores, and glandular swellings, this Ointment operates very gently but very surely, and with a rapidity that resembles magic. It should be rubbed into the parts affected after they have been fomented with lukewarm water. The purifying and curative powers of this marvellous unguent have never been disputed by any one who has given it a fair trial. It contains not a particle of any substance of a noxious nature, nor is there a case on record in which it has done the slightest harm, while there are authentic reports of innumerable cures effected by it in all countries. It is as mild in its action as it is powerful and beneficial in its effects.

EXPANDING SADDLE.GIBSON AND COMPANY

Respectfully invite the attention of MILITARY MEN, EQUESTRIANS, and OWNERS OF HORSES, to their Newly-Invented EXPANDING SADDLE, which admits of ready adjustment to the size of any horse, creating a secure and easy seat without the slightest inconvenience to either horse or rider. The principle of EXPANSION and CONTRACTION comprises a simple arrangement of mechanism within the saddle so perfect, that by merely turning a screw the pad is proportioned to the size and form of the animal, on which it firmly rests with a uniform pressure, and is securely retained in its position by means of an ordinary girth.

This invention has obtained the approval and distinguished patronage of HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, and from the very favourable opinions expressed by competent judges, and all who have had an opportunity of testing its merits, there is no doubt it will come into general use; indeed, its success is already established.

ANILINE DYES.—"I shall commence my observations on dyeing, by referring especially to the remarkable and beautiful colours derived from coal tar, the introduction of which into this art may be said to constitute the chief distinction, as far as dyeing is concerned, between the present and the former Exhibition, creating, in fact, a new era in the tinctorial art. Coal tar colours deserve attention for their power, as well as for the facility with which they may be applied, for one grain will deeply tint half a gallon of water, and little or no skill is required for their application."—Vide Report by Grace Calvert, Esq., F.R.S., Ph.D., Honorary Professor of Chemistry.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE have received our usual files of papers from Calcutta to the 8th of August, Madras to the 14th, and Ceylon to the 17th of that month.

There was very little stirring at the Presidency, where the newspapers were faint for want of nourishment. A railway accident at Cawnpore was really welcomed as a relief, though it is a rather serious affair, several persons having lost their lives. It occurred through the negligence of a native pointsman, who, seeing what he had done, did not wait to make any explanations, but made good his retreat, and has not since been heard of. It appears that the systems of pointsmen in the two divisions of the East India line are widely different. In the Lower division the jemadar system prevails, by which a jemadar or sergeant of pointsmen is responsible for seeing the men properly at their posts, and properly alive to the work they have to perform. In the Upper division the system is more individual, but it does not seem to work well. It would be a very decided improvement on the present state of things if the line could be worked under one uniform system throughout. Strange to say, another accident occurred at Cawnpore in the course of the same day: a native managed to get between the buffers of two carriages he had to couple, and was of course smashed.

There are loud complaints in Calcutta of the arrangements which have exposed our troops to so much sickness in the Bhootan Doorgs. The 11th N.I., which is stationed at Putla Kowah, is said to be a regiment only in name, and it is declared by the Hurkaru that its condition ought to arouse as much indignation as the carelessness which led to the "Fatal March from Mhow." The health of the troops at Dalimkote and Buxa is much better—a proof, it is considered, of the mistake made by Government in confining their territorial claims to the deadly plains at the foot of the hills. Meanwhile the Bhootas have by no means been idle. Not content with a civil war and a foreign invasion, they have chosen the present as a proper opportunity for asserting their independence of Thibet, having subjected the envoy from that power, when he applied for tribute, to the same kind of treatment with which they visited Mr. Eden—concluding their series of insults by turning him out of the country.

Preparations for the new expedition into Bhootan were proceeding vigorously. Everything is said to be arranged except the choice of a commanding officer. The force, of which an account will be found elsewhere, is considered larger than is necessary; but if it be properly taken care of the fault is on the right side.

The Lieutenant-Governor was still away, and was last heard of at Dacca. The proposal to place the management of the port of Calcutta in the hands of a River Trust has not met with his approval. He considers that such a measure would be both impolitic and retrograde; and it appears probable that, if created at all, the functions of the Trust will be confined to the construction and management of the long talked-of wharves and jetties.

The reply of the Government to the presentment of the special jury, representing the utter inefficiency of that institution as a substitute for the grand jury, has also been of an unfavourable character. "It is not such," says the Englishman, "as to hold out much hope of a remedy being applied in the absence of a strong pressure from without, and it is marked, even in an unusual degree, by that curtness and insolence which have rendered the administration of the present Viceroy so deservedly unpopular."

The Eastern Bengal Railway Company, we hear from the same authority, have applied to Government to allow salt to be stored, in bond, at Kooshtea. The importance of the concession sought for, both to the interests of the railway company and to the shippers forwarding goods by their line, the railway company say, is daily brought more prominently to their notice. They have also represented that the development of the goods traffic from Kooshtea is very seriously retarded, from the difficulty now experienced in securing return cargoes for boats landing merchandise at that place; and they find that shippers, rather than allow their boats to return empty, as they now most frequently do, prefer sending their goods to Calcutta direct by water, by which they insure return freight. The concession applied for, if granted, will, in a great measure, obviate this, and not only increase the downward goods traffic, but lead to a much greater increase in the upward traffic, and thereby, the company are of opinion, increase the revenue, without causing a corresponding increase in the working expenses, as the company's up and down goods traffic does not balance, and waggons are run up empty to bring down goods. The railway company attach so much importance to this subject that they are willing to make such arrangements as will prevent loss by pilage, &c., while the salt is in course of transit from the Government godowns to their terminus, and thence to Kooshtea. The company will also, with the sanction of Government, erect at Kooshtea such godowns for storing the salt as will prevent the possibility of loss to the Government.

The abundance of unemployed capital, noticed in the last report, continues to be the most marked feature of the Money Market. On the 3rd of August the Directors of the Bank of Bengal reduced the rates of interest and discount one per cent. all round. The immediate effect was a rise of fully one-half per cent. on all Government Securities. In sterling exchange there had been very little done since last report. As bearing on future financial prospects, it is noticed that the price of opium has taken a start of 200 rupees a chest, the latest quotation being 1,050 rupees, with an upward tendency.

The most important news from Madras is that a telegram had been received from Sir Charles Wood, stating that the adoption of an heir by the Rajah of Mysore would not be recognised by the British Government. The Rajah, it seems, intends to appeal, so we are likely to hear more on the subject.

From Ceylon the most notable fact is a petition to her Majesty from the Ceylon League, praying for such a modification of the Council as shall give its non-official members control over the Government measures of finance.

The mail is a day later than usual from Alexandria, which, we are informed; has been caused by a new coaling arrangement at Malta, to avoid the quarantine. The coaling takes longer, but time is saved in the long run.

The next arrival from India will be the Bombay mail, which may be expected in London on the 23rd of this month.

BENGAL.

MORTALITY AMONG THE TROOPS IN BHOOTAN.

We have repeatedly drawn the attention of the Government to the health of the troops in the Terai, and have just as repeatedly shown that it was a huge mistake to hold the fever infested villages of this jungle tract, in order to keep the Bhootas from penetrating into the plains. The Bhootas know the Terai better than we do, and dread it far more, and would not be likely to venture into its recesses during the rains, were there never a red coat in all its length and breadth. We gain absolutely nothing by holding the Terai, except, perhaps, a little more reputation for being singular, and, beyond all human calculation, obstinate and obtuse. We should have retired the troops within the British borders, leaving the old frontier to be defended by the police, or have advanced them so as to have placed our camels on the hills, where the men would have had a chance of keeping their health. But let us see now what we have lost. At Putla Kowa the 11th Regiment is actually prostrated. The men are sick by hundreds, and it has lost nearly all its officers, some having died, some having gone on sick leave, and one having been killed in action. The following will, we think, show that the 11th Regiment N. I. ought at least to be moved to the rear, and that Putla Kowa should be abandoned until the next cold weather.

Officers of the 11th N.I., according to the Quarterly Army List, corrected to Jan. 1st.

Lieutenant colonel E. D. Watson, sick; gone to the Neilgherries.

Captain F. J. Ripley, sick; gone to Mussoorie.

Lieutenant C. M. Bushby, sick with fever, but with the regiment.

Lieutenant C. G. Millett, killed in action.

Lieutenant E. Knatchbull, dead.

Lieutenant J. E. Kennedy, dead.

Lieutenant F. A. Crohan, sick, on leave.

Lieutenant A. J. Stead, sick, on leave.

Surgeon major H. B. Hinton, sick leave to Australia.

To the above we must add the following from the Quarterly Army List, corrected up to 1st July:—

Major R. C. Whiting, at Sabathoo, under orders to join.

Lieutenant T. R. Taylor, dead.

Assistant surgeon F. F. Farncombe, in charge.

In addition to the above, the following officers have been ordered off to join the regiment:—Major Baily, Captain Dyas, Lieutenant Hennessy.

If joking were permitted on such a subject, we might remark on the folly of the six-officers-per-regiment idea of the India Office, as exemplified in this case. The matter is, however, too serious. This regiment has not for many months been called upon to do more than hold a miserable village, or hamlet, in the midst of a jungle, and yet the casualties in its ranks have been such as in action would have served to mark a defence desperate enough to have turned the current of victory. To keep the regiment where it is is simply to destroy it, and to convert an error into something worse. There has been enough of error and mismanagement, and reckless contempt for the teachings of experience in this miserable Bhootan business, without the Government being guilty of the hideous folly of consigning some of our best and bravest native regiments—the 11th, when formerly the 70th, was the only regiment that volunteered for service in China—to certain death, in the midst of jungles from which Bhootas and Bengalis alike fly in terror during the rains. If we cannot leave the few wretched creatures who inhabit Putla Kowa behind, let them accompany the troops on their retreat towards health.

What effect is this mortality in the troops stationed in the Dooras likely to have on the regiments ordered to Bhootan, and what effect upon the recruiting for the Native Army? If the Government do its duty it will either give up the Terai, or annex enough of Bhootan to save the army from losses affecting its morale, far more keenly than a dozen sanguinary defeats.—Hurkaru.

THE LAST OF CIVILIAN FINANCIERS.

Sir John Lawrence, we fear, has lost the best chance he will ever have of a peerage. The same services which led to his selection as Viceroy of the Empire he had done so much to save ought to have been sufficient to send him back to India as a peer. Her Majesty's advisers, unwisely we think for the empire, postponed that honour till his return after a successful administration and the accumulation of a fortune wherewith to found a family. But the time is past when great wars, such as those which changed the Earl of Mornington into the Marquis Wellesley, and the Earl of Moira into the Marquis of Hastings, are possible in India. Now-a-days there are only little wars like that in Bhootan, and they seem to cover their authors and managers with disgrace. Still less is there room for the splendid annexation of provinces, such as made the Earl of Dalhousie a Marquis of the United Kingdom. There remain for a civilian Governor-General only such opportunities as converted Mr. Shore, his solitary civilian predecessor since Lord Cornwallis, into Lord Teignmouth. The official papers on the Trevelyan Budget lead us to the certain conclusion that, had Sir John Lawrence acted on his prerogative as we have more than once hinted, and rejected the counsel and the Budget alike of the colleagues who outvoted him, His Excellency would have been sure of his peerage. Instead of this the Viceroy, who is in theory, and to some extent in fact, absolute dictator over the largest dependency on earth, was content with these words:—"If my honourable colleagues will neither aid me in the necessary measures for continuing the income-tax, nor will consent to any partial substitution of other taxes, I have no course but to give way; but I hereby place on record my protest against this policy." That John Lawrence, the saviour of India, the trusted Lieutenant of Dalhousie, the firm, rocky, obstinate Cromwellian man, should write such a sentence, when his colleagues were Bengal civilians like Sir C. Trevelyan, and Messrs. Harington and Grey, is a marvel to us. Can the dread of responsibility work such a change in such a character? Is a seat for a short time in the Indian Council, as a subordinate of Sir C. Wood and the colleague of the oldest and most backward of Old Indians, so mentally demoralising?

The minute of which this weak confession forms the concluding sentence, is one of the ablest state papers ever signed by a Governor-general. Like his impromptu speech in the Legislature, it is clear, full of common sense, shrewd, and unanswerable. It seems inferior to the best of the minutes of James Wilson on financial subjects, only because it uses simple phrases instead of sonorous scientific terms. Sir C. Trevelyan, it will be remembered, made his financial statement on Saturday, 1st April, the morning after Mr. Massey landed. Forty-eight hours before, as we stated at the time, or on Thursday, March 30, Sir John Lawrence wrote his protest. We believe we are correct in stating that the day before that, on Wednesday, at the ordinary meeting of the Executive Council, it was agreed to retain the income-tax. The accounts then showed a heavy deficit, and so little was even Sir C. Trevelyan inclined to raise the question of abolishing it, that he had caused the appointment of Messrs. Grote, Muir, Anderson, G. N. Taylor, and Cust, as a committee to report on the best mode of renewing the assessments. That is, on Wednesday there is a serious deficit and the income-tax is to be continued; on Thursday the deficit not only disappears but the income-tax is abolished, and there is a surplus even without any new taxation. This was effected, as we showed at the time, by juggling with the English loan of £1,200,000, and reducing the normal expenditure on public works. Sir John Lawrence might well express disbelief in a Budget which in twenty-four hours was converted from deficit to surplus by the abolition of more than a million of taxation. He might well refuse to be responsible for the government of the country, with such a broken reed to lean on, when its author was far away. We admire him when he says—"It has been my earnest desire, ever since the income-tax was established, that I might see the day when it could be fairly given up; and of course the circumstance that it would conduce to the credit of my administration, if it be now allowed to lapse, has not diminished this wish." But after a self-denial from which his vain adviser, Sir C. Trevelyan, might well have learned a lesson, he neither refused to pass the Budget, nor to postpone it till Mr. Massey had studied the question, or Sir C. Wood had been consulted. In a weak moment he was satisfied with a protest and a compromise. Sir C. Trevelyan offered him both an increase of the salt-tax, and the vetoed export duties. "I myself," says the swelling financial member, "suggested taxes, half of them being the export duties which have actually been imposed, and the other half an additional duty of two annas a maund on salt." Sir John Lawrence spared the poor, and, like David, when he was offered a choice of punishments, accepted that which to the inexperienced mind seemed likely to do the least harm. His conduct in the Legislature was only less noble than his self-denial in the matter of the income-tax, for when he had suffered himself to be outvoted by Sir C. Trevelyan and Messrs. Harington and Grey, he had no alternative but to defend the wretched bantling fathered upon him by the weakest financial trio that ever led an administration into disgrace. If he had only put them aside!

The deed was done, and on 3rd April, the Monday after the Budget, like the remorseful debauchee, Sir C. Trevelyan tried to justify his conduct in a minute which ends by declaring that, dangerously low as the cash balances were, "according to the arrangements that have been made they will be sufficient with proper management." The selfish egotism of this old civilian is fortunately without a parallel in public life. Ten days after that, when the author of all the mischief had left India for ever, his supporters, Messrs. Harington and Grey, proceeded to vindicate their conduct. None of them foresaw the storm that was brewing. The unanimous vote of public opinion, the deputation of the Chamber of Commerce did not open their eyes till all the anticipations of the public here were more than realised by a telegram announcing that the loan, the export duties, and practically the whole Budget therefore had been disallowed. It is slaying the slain to meet the fallacies of the Harington and Grey minute about the income-tax. Even had the pledge as to its abolition been as absolute as these advisers supposed, no Government can bind its successors on a question of income and expenditure, and Government is only the representative of the public, or the public dealing with itself. But the pledge was conditional. All the passages quoted from the speeches of Messrs. Wilson and Laing show this. In answer to the cry against the tax at the second reading of the Bill, Mr. Wilson said, "The limit of the Bill in its duration is five years, and in its amount of tax 2 and 4 per cent., and, as far as human foresight can predict, the Government feels assured that these limits will not be extended." Again, Mr. Laing said, "It is, of course, impossible to give any absolute pledge as to what may occur three years hence. Necessity knows no law, and unforeseen events may upset all calculations." And even when urging the importance of keeping this conditional promise, Mr. Laing distinctly refused to "pledge the Government as to what may or may not be possible three years hence." If the pledge were absolute Government ought to have kept to Mr. Wilson's Act, which it violated by reducing the amount of the tax. It struck off no less than two-thirds of all the tax-payers, and refrained from levying the licence-tax—surely sufficient evidence of an intention to redeem the pledge, when the conditions seemed likely to be fulfilled. But the fallacy running through the minutes of Sir C. Trevelyan and his supporters is this—the question is not as to the abolition of the income-tax, but as to the substitution of another and heavier tax for it. Can human silliness go a greater length than this?—"if new exigencies arise, we shall find it easier to meet them, either by the reimposition of the income-tax, or in some other way." The natives will call this swindling, and justly. So far from having kept what doctrinaires call "faith" with them, we try to throw dust in their eyes. This is civilian policy all over. We keep a promise to the ear and we break it to the sense. This is exactly the course of the East India Company in reference to Christianity. The honest John Lawrence, like every other honourable Englishman, would rather boldly say to the tax-payers—"we cannot go on without the income-tax; if it is removed a heavier will be imposed; we will take it off as soon as we can."

Sir Charles Wood's reproof to the Government of India is much calmer and graver than we should have expected from so flippant a Secretary of State. It could not well be otherwise, for the chief offender has left India, and the Viceroy protested against his policy. As to the future, the announcement we made some weeks ago is confirmed. If necessary, as it certainly will be, there will be a new direct taxation next April; and the deficit, estimated by Sir C. Wood at £665,690, will be met by a reduction in the expenditure on the new transport service, and a diminution of the drafts on India. As we read again Sir John Lawrence's noble minute we feel angry that he failed, from a want of the very virtue which he was supposed to possess in extreme, to win his peerage. And we are sure that all who peruse the weakest financial papers we have read since Mr. C. H. Lushington bade farewell to a public which failed to appreciate him, will come to the conclusion that, for a long time, if not for ever, we have seen the last of civilian financiers. The conversion of the five per cents., the export duties, and the abolition of the income-tax only to reimpose it, are surely sufficient for one decade. In succeeding such financiers Mr. Massey is as fortunate as Mr. Wilson was.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THINGS WRONG AT LUCKNOW.—A letter in the Bombay Gazette says:—"Lieutenant Case, an assistant commissioner of some two or three years standing, has just been dismissed from the commission by order of the Governor General. His offence consisted in his having signed a certificate for a full month's pay, when he was only entitled to pay for a few days, as officer in charge of the Treasury at Fyzabad. It was quite a thoughtless thing on his part, having been led into the error by his clerk. However, his case is a warning for others. Another officer, Mr. St. Clare Williams, and extra assistant commissioner, is in some difficulties, owing to his having bought land and made advances to the zamindars in his district. I should have thought his explanation of the matter quite satisfactory, but the Chief Commissioner thought otherwise, and has recommended his removal from the commission, which in his case, being an uncovenanted, means dismissal from the service. A third officer, also an extra assistant commissioner, is also in some difficulties, owing to his wife having been engaged with her mother in some improper transactions in connection with the case of the police inspector Devine, who has been committed to the High Court for trial. A fourth officer, a district superintendent of police, is also said to be mixed up in some money matters, which are likely to cost him his appointment. Besides the knaves, we have two or three arrant fools in the commission, who are likely to be sent to their whereabouts, if no more favourable report than the last in this year made by the Chief Commissioner in their character and qualifications."

CURIOSITIES OF CIVILIAN LIFE.—The Mosses has a capital article on the office hours of civilians. I have a vivid recollection of how civilians a few years ago employed themselves during office-hours in Calcutta. When there was a rage for chess, the Hon. Mr. Bethune frequented the secretariat offices to play games with the secretaries. Mr. Halliday always had a pile of French novels at his elbow. How Mr. H. Torrens employed himself may be guessed from his employing writers in copying music for him, and charging for the time so occupied in the contingent bill. Mr. C. Tucker, when confined to his house for weeks by the Government, got a Mr. Hawkins to sign his papers for him; and when he could no longer carry out that plan, took a month's leave on private affairs, to avoid the deduction of pay he would have incurred by taking sick leave. Mr. Dampier, Superintendent of Police, would leave behind him with his chère amie envelopes directed to himself and franked by himself. Sir W. H. Macnaghten's works on Hindoo and Mahomedan law were the prints of office-hours. Mr. P. Taylor used to be so punctual in attending the Sudder Court at two o'clock as to excite Mr. Fly Catcher Smith to write a minute on the subject; but his attendance was of so little use that all the translations he made of the five-time Act had to be retranslated. Mr. Abercrombie Dick, when Judge of that Court, never attended before two o'clock, except when obliged to attend earlier. I do not think there is much of this official immorality now amongst public officers, but there is still a great deal of laxity in attending office at proper hours, and in the performance of their duties whilst there. I, however, know of a judge who reached his office at five in the evening, and on the strength of that minute's attendance drew his pay for the day. The next day, and for several days following, he was unable to attend from the effects of fatigue, but his salary ran on regularly enough.—Correspondent of Bombay Gazette.

MOVEMENT AMONG THE TALOOKDARS.—A Lucknow correspondent of the Bombay Gazette says:—"The talookdars are assembling at Lucknow from all parts of Oude. There are to be all sorts of meetings, and all sorts of propositions are to be laid before them. The chief among them is, I believe, the settlement of the question regarding certain mortgaged and other villages, which some of the talookdars have improperly had included in their sunnuds. With regard to the mortgaged villages so appropriated, the talookdars have been advised not to plead the sunnud in bar to the application for redemption made by the mortgagors; and with regard to those which they otherwise usurped, it has been suggested to them that they should satisfy the former proprietors of such villages by giving them under-proprietory rights in order that these cases—about 800 in number—may not come to the notice of his Excellency the Viceroy." I am not in a position to say what will be the course generally adopted by the talookdars, but they have the assurance of the secretary of their association that, if they do not do as they have been bidden by himself and the Chief Commissioner, the Governor-General, who is represented as 'much dissatisfied with the talookdaree settlement,' will, if he finds the sunnud advanced as a pretext for non-interference, 'annul that settlement, and cancel all the sunnuds.' This talookdaree settlement is about as pretty a kettle of fish as was ever known. I have been trying these last six years to get at all the facts relating to it; but confess that the development of one fact stranger than another still continues to surprise me daily. I pity Sir John Lawrence and others whom duty compels to make themselves acquainted with the system in all its mysterious and mystifying ramifications: my candid belief is that, under Mr. Wingfield's chief commissionership, their ignorance on the subject will never be enlightened more than it is now. It is, however, now quite settled that Mr. Wingfield retires in January next."

THE NEW FORCE FOR BHOOTAN.—The force (two columns) ordered to be got in readiness for the contemplated advance into Bhootan proper next cold season will consist of two batteries of Artillery, two companies of Sappers and Miners, two wings British Infantry, six regiments of Native Infantry, two Coolie corps of 500 men each. Each battery, regiment, and detachment will have its baggage carried by mules, or yaboos, which may either be purchased by the commanding officer of the corps or detachment, or furnished by the commissariat. These mules or yaboos and their drivers will be completely under the control and orders of the commanding officer of the corps to which they may be attached, and he will be responsible for them in all respects, on the same way as the commanding officer of a cavalry regiment is for the horses of that regiment. One driver will be allowed to each two mules or yaboos, and as it is advisable that the drivers should be organised, arrangements will be made for drilling those belonging to each corps before the starting of the columns. The force will move without tents, but an hospital paul will be allowed for every 200 combatants, and each soldier will carry an extra blanket. No elephants will accompany the force; but each man will carry two days' dry provisions and sixty rounds of ammunition; 140 spare rounds per man being carried by the mules. Live stock will be driven with the force. The number of followers to accompany the column will be strictly limited. One servant will be allowed to every officer, and only two syces for all the mounted officers of each corps. The followers to each European or Native corps, including cooks, bheestees, &c., &c., &c., must not exceed 7 per cent. of the strength of the corps.—Hurkaru.

SERVICE GOSSIP.—The following is from the Bombay Gazette:—"Simla Reading-rooms, July 20.—The Punjab (Assistant-commissioner staff especially) officials seem to enjoy a chronic state of grumbling. They are craving for promotion. Now, we have not heard a word of grumbling from Oulh at the sudden introduction of Mr. Davies into that province. That appointment was an immediate step to the whole Punjab; but the removal on that score was not looked upon as a seniority benefit. Mr. Cust's appointment may be considered a permanent removal, so was Mr. R. Egerton's; whence, then, these howls about promotion? The Punjab is liable to periodic reliefs, a measure necessary to give officers a chance of the pay and emoluments they would succeed to as a matter of course in another province. Hence an immense Punjabee immigration into Oulh, of which Colonel Abbett, Messrs. G. Couper, Forbes, Denison, Martin, and numerous others can be mentioned. So far from Sir John Lawrence being charged with Punjabeeism, the Punjabees might have complained of the introduction of outsiders such as Messrs. Roberts and Cust, N.W.P. officers. We could enumerate twenty more. But while the old cuckoo cry of Punjabeeism goes the round, can anybody point to a bad appointment, and really is there anything which has been given away that a N.W.P. man of rank would accept? Colonel Lawrence is a valuable man to have in Nepal, if only as a brother of the Viceroy; and at this moment, with troubles in Bhootan, the intimacy of communication cannot be otherwise than very deterrent to the Knight of the Bath in those regions. No one would exchange Simla on Rs. 1,700 a month with the Viceroy for his brother, for the officiating allowances of comfortless and solitary Catmandoo; yet no outsider was brought into the Simla paradise. Sir John wouldn't hear of Sir Bartle Frere's resigning, and I believe is the author of Brigadier Hodgson to the command at Ceylon. An old ally of the Punjab Sir Bartle, doubtless, when Chief Commissioner in Scinde, though oftentimes opposed in policy; and an old friend Hodgson, too, also one of the most 'superb' soldiers and athletes that ever 'funked' the borderers of the Punjab with his travels. Depend upon it Hodgson will have a great command in India. He is too close to sit in 'beautiful Lanka' and be idle. He should be major-general commanding at Peshawar as soon as the present eminent officer's time is up."

OVERLAND POSTAGE.—The Englishman says:—"With irrepressible indignation do we regard the atrocious proposal, which we find has been mooted in Parliament, of increasing the postage on our Overland letters by some sixty per cent., on the plea of recouping the Post Office for the expense which may be incurred by despatching four extra mails per annum. Even Sir Peter Teazle thought it unreasonable that his pretty wife should require him to pay for happening to be a good humour, and with much the same feeling may the public ask if its good nature must always thus be imposed upon by the men in office. May not Indian society indulge the amiable weakness of bestowing its tediousness on friends at home, in more frequent and more regular epistolary communications, without submitting to the enhancement of an already exorbitant tax? The cold-blooded proposal to add sixpence to the tenpence we have now to pay for a letter via Marseilles, came, we admit, with peculiar fitness from that particularly obnoxious specimen of the tapeworm genus, Mr. Frederick Peel; but when he makes light of the grievance which he proposes to impose, and professes to believe that the additional burthen will be cheerfully borne by all concerned, we feel ourselves warranted in assuring him that all concerned never contemplated the possibility of so gross an attempt at imposition. The object in view was not to have more frequent communication with England, though, to some slight extent, this would be an effect of the measure, which, pro tanto, would afford an additional recommendation; but it was to secure precision and certainty in the despatch of the mails, which the present absurd arrangements render impossible."

RAILWAY ACCIDENT AT CAWNPORE.—A fearful accident is reported to us as having occurred on the East India line on Tuesday night in the neighbourhood of Cawnpore. A passenger down train from Delhi came, as we are informed, into collision with the Calcutta up train, also containing passengers, with such violence that the engines of both trains and nine carriages were totally destroyed. The drivers of the trains both escaped, it appears, with slight injuries, but no less than two Europeans and ten natives are reported to us as having been killed upon the spot, a great number of minor casualties being inflicted on the remaining passengers.

CENTRAL PROVINCES.—We find that a road cess of one per cent. on the gross rental, or two per cent. on the Government Jumma is to be levied on the revision of the settlement which is now in progress in the Central Provinces.

BARBAROUS PRACTICES OF HILL TRIBES.—The Hurkaru says:—"We are glad to learn that the people in the Cossyah and Jynteah Hills are gradually beginning to think as other people do, and have accordingly abandoned some of their barbarous practices. Their partiality for monkeys and jackals, however, has proved too strong for the influences which the excellent Deputy Commissioner of that district, Major Bivar, has up to this time brought to bear upon them; and their worship of those interesting and sagacious animals is accordingly as earnest and profound as ever. But it is satisfactory to observe that the Government has succeeded by an application of the argumentum ad hominem in putting a stop to the atrocious practice, once so prevalent, of sacrificing human beings at the shrine of the Jynteah Kalee. The Rajah of that ilk possesses a sister it appears, who, like other mortals, experiences a very natural gratification in the indulgence of her amiable weaknesses, but it unfortunately happens that some of these are to European eyes of a strongly sanguinary character, and unpleasantly conducive to the sudden and violent extinction of her fellow creatures lives. She took it into her head not long ago to present one of these said fellow creatures as a savoury offering to the Jynteah Kalee, and incontinently roasted him for the purpose; in consequence of which her ill-starred brother woke one fine morning and found himself minus his territories. The hint thus summarily administered has been taken by the other dusky chiefs of those "green hills," and so the practice has, as young Bengal would say, "fallen into desuetude." The Commissioner of Assam has been instructed to proceed to the district and report on the required reforms there."

SMALL CAUSE COURTS IN BENGAL.—The twenty-seven Small Cause Courts established in the Bengal Division have realized a sum in stamps, during the year 1864-65, amounting to Rs. 1,87,542; and the fees realized in the Courts of the Small Cause Court Judges sitting as Principal Sudder Amcens are Rs. 1,86,255. The expenditure of the year on account of the Judges' salary, and their establishments, is Rs. 3,02,866. This leaves a saving of Rs. 70,931 to Government. But if the receipt of the fees of the Small Cause Court Judges alone be compared with their establishment costs, &c., there is a deficiency of Rs. 1,26,830. The Small Cause Courts of the suburbs of Calcutta and Jenidah, in Jessore, after having paid the Judges' salary, &c., have left a surplus of Rs. 8,910. This shows that the establishment of Small Cause Courts in the Bengal Presidency has not worked well.

NEW POLICE IN THE GARROW HILLS.—The Englishman says:—"The Lieutenant-governor has approved and sanctioned the arrangements proposed by Capthin Morton, deputy commissioner of Gawalparah, for the introduction of a rough system of police into the Garrow hills. These arrangements embrace the creation of the new office of police zimmaradar, with a limited civil and criminal jurisdiction, to be held by Garrow chiefs. The lushkars of small contiguous villages are to be invited to appoint one of their number for the purpose. These zimmaradars will be remunerated on a moderate fixed scale for the performance of their police functions; and the total expenditure it is thus proposed to incur is Rs. 1,405 per annum. Each zimmaradar is to be furnished with an amulnamah, engrossed upon gilt-edged paper, and an emblazoned baton of office; and they will be invested by the deputy commissioner in person, accompanied by a small detachment as escort. The Garrow chiefs will be invited to attend the ceremony, and feasted at the expense of Government. It has also been determined to invest the Garrow zimmaradars with the same powers to try trivial offences as are exercised by the Jynteah dolloyes."

LIEUT.-COL. W. A. A. THOMSON, who had been long ailing, and who had obtained leave of absence to Europe, died, we regret to say, at the residence of Mr. E. C. Bayley, C.S., Calcutta, on the 3rd of August. Col. Thomson was a brave and distinguished cavalry officer, and was commandant of the Body Guard to Lord Canning. He succeeded Col. Colin Mackenzie as agent to the Governor-General at Moorshedabad early in 1862. He was buried at the Cemetery in the Circular Road with military honours. His remains were followed to their last resting place by a very large circle of friends, to whom his singularly winning manners in private life had endeared him.

FROM THE REPORT ON THE TRADE, DURING THE LAST COLD SEASON, WITH SIKKIM, THIBET, BHOTAN, AND NEPAL, we gather the following information:—Commodious sheds have been erected by the Municipality of Lebong for the accommodation of the foreign trader. The imports of last year—consisting principally of horses, mules, yaks' tails, blankets, and light cloths—considerably exceeded those of previous years, and the accommodation provided afforded great satisfaction. The local demand, however, is very trifling, and the difficulties of transport from Darjeeling, downwards, to the plains of Bengal are so great that there is little encouragement to capitalists to purchase. A large quantity of goods, consequently, remained last year at Darjeeling unsold, while some were sold at a sacrifice. The only remedy for this is improvement of the means of communication with Bengal, and the mode in which this can be brought about most effectually is by the extension of the railway to the banks of the Teesta. This accomplished, Darjeeling would become the centre of a large and increasing traffic, and to the articles at present imported would probably be added fine wool from Thibet, rice, fruit, and copper from Sikkim, and cattle from Nepal. In exchange for these there is a considerable demand for English cloths, printed calicoes, metal wares, tobacco, and sugar. Last season coarse sugar and tobacco to the value of Rs. 15,000 were purchased by the traders of the above-named States.

MILITARY ITEMS.—The Secretary of State has ruled that unattached officers of the Indian service must serve five years as ensign before they can be promoted to the rank of lieutenant, and that a further period of service of seven years must elapse before the rank of captain can be obtained. Distinguished service in the field will, however, give promotion at once. It is added that general officers and others who may have to submit the claims of unattached officers for promotion will be careful to recommend none but officers who have performed approved ordinary service for the periods specified.—Sir W. Mansfield has directed that the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd batteries 17th Brigade Royal Artillery, now in the Madras Presidency, be held in readiness to proceed to England in the course of the next few months.—We hear that Fyzabad, in Oude, has been abandoned as a military station.—Since the late affair at Dewangari, several men of the 43rd N.I., now stationed at Pultakoh, in the Bhootan Doars, have been discharged.—We have excellent reasons for believing that there is no intention, at least at present, of altering the system of organisation of the army. On the other hand, it is very probable that in a short time an order will be issued allowing an extra doing duty officer to each regiment. Our readers will now see the arriere pensee which dictated the recent instructions to commanding officers to recommend junior officers to study and pass the prescribed lists as speedily as possible. Agreeably to instructions received from headquarters, Major-gen. Showers has made over the command of the garrison of Fort William, and of the outposts at Allipore and Dum-Dum, to Colonel Herbert, C.B., commanding H.M.'s 54th Foot. While thus employed, or until the arrival of Brigadier Errington, Colonel Herbert vacates the command of his regiment, which now devolves upon Captain F. G. C. Probart. Colonel Herbert's acting appointment is to have effect from the 1st inst. We regret to hear that Brigadier Errington is obliged to go to the hills on account of ill-health, and will not be able to take up his duties as Brigadier of Fort William until November next.

PRIVILEGES OF CHAPLAINS.—A reference was some time ago made to Government as to whether a chaplain can enlist and attest soldiers in her Majesty's army, or in the India army, and whether it is necessary that such chaplain be appointed as Justice of the Peace, or magistrate for the purpose. The Government has observed that under the 52nd Section of the Military Act he has been authorised to do so, and that there is no necessity for his being appointed as Justice of the Peace, or magistrate.

DISORDERS AT ULWAR.—The Delhi Gazette reported a week or two since that a serious riot had happened in the Ulwar territory, in which the Rajah did not figure very pleasantly. We hear now that the case has completely changed colour. Instead of a raid by the followers of the chief, it is stated to have been a rebellion on the part of the ryots. It is also said that the rajah is about to take measures to punish his refractory servants. The Government would do well to see that this is not an excuse for an extra amount of extortion and cruelty on the part of the rajah's followers.—Hurkaru.

A BANK AGENT CHARGED WITH CRIMINAL MISAPPROPRIATION.—A remarkable and painful case has been before the Police Court during the week, ending in the committal of the defendant, Mr. Fraser, the Agent of the Indian Peninsular, London and China Bank, upon a charge of criminal misappropriation of the funds of the Bank, to the extent of a lakh and a half of rupees.

MR. BUCKLE, C.S.—Mr. Buckle, one of the Bengal Judicial officers recently removed by Mr. Beadon, has been appointed to the political office in Moorshedabad. The appointment has been gazetted. The Englishman says:—The salary of this appointment is, we believe, Rs. 3,000 a month which will quite console Mr. Buckle for the loss of his Judgeship. For several years past, this appointment has been held by a military man, so that this occasions the loss of a good sinecure to the military.

STOPPAGE OF WORKS IN BHOTAN.—We learn from Bhootan that the want of labour and materials have put a stop to the rapid progress of the building work. The newly-raised Cooly Corps consist of useless discharged sepoys, who refuse to work as coolies; and the zemindars fill their own pockets out of the materials supplied by the ryots.

GRANTS-IN-AID.—Grant-in-aid regulations for the Punjab have been sanctioned by the Government of India, and are published at length in the Delhi Gazette supplement of July 27.

THE KHOONS and other hill tribes in the interior of Orissa are manifesting considerable excitement, and some disturbances have taken place. The attention of the Commissioner of Cuttack has been drawn to the matter.

MADRAS.

THE FORTNIGHT.

[From the Overland Athenæum and Daily News.]

Our Legislative Council met on the 5th, 9th and 12th instant, and transacted useful business. The Act for establishing new Municipalities in Mofussil towns, for purposes of conservancy, and to raise funds to pay in part the expenses of their police, has been passed. At the suggestion of the Select Committee on the Bill, Government servants have most properly been subjected to the tax on trades, professions, and callings. A similar Bill for Madras has likewise been proposed. A petition from certain inhabitants of the Presidency has been presented to Council, praying that the citizens may be represented at the Municipal Board by some of their members, in addition to the paid members; and it has been resolved to nominate three honorary members to serve on the commission.

The Summer Criminal Sessions of the High Court commenced on the 1st inst., with a calendar not numerically heavy, but containing some grave cases, especially one in which a British planter in Coorg stood charged with murder, culpable homicide not amounting to murder, and causing grievous hurt. He was convicted on the third count of the indictment, but his counsel having moved in arrest of judgment, on the ground that the High Court here had no jurisdiction in the matter, Coorg being subject to the Supreme Government, and the case proving to be so, the prisoner was discharged, but immediately again arrested, in order that he may be re-transported to Coorg, and thence to Calcutta, to undergo a new trial in that city. Whether he will gain by this move seems very doubtful. It is high time that the law was altered, so as to bring adjacent provinces now outlying within the jurisdiction of the Madras tribunal. The heavy cost, and the great inconvenience to all parties concerned, arising from the present state of things, are very serious matters.

The annual general meeting of the proprietors of the Bank of Madras was held on the 7th inst., when the directors' report for the year ending 30th of June last was read, and proved eminently satisfactory to the shareholders present, as it will be to all who were not. The affairs of the institution were admirably managed during a most critical period, and the board and their officers richly merited the commendation of their judicious and zealous labours, which was pronounced by the meeting. The dividend declared for the year was at the rate of 12 per cent. The profitable working of the Bank's branch establishments is especially noteworthy.

A representation was lately made by the local Government to the Supreme on the subject of the reduction of the Madras Budget for the current year by the sum of seven lakhs and odd, which would, it was pointed out, be seriously prejudicial, but the natural reply has been that other parts of India were similarly affected, and that no relief could be given.

Mr. Robinson, the Inspector-General of Mofussil Police for this Presidency, has submitted his annual report of the operations of his force, which Government have published, and we are glad to say that it is of a very gratifying description, and does infinite credit to that body.

An extraordinary increase of our railway traffic receipts, especially those of the Cuddapah line, has, we are glad to say, just taken place. Sir Charles Wood's unaccountable refusal to sanction the construction of a railway connecting Pondicherry with the British lines has, we rejoice to perceive, not daunted the committee at the French capital, who are about to address him direct on the subject.

We learn that considerable anxiety was felt in Bangalore last Tuesday night in consequence of the delay in the arrival of the night train. The delay was caused by a slight accident to the engine at Jolarpett, where the train was detained for about two hours. The detention was a very fortunate one, for had the train been on its course to Colar a very disastrous tragedy might have ensued. A correspondent of the Bangalore Herald gives the following description of the breach at Colar:—"At a short distance from the latter station a small tank near to the line had burst during the night, and swept away a portion of the line, say about 200 yards, to which place had we come during the darkness it is fearful to think what might have been the result. We were detained at the last-mentioned place about four or five hours until a train from Bangalore which had been telegraphed for arrived, with which came the Bangalore station-master, who had the Bangalore passengers transferred from the train in which they came into the one in which we had arrived from Madras. Coolies were employed on both sides carrying the passengers' luggage, which was done as quickly as might be expected. We arrived at half-past two o'clock P.M., instead of 7 A.M."

We hear from a prospectus put forward by the Bangalore Hotel Company that they propose to commence operations forthwith on the premises recently occupied by his Excellency Sir William Denison. Accommodation will be at once provided for four families and ten single persons, and it is contemplated (as we understand the prospectus) to make such additions and improvements in the present building as will provide that great desideratum for the Madras public—another first-class hotel at Bangalore. Messrs. James, Rose, and Edwards form the provisional committee, and their local experience will doubtless contribute much to the successful carrying out of the enterprise. The capital amounts to a lac of rupees, divided into 1,000 shares of Rs. 100 each.

THE RAJAH OF MYSORE.—It is confidently said that the Rajah of Mysore has received a telegraphic intimation from Sir Charles Wood that his adoption of an heir to his Musnud will not be recognised. Our readers are aware that we looked for nothing less. The question was decided against his Highness beforehand, but the game is not yet hopelessly up, if he retains his courage and goes the right way to work to bring his claims before Parliament next year. He has nothing to hope from the present Ministry, unless that august assembly can be so persuaded of their validity as to induce them to take the matter seriously in hand. If this can be effected, he need not quite despair of success, as he is reported to be inclined to do, though the turn which the elections at home have taken in favour of Ministerial candidates is certainly unfavourable to his cause. He would have had a better chance with the late House of Commons, had he earlier adopted the decided measure he did the other day, when the impression made on the public mind by Major Evans Bell's powerfully written work was still fresh. All will depend now on his choice of agents. He should place himself in the hands of competent European advisers, of known character, ability, and influence, sufficient to ensure the bringing forward of his case at home in the best manner of which it will admit.

THE MADRAS ARMY NOT TO BE IRREGULAR. —A letter from the Central Provinces says:—"I hear that it is definitely settled that the Madras Army are not to be made irregulars, as it has been found the system does not answer in the armies of the other presidencies."

IMPORTS.

MADRAS, Aug. 14.—The continued arrival of large shipments of goods from the other presidencies has much depressed our market during the fortnight. In all June we received 2,130,000 yards of Grey Long Cloths from Calcutta, and 1,04,000 yards from Bombay, in addition to 133,000 bundles of Mule Yarn from Calcutta and 172,600 bundles from Bombay. These shipments have more than sufficed to supply all present wants of the dealers, and sales of Piece Goods and Grey Yarns have been almost confined to the bazaar. In Grey Shirtings the greatest decline has been in the value of 39-40 inch 8½lb, which are fully 8 annas per piece cheaper. Other weights and lengths are from 3 to 6 annas weaker. Bleached Cottons are from 10 to 12 annas per piece cheaper, and are in no demand.

EXPORTS.

There has been a steady inquiry for Western Cotton since our last, and purchases have been made at prices ranging from Rs. 168 to Rs. 175 per candy. The market is well supplied, and prices are firm at from Rs. 173 to Rs. 175. At Tuticorin Timmerville is quoted at Rs. 150. In Indigo some considerable purchases have been made at Nellore of ordinary Kurpah at Rs. 60 per maund, but in this market there is nothing doing, the prices demanded by dealers rendering the staple inaccessible to shippers to Europe.

BOMBAY.

THE SOCIAL TREADMILL IN INDIA.—The Englishman's Peshawur Correspondent, "Alligator," gives the following pathetic picture of a morning's misery:—A few days since a stern sense of duty compelled me to undertake the task of making myself acquainted with the fair inhabitants of Peshawur, upon none of whom had I previously called. So off I started, dressed in gorgeous array of the warmest description, on a tour of polite inspection, with the following results:—At bungalow No. 1 I was ushered into an apartment so dark that I could not see my hand before me, and I therefore stood stock still for some moments, for fear of doing damage to articles of furniture, until a voice hailed me from amidst the obscurity, and bid me advance. This I did, gingerly, every now and then coming into contact with hard substances, such as legs of chairs, and other trifles of that sort, the effects of which concussions on a man afflicted with gout were, to say the least of it, decidedly thrilling. After a time, the voice begged me to be seated; so down I sat at once, delighted at the opportunity of resting my "poor feet," but, horresco referens, there was a confounded Persian cat in the chair, and a sitting posture has been very painful to me ever since that day! At bungalow No. 2 there was plenty of light, and, as a consequence, plenty of heat. The eldest son and heir, a fearful little villain in knickerbockers and prickly heat, having crawled into the thermantidote, had been somewhat ground up after the manner of coffee, so that all the doors and windows had to be thrown open, in order to admit sufficient light for the inspection of his damages. At No. 3 a dismal twilight reigned supreme, excepting where its dull hue was brightened into fiery red by the rays of the sun penetrating through the crimson curtains of a sky-light; and, as luck would have it, my nose, which is rather long, and perhaps a little rosy towards the tip, just managed to intercept the fiercest of these scarlet sunbeams, thereby causing me great agony of mind, as well as of flesh, the lady of the house being decidedly pretty and fascinating, but rather satirical—so that I felt convinced my poor Bologna sausage of a proboscis would afford her a subject for future ridicule. Altogether, I got through about half a dozen houses, and on returning home, after having reviewed the expedition calmly, I arrived at the following result as a fair estimate of the profit and loss accruing to me from my toil and labour:—Losses.—First of all, the skin off my shins; second, of my temper (a total loss uninsured); third, of Rs. 5, which I paid for a buggy; fourth, of one stone four pounds of solid flesh; fifth, of a suit of swell English mufli, spoilt by damp; sixth, of appetite, consequent upon having eaten cake at three different houses, and imbibed sherry wine; seventh, of my conscience, by pretending that the cake and wine were very good; and eighth, of my eyesight, that being destroyed by the rapid changes from glare to gloom. Gains.—First, an invitation to tea; second, the acquaintance of several ladies and gentlemen whose faces I have not seen, and whom I should not know from Adam or Eve; third, a feeling of intense humility and self-abasement, resulting from a strong remembrance of all the betises of which I was guilty; fourth, several blushes; and fifth, a very fine fever. Now, whether this kind of game pays for the candle is a question that every man can decide for himself; but I most solemnly vow and protest that nothing less than a powerful edict from the throne of Jove himself, backed up with camel loads of specie, shall ever induce this child again to attempt the cultivation of society through the medium of conventional calling and card-dropping.

OPPRESSIVE EXACTIONS IN THE NATIVE STATES.—The chiefs of Central India are ever and anon manifesting a tendency to resort to arms in support of their views, whether against their subjects or their neighbours, and thus proving that it is only the restraint of the British power that prevents them from flying at each other's throats. All the haughtier and more dangerous spirits of India seem to gravitate, as a matter of course, to that portion of the empire which lies between Agra and the sea westwards, and here they spend their lives in intrigues, robberies, and the pomp and circumstances of native armed retainers. The people of a district refuse it may be to comply with the exactions of the Kardars of a native chief, when the operation carried out under the last King of Oudh in similar circumstances is resorted to. The chief quietly orders a body of retainers into the recusant district, and the taxes are collected, though with what amount of extortion and injustice is never known. The latest instance we have heard is that reported by the chief of Inderghur. This noble has brought to the notice of Government the proceedings of the Jeypore durbars. A talookdar, or thakoor has been sent with a large following of ragamuffins to Babyce, and the consequence is that its people are almost driven to extremity by the oppressiveness of his care of them.—Hurkaru.

THE TRAFFIC IN GIRLS is still carried on in Meywar. The Meywarries of the hilly parts of the country follow the trade with some activity. Girls are purchased from their parents, and also from the gangs of Bheels, who, gipsy-like, carry off girls in their raids, and dispose of them on their return to their hill fastnesses. In 1863 this traffic attracted the attention of Colonel Eden, then political agent at Meywar, who did all in his power to prevent the practice, and to induce the native durbars to prohibit it under heavy penalties. In this he was to a certain extent successful, but the trade only declined in appearance; it was still actively pursued in secret, and this has again provoked the reprobation of the Government.

A BENCH OF HONORARY MAGISTRATES has been created at Buttal, near Umritsur. Some time ago the Jagheerdars of Umballa were vested by Government with magisterial powers, but as they illused them their authority was withdrawn.

AN INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION IS PROPOSED TO BE ESTABLISHED AT POONA in December, 1865, and we are informed that a meeting of the Officers of the Royal Artillery, H.M.'s Regiment, and Staff of the station, will be held on Friday next, at Brigadier General Malcolm's Bungalow, for the furtherance of the scheme.

BRITISH SOLDIERS IN NATIVE STATES.—A quarrel recently arose between a detachment on the march and some sepoys belonging to the Bhurtpore Rajah, which was referred to the Commander-in-Chief for orders. His Excellency has directed that special attention must be given to the various and numerous orders on this subject, and has remarked that officers will be held strictly responsible for the observance of these rules by the soldiers under their command. The Government should require the native chiefs to look to this matter. So long as the ryots or retainers of a native chief suppose they can insult the ghorta-og with impunity, so long shall we hear of these little unpleasantnesses.

ADEN.—We find that the Political Resident at Aden has been authorised by Government to establish relations with the African Tribes of the Galaib country.

CHINA.

TYPHOON.—A short but severe typhoon has occurred during the past fortnight. The centre of the cyclone was somewhere about Swatow. Two fine steamers, the Corca (P. and O.) and the Chanticleer (private), which left Hong Kong shortly before the typhoon came on, have not since been heard of, both vessels being bound to Swatow on their passage up the coast. As nearly a month has elapsed since the date of their departure, there is only too much reason to fear that the unfortunate vessels have foundered at sea. The following is, we believe, a complete list of the passengers and officers lost in the Corca:—

Officers.—Captain J. D. Bird; J. M. Guy, chief officer; J. D. Muir, second officer; M. Richardson, third officer; W. Young, fourth officer; H. Maplebeck, chief steward; J. Forrest, chief engineer; R. R. Orr, second engineer; R. Campbell, fourth engineer; A. C. Alford, boiler maker.

Passengers.—Mrs. J. D. Bird, Mr. H. Noble, and Mr. Pember; F. Lopez, deck.

The names of the passengers and crew per Chanticleer we also give:—

Officers.—Geo. L. Sargent, captain; J. Johnson, chief officer; H. Waters, second officer; S. Manley, third officer; J. W. P. Stuttford, chief engineer; J. Mentiplay, jun., second engineer; A. Sena, third engineer; with a crew of nineteen Malays and Lascars, and forty-four Chinese.

Passengers.—Captain S. Cowan; Mr. Harbour, of H. D. Brown and Co.'s, Amoy; Mr. Maynard, of S. E. Burrows and Sons; S. W. Halsey, photographer; two Chinese cabin, and sixteen Chinese deck.—China Mail, July 29.

JAPAN.

OUTRAGEOUS ATTACK ON FOREIGNERS BY A JAPANESE.

The North-China Daily News has the following:—"Our Nagasaki correspondent, writing under date of the 30th ult., furnishes us with the following additional details regarding the late outrage at that port. It appears that Mr. Smith, late of Shanghai, was standing at the gateway in front of his house, when he saw a Japanese with a double-handed sword at the corner of the street, talking in an excited manner to a Chinaman. Turning round suddenly he saw Mr. Smith, and immediately advanced towards him at a steady pace, but with a threatening manner. Mr. Smith took little notice of what was going on, but when the native was within a few paces of him he was horrified to see him draw his sword, and make a sweeping cut at him. As he was partly within the gate-posts the cut took no effect, when finding himself totally unarmed, and remembering that his room was locked, he ran towards the Royal Hotel, hotly chased by his assailant. Fortunately, as the ruffian was in the act of making another blow a dog belonging to Smith flew at him, and fastened on to his leg. He stopped to cut the dog down, but the animal, true to his instinct, held on until he had received three horrible wounds on his back. Mr. Smith got safely into the hotel, where he met a Japanese, whom he begged to come out and see what was going on. When they came into the compound they found that the man had disappeared, and Smith seized the opportunity of getting his revolver. While doing so he heard a thud, as of a heavy cut, followed by a groan. This proceeded from the unfortunate coloured man, William Henry, barkeeper of 'The Royal,' who, hearing the disturbance, had run to see what the matter was, and was met by the Japanese, who, without a moment's warning inflicted a cut of about seven inches in length upon his head. As soon as he had done this the Japanese ran away, but a moment afterwards a yell was heard from the next street, and it was found that a Chinaman employed on board the screw steamer Australian had received a severe blow across his face. It is much to be regretted that Smith, who was now armed with a rifle and revolver, did not give chase and shoot the Japanese down before any further mischief was done. Being, however, a stranger in the place he hardly knew what to do. Meanwhile the Japanese, seeing that no one followed him, pursued his course, and next wounded two Chinese employed in Alt and Co.'s tea-firing establishment, and two others belonging to the Australian. Messrs. Maltby and Colthorp, who were returning from a walk, while going through the narrow passage which leads from the native town to the foreign quarter, were astonished to meet the same infuriated individual with a drawn sword held in both hands perpendicularly before him. These gentlemen passed without molestation, when suddenly a Chinaman with a frightful wound on his right arm ran up and said, "You see that man have makee cutty my." The Japanese hearing the loud voice behind, looked round, but seeing that the party were determined to make a stand, he sheathed his weapon and ran into the native town. Luckily neither Mr. Maltby nor Mr. Colthorp was armed, so that it was vain for them to pursue him. The wounded were at once taken on board the Barossa, and a party of marines were landed to patrol the settlement. On the 14th ultimo the British consul and Captain Boys, R.N., had an interview with the governor of Nagasaki. They endeavoured to impress him with the necessity of having the culprit arrested and punished. The opportunity was also taken of proving how utterly useless are the guard-houses which have been placed round the settlement since September, 1864, nominally with the purpose of looking after foreign interests, but really for the purpose of spying. The governor had intended to pay a visit on board the Barossa on the 12th instant, but in consequence of this sad affair begged to be permitted to postpone it until the 16th. Captain Boys, however, informed him that he had better again postpone it until he had arrested and punished the culprit. The governor promised to do all in his power, and signified his intention of punishing the soldiers at the guard-houses who had taken no steps to seize the assassin, although a Chinaman had been cut down only a few yards from one of the sentry-boxes. The name and residence of the culprit are known. He lives at a village near Mougy, and is not a Yakonin, as at first reported, but an ordinary rowdy. Several police officers have been put on his track, but up to the present nothing is known as to his whereabouts."

The above may be a mere case of running a-muck, but it is suggested as more probable that the man is some criminal from gaol who has been released on conditions that he should make a raid upon foreign residents. The Japanese policy is to make the place too hot to hold us. They are as determined as ever they were to keep their country sealed.

Sir Harry Parkes has received the usual official visit from one of the Yokohama magnates. This has little political significance.

CEYLON.

The Colombo Observer contains the following items of news:—

Five ships have sailed in the fortnight with over 36,000 cwts. of coffee more than two-thirds of which consist of plantation kinds. The result is that on the 13th instant, the round 800,000 was practically made up. We are thus, with more than six weeks of the season still before us, 22,000 cwts. in advance of our previous highest crop, and no less than 192,000 over the export to the corresponding period last year.

The Governor has returned to Colombo from his tour.

The Ceylon League have adopted a petition to Her Majesty for a reform in the local Council, from which we make the following extracts:—

"That the Legislative Council of Ceylon, as it is now constituted, is not suited to the present state and requirements of the Island, inasmuch as it does not afford the public that control over the disposal of the local revenues, to which, by the principles of the British Constitution, they are entitled."

"That availing themselves of the undue influence and power thus afforded by such majority, the Local Government have, under the directions of your Majesty's Secretaries of State for some years past, injuriously restricted the public expenditure, thereby creating large surpluses of revenue, on the strength of which they have imposed heavy charges, notwithstanding the most earnest remonstrances of the public and the strongest protests of the unofficial members. These charges have gone through the formality of being passed by the Council, and have thus acquired the semblance without possessing the substance of constitutional votes. Universal dissatisfaction has thus been excited throughout the island and the Legislative function has been brought into contempt."

That your Majesty's petitioners do not presume to ask for any particular form of Legislative Council, either as to the number of its members or the manner of their appointment, but would submit to your Majesty's pleasure the mode and measure of the concessions your Majesty may deem to be due to the country in view of its present advanced condition as contrasted with that of the period when the present constitution was granted, and your Majesty's petitioners would gratefully accept such modifications of the existing Council and practice as would secure to the representatives of the public a due influence in the disposal of the revenue.

Furloughs of Chaplains.

Simla, July 15.—No. 1,381.—The following is an abstract of furl. and absentee rules for chaplains on the establishments of the three presidencies of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, published in G.G.O.:—

FURLOUGH AND ABSENTEE RULES FOR CHAPLAINS.

Chaplains may be allowed leave of the following kinds:—

- Leave on m.c.
- Furl. on private affairs.
- Short leave on private affairs.
- Privilege leave.
- Preparatory leave.

The period for which leave on m.c. is given is as follows:—

In India, a continuous period not exceeding 1 year.

Beyond India, 18 mo., subject to ext., with allowances, up to a period not exceeding altogether 3 years, on a renewal of the m.c.

The pay or allowances during such leave are as follows:—

In India, full salary of rank, subject to a deduction of one-third for the whole term of regulated absence, provided that the deduction shall not reduce the allowance below Rs. 500 a mo.

Beyond India, for first 6 mo., £600 per annum, and (if the absentee be an archdeacon, but not otherwise) such portion of the salary of his office, not exceeding one-half, as may not be required for the payment of a locum tenens, and as may be granted to the absentee, without extra expense to Govt. For the remaining period, £191. 12s. 6d., or £127. 15s. per annum, according as the absentee has, or has not, completed 7 years' residence in India.

A chaplain proceeding on leave beyond India on m.c. will be allowed an advance of 3 mo. absentee pay, and no recovery will be made on account of this advance should the absentee die before it is liquidated.

A chaplain proceeding to England on leave should be furnished by the accountant general with a certificate in the form given in Appendix B, for submission to the India-office on his arrival in London.

FURLOUGH ON PRIVATE AFFAIRS.

The periods for which furl. is granted are as follow:—

Undivided, a continuous term of 3 years, but not before completion of 10 years' residence in India; or,

Divided into two periods, whether of 18 mo. each, or of 2 years and 1 year respectively. The first instalment of such divided furl. may be taken after a residence of 7 years, and the second instalment after a residence of 8 or 10 years, from date of return from last instalment by chaplains appointed before, on, or after Jan. 11, 1854. One year is the shortest term of furl. that can be taken by a chaplain.

The pay during furl. is £191. 12s. 6d. per annum.

RUSSIA IN CENTRAL ASIA.

RUSSIA continues to give elaborate explanations of her progress in Central Asia, through the St. Petersburg and Moscow journals; and her latest prolusion upon the subject, in reference to the taking of Taschkend, explains the unexpected announcement, previously received through Mr. Reuter, of her impending war with Bokhara.

The article alluded to, which is quoted in the St. Petersburg Gazette from the Invalide Russe, contains a great deal of repetition, and need not be given here entire. Its main purpose is to this effect:

After the death of Alimkoulla, Sadyk-Kenasserin—"Russia's implacable enemy"—was proclaimed Regent of Khokand, and assembling around him the remainder of the band routed at Tchemkend, had formed his head-quarters at Taschkend, which was thus given up to confusion and disorder. This was highly injurious to the Russians whose trade suffered severely, the export of cattle and grain destined for the town being diminished by three-fourths of the usual amount. But notwithstanding these facts, and even the solicitations of a large party within the walls who wished to be rid of the Khokanese, the Russian General Tcherniaiew remained quiescent, in order that the inhabitants might have an opportunity of taking their own course against the invaders. These people, however, were inadequate to carry out their wishes unaided, so failing Russian co-operation, they applied for help to the Khan of Bokhara. This was a very awkward prospect for the Russians. The General saw that to allow the Khan to extend his power over Taschkend, and to have installed, in place of the Khokanese, a Bokharian population imbued with Mussulman fanaticism, would have been equivalent to giving up all the advantages obtained on the Syr Daria, as well as putting off to a distant period the termination of military operations. Nevertheless, the General still contented himself with a watchful attitude, and it was only when the Khan had occupied Khodgent with his troops, and the Bokhara party had begun reinforcing itself at Taschkend, that he determined upon action. He accordingly took Taschkend by assault on the night of the 15th of June, and drove the Khokanese out of the place. He was now able to ascertain and put in evidence the intelligence which the Khan of Bokhara held with the inhabitants. The Bokhara party, under Iskander Bey, had, it seems, already installed itself in the town; among the trophies gained by the Russian troops was a Bokharian standard. Moreover, the Bokharian troops began to show themselves in the Khokan forts, bordering on the left bank of the Syr Daria; and it was discovered that the Khan entertained romantic ideas about re-establishing the Empire of Tamerlane, having, as a preliminary, claimed jurisdiction over the Kirghis, who had long since been subordinate to Russia. The General also found the Khan quite impracticable as to the occupied town, whose independence he refused to acknowledge. His pretensions, in fact, from first to last, are described as intolerable, so it was determined to meet them by vigorous means. "European etiquette and the finesses of diplomacy," says the writer, "are things inaccessible to the mind of the Asiatics, accustomed to see in concessions but a proof of weakness, and in submission but an effect of fear." Therefore, "in order to avoid a conflict with Bokhara, and at the same time to prove to the Khan the inutility of his threats, as well as the firm determination to insist upon Taschkend remaining independent," it was decided to take reprisals upon the subjects of Bokhara established upon Russian territory. So an order was given to arrest all the Bokharians found in the country of Orenburg, and to sequester their merchandise.

This policy, at the time of writing, appeared likely to have the desired effect. The Khan evinced something like politeness in his intercourse with the Russian authority, and even halted his troops on the other side of the Tehirtchik river. Nevertheless, the General considered that to place implicit faith in the protestations of a Khan of Central Asia, and to rely entirely upon his sincerity, would be a very grave error—a fact sufficiently illustrated by subsequent events; for, according to the telegram since received, the Khan himself was the aggressor in the actual hostilities which followed, by attacking a Russian caravan. In any case the alliance of Russia with Bokhara is evidently broken up, and Russia already begins to experience the difficulty which she described in her diplomatic circular on the subject some months ago—of knowing where to stop. Nor is the result in any way surprising. Both Bokhara and Khiva are plainly at her mercy, and Russia will have to occupy a great deal more territory in Central Asia before she will be allowed to settle down in peace. Russophobists for some time to come will thus be in no want of subject matter for speculation; but whether they will succeed in creating alarm is another matter. There is a growing party in this country who see in the advance of Russia a security for the repression of semi-barbarous chiefs obtainable by no other means—since we have no desire to undertake the task ourselves—and the best protection that could be for the trade with Central Asia, in which we cannot fail largely to participate. With regard to Russia's alleged designs upon British India—which, however, she has again and again disclaimed—the difficulties in the way of their accomplishment are as great as ever, and are not likely to be lessened. It should be remembered, too, that there need be no more apprehension on that score from a force at Bokhara than from a fleet in the Caspian; and that, after all, the defence of its frontier is a responsibility which any country must be prepared to incur, even without the assistance that nature has given us in India. The rupture of the Russian alliance with Bokhara, too, sets at any rate one source of alarm at rest—that Russia is likely to stir up the fanatical Mussulman population against British rule, since it is clear that, if she is stirring it up against anybody, it is against herself.

BOOKS.

Comp and Cantonment; A Journal of Life in India in 1857-59, with Some Account of the Way Thither. By Mrs. Leopold Paget. Longman and Co.

About the middle of July, 1857, the field battery of Royal Artillery, under the command of Captain Leopold Paget, was ordered to embark for India, and the wife of that officer accompanied him to his new scene of service. To this lady the public is indebted for a diary of her adventures, from the day of her departure from Woolwich to that which saw her entering the docks at Southampton two years afterwards. Ladies' narratives of travel have always one advantage over those of men—they give a nearer view of things, and note a great deal that authors of the other sex hold in disdain. Moreover, ladies, not being supposed to know so much beforehand as their lords, are not ashamed to be impressed by novelty, and the consequence is a freedom and freshness which only confidence can impart. Mrs. Paget makes excellent use of these advantages, and gives us an interesting picture of private life at a great public crisis, picking up a little politics in the course of her wanderings, as a lady under such circumstances is sure to do, if only from her husband, and now and then informing us as to her own views in departmental management, which you may be sure are of a practical character. Major Paget—he becomes a major in the course of the work, and is transferred to the mounted branch—supplements the lady's diary by a narrative of his own. "How I Helped in the Pursuit of Tantia Topee" is not the least pleasant part of the book. It is written in rapid, soldier-like style, as if there was plenty to say but not too much time to say it, and the writer was rather afraid that the subject would run away from him—just the style, in fact, for a chase. The column did not catch Tantia; but Major Paget did all that becomes a man—being nothing more than the commandant of a troop of horse artillery under difficulties—towards that object, and encountered him once, "conspicuously dressed in white, and mounted on a handsome white horse." Nor was it any fault of the Major's if the gallant rebel got away, for he had "no steeds to follow," like the enemies of Young Lochinvar, even if the pursuit had been his business, instead of that of the 17th Lancers.

Regulations Applicable to the European Officer in India. Part III. Furlough, Retirement, Medical Officers, &c. By George E. Cockrane, Assistant Military Secretary, India-office. Harrison and Sons, 59, Pall-mall; W. H. Allen and Co., 13, Waterloo-place.

The third part of this valuable publication contains a classified analysis of the regulations under the several heads above recited, as well as others of a miscellaneous kind. The matter is carefully and compactly arranged, rendered easy of reference by a copious index, and gives the largest amount of information in the smallest possible space.

THE INDIAN MUTINY.—GENERAL WHITLOCK AND LORD CLYDE.

The great case of the Banda Kirwee booty, amounting to about one million sterling, came on before Dr. Lushington, at the Admiralty Court, on Friday, on the application to inspect a despatch from the Bombay Government respecting the force under the command of General Smith. The suit was instituted on the part of General Sir G. Whitlock and the army under him, to obtain a distribution of the booty taken from the rebels, and several questions arose, whether the army in India at the time, and Lord Clyde, as commander-in-chief, were not entitled to share in the large fund, if not as actual captors, then as "constructive" captors. The case was one of great magnitude and importance, and the Crown had referred the matter to Dr. Lushington, and it was now advancing towards a hearing.

His Lordship, on no cause being shown, directed the production and inspection of the document in question.

Mr. Telles, proctor for one of the parties, subsequently opposed. He said he had been to Westminster, thinking that the Court sat as usual at that place. He asked his lordship to adjourn the application until counsel could be heard in opposition. The document was from the Bombay Government, but more in the shape of a letter than a despatch. It was the opinion of counsel that it should not be produced.

Dr. Lushington thought the document had better be produced. Had he heard of it he should have required it to be brought into Court, in order to arrive at a satisfactory opinion.

Mr. Tebbs said the Court would have known nothing of the matter.

His Lordship declined to disturb the order. The document would be forthcoming, and produced to the other side.

Mr. Tebbs then applied that the case might be specially appointed for hearing. He had heard that the Court would appoint a sitting in October. There were many parties to hear, and about a dozen counsel engaged. The cause, when it did come on, would occupy some time.

Dr. Lushington expressed his desire to proceed with the matter as soon as possible. He had read some of the papers, and would do his best to get rid of the mass, so that the case might be heard at the commencement of Michaelmas term.

The Registrar (Mr. Rothery) informed his lordship that there were more papers to be lodged.

Dr. Lushington: What, more papers?

Mr. Tebbs believed that such was the fact.

His Lordship was surprised, after the mass already filed. He would do his best in the matter, and hoped to proceed with the hearing. He was aware there were many parties interested in this case.

Mr. Tebbs recommended that a special sitting should be appointed.

It was understood that arrangements would be made for the hearing before or at the commencement of next term. In the interim the order made for the production of the despatch was to be carried out.

Order accordingly.

THE CAPTURE OF TASCHKENT.

The Invalide Russe contains the following narrative of the capture of Tashkent, in Kokan, a town said to contain 100,000 inhabitants, and certainly of considerable size:—

"Taking into consideration that the garrison occupied a vast extent of ground, that their artillery was distributed over a line of fifteen versts (ten miles), and that in the place there was a numerous party devoted to us, General Tcherniaeff formed the resolution to capture the town by assault. Having chosen the point of attack, he decided that the assault should be given on the night of the 26th—27th June. With this view it was arranged that the principal detachment, under the command of General Tcherniaeff in person, after breaking up from their camp at eleven o'clock at night, should, at daybreak, deliver the assault at the gate chosen for the attack by means of ladders and arbas (a kind of chariot) constructed for the express purpose, and furnished with little flexible ladders for the passage of the ditch. At the same time the detachment of Colonel Kraievsky was to make a demonstration by attacking the town on another side. The principal detachment was preceded by volunteers commanded by captain of cavalry Wulfort, and Sub-lieutenants Chorokhof and Lapine. The principal detachment numbered in all seven companies, with two light pieces of artillery, and four pieces of position. The priest Malof marched at the head, cross in hand. The enemy perceived the approach of the column of assault when it was a hundred paces from the gate. Before they had time to reconnoitre our troops were already on the barbette, and drove the Kokanians out of it with their cannon. Having advanced with 250 men by a street which ran along the wall of the town, Captain Abramof, in spite of the resistance of the surabases, who were entrenched behind the gabions, and the fire of four pieces of artillery, carried four barbettes, and proceeding along a distance of fourteen kilometres of the wall, gathered on his passage all the pieces of cannon abandoned by the enemy. In the town itself Captain Abramof met with an obstinate resistance, and was obliged to carry by assault a number of barricades. Arriving at the citadel he found it already occupied by the troops of Delacroix and Jemtehoujnikop. Although these two detachments had almost immediately followed that of Captain Abramof, they had not the less, the whole way, encountered and carried barricades, which the enemy erected with extraordinary rapidity. At half-past seven in the morning the citadel was occupied. The enemy, driven back to the centre of the town, ceased to skirmish; nevertheless, our detachment was obliged to evacuate the citadel, for the Kokanians had set fire to the buildings attached to the palace of the Khan, and the fire, spreading with very great celerity, threatened to explode the powder magazines. Then the detachment of Colonel Kraievsky, aided by men from the principal detachment, escalated the wall with the help of their muskets and their straps. The numerous cavalry of the enemy (5,000 men), pursued by a handful of Cossacks, sowed the road with their standards, and, arriving at the Tchirtchik, flung themselves in the river in order to cross it, the horsemen drowning one another in the crush. The half of the town had been cleared; but towards evening the enemy, having concealed themselves in the houses nearest our troops, recommenced the fire upon our line; barricades reappeared in all the streets and squares; the resistance became more desperate, and went so far that one or two men, armed with aibots (a sort of battle-axe), precipitated themselves on an entire company, and succumbed under the bayonets without asking quarter. Little detachments sent into the streets met everywhere with an obstinate resistance. Each house had to be carried by assault, and was only evacuated at the point of the bayonet. The resistance was particularly obstinate in the street conducting from the gate of the town to the principal bazaar, and which was first cleared by the artillery officer Ivanof, and again by Lieutenant Makarof. Thanks to the efforts of the troops the streets were a second time swept clean, and the fire of artillery continued the whole night. Colonel Kraievsky, despatched next morning to gather the cannon of the enemy and blow up the citadel, again encountered a desperate resistance, but completely fulfilled his mission. Towards evening all the streets were free, the town surrendered at discretion, and the disarmament of the inhabitants was proceeded with. Our trophies consist of 16 large standards, one of which is Bokharian, a multitude of flags, 63 pieces of cannon of different calibre, 48 of which are bronze, and of excellent workmanship, and an immense quantity of muskets. There were also found 2,000 pounds (about 70,000 lbs.) of powder, and about 10,000 various projectiles. The number of the defenders of the town, according to the most moderate statements, was 30,000 men. We had 3 subaltern officers wounded, and 4 bruised; 25 men killed, 86 wounded, and 21 bruised."

MISCELLANEOUS.

A CHINESE GIANT.—China has just sent us a very unexpected curiosity in the shape of a most overgrown specimen of the human race. Chang Woo Gow, of Pechow, has within the last few days landed on our shores, and last week made his appearance to a number of private visitors at the Manor House, the residence of Mr. R. Whitfield, the surgeon of St. Thomas's Hospital, in the immediate neighbourhood of the old Surrey Hall at Newington. The giant, as far as can be ascertained, is somewhere between 19 and 23 years of age; his height is seven feet eight inches; he weighs about twenty stone; he is well-proportioned, and he presents, from the mere loftiness of his figure, a very remarkable object. But there is, otherwise, in his appearance nothing in any way formidable, and still less anything repulsive. His features approach more nearly than those of his countrymen, generally, the European type, and their expression is unusually gentle and even timid and feminine. He is accompanied by Mr. Chisholm, who has had charge of him since his departure from China, and, according to this gentleman, he is a person of respectable family, of refined manners, and of considerable accomplishments. He was brought up, it appears, as a scholar, and he now employs a considerable portion of his time in writing. His gigantic stature may be regarded as a hereditary quality, for his father and grandfather were each as tall as he is himself, and he has a brother now serving in the Imperial Chinese army who, although he is six inches lower, outweighs him by not less than a 100 lb. The most singular circumstance, however, in the history of this Titanic race still remains to be told. He had a sister, it is stated, who was eight feet six inches in height. She died about a year ago, or, in his own words, she grew up to heaven and then passed to it for ever; and it was the grief with which he was overwhelmed at her loss that induced him to listen to the overtures addressed to him for a visit to the extremities of the Western world. He has with him two secretaries, a wife, and a female servant, the latter of whom, upon a proper amount of pressing, exhibits with sly coyness a specimen of the famous small Chinese feet, the length of them not being more than about four inches. There is here another figure which will attract some notice from the very diminutiveness of his stature, and his curious outlandish, elish general air. This is a dwarf, 27 years of age, about three feet high, with strongly-marked Chinese features, and a strangely knowing and collected look, thinking himself apparently the most important personage of the group. They will all most probably be exhibited at the Egyptian Hall in the course of a few days; and although they form on the whole a quiet and an undemonstrative party, they must from their exceptional growth and their singular history become objects of some amount of public curiosity and interest.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 6th inst., at the Bank of England. The proportions allotted were—to Calcutta, Rs. 13,46,000; to Madras, Rs. 90,000; and to Bombay, Rs. 10,00,000. The minimum price was as before, viz., 1s. 10½d. on Calcutta and Madras, and 1s. 10¾d. on Bombay. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 11¾d. receive in full, and on Bombay at 1s. 11¾d. about 72 per cent.; above these prices in full.

OUTWARD BOMBAY MAILS.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Tanjore, Captain Brooks, sailed from Southampton on Tuesday with the mails for Gibraltar, Malta, Egypt, Aden, Bombay, and Upper Bengal. She took out 22 first and 60 second class passengers, and on freight a general cargo, including 145 boxes specie, value £50,184. Of this amount £10,250 in bar silver, and £655 watches, gold thread, &c., is for Bombay; £9,200 sovereigns, and jewellery £55, for Alexandria; and £24 in jewellery, &c., for Aden.

THE BOMBAY AND MAURITIUS MAILS.—SOUTHAMPTON, Sept. 12.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Delta, Captain Kellock, with the above mails, has arrived. She brings 116 passengers, 13 packages specie, value £2,809, and a general cargo, including 2,309 bales silk, value £150,000 sterling.

By a supplement to the London Gazette we learn by an order in Council (dated 13th inst.) it is henceforth permitted to import into Ireland hides, &c., of cattle from India, &c., such hides having been included in the prohibition of a former Council order.

AN OLD STORY IN A NEW FORM.—The Delhi Gazette says:—A story is going round the Station (Agra) too good to be lost. A Committee of Valuation sat not a hundred miles from Poona, not long ago. The actual value of the houses which it was desirable to remove was made known, and as the owners were to have the materials and a new site given to them, the amount of compensation to be granted was the matter of debate. "Give them one half the estimated value," said one member. "Don't you think that rather too much?" asked member No. 2, who, by the way was a sawbones, "I think two-thirds would be quite enough!"

A MAGISTRATE IN TROUBLE.—We observe that a certain magistrate of Nimar disobeyed the orders of his superiors, who recommended to Government his dismissal from his post. The Governor-general in Council has decided that the magistrate in question shall be suspended for six months for insubordination to his superior in office, and has remarked that dismissal is the ultimate punishment for such faults.

THE NEW THEORY IN RIFLES.—

Lieutenant James Forsyth, in his excellent work, "The Sporting Rifle, &c.," first promulgated the startling theory that Rifles could be so constructed as to lessen the elevation by increasing the charge of powder. This theory, which the Advertiser has proven to be correct, alters the whole position of Rifles in favour of the sportsman. Formerly, with a high trajectory, the bullet which would have hit a tiger in a vital part at 100 yards, would pass over his back at 25 or 50 yards. By the new system, as elaborated and perfected in DOUGALL'S LOCKFAST BREECHLOADERS, there is a point-blank range to 150 yards, combined with a velocity and smashing power hitherto unknown.—(See TIMES, 11th October, 1864.) No other Rifle possesses the same advantages.

PICKLES, SAUCES, JAMS, &c.

MANUFACTURED BY

CROSSE AND BLACKWELL,
PURVEYORS TO THE QUEEN,
SOHO-SQUARE, LONDON.

CROSSE and BLACKWELL'S renowned first-class Manufactures are obtainable from every respectable Provision Dealer in the World.

Purchasers desirous of being supplied with C. and B.'s goods, which are all of the best quality, and of a thoroughly wholesome character, should be careful to see that inferior articles are not substituted. Their genuine preparations bear their names and address upon the labels. Their Pickles are all prepared in Pure Malt Vinegar, boiled in Oak Vats, by means of Platinum Steam Coils, thus avoiding all possibility of contact with Copper, or any other injurious metal; and they are precisely similar in quality to those supplied by them for use at HER MAJESTY'S TABLE.

Oxford Sausages, Patent Preserved Hams, Cheese and Bacon, Yorkshire Game and Pork Patés, Fresh Oysters in Tins, Salmon Cutlets, Whitebait, Fillets of Soles, Bologna Sausages, Herrings a la Sardines Soups, Meats, and Vegetables, in Tins, Fruits in Syrups, also in Noyau and Brandy, Crystallised Fruits, all of which, as well as many other articles too numerous to include in an advertisement, they can strongly recommend. Their Salad Oil is the finest imported.

C. and B. are Agents for Lea and Perrins' Celebrated Worcestershire Sauce, Carstairs' Sir Robert Peel's Sauce, M. Soyer's Sauces, Relish and Aromatic Mustard, Payne's Royal Osborne Sauce, Captain White's Oriental Pickle, Curry Powder and Paste, and Mulligatawny Paste, Grainwade's Dessicated Milk, and for Masson's French Chocolate.

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile.

GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and, combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for while the ginger relieves the stomach from distension and flatulency, arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach, and by that means gives it a healthy and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpaired by age or climate, and well adapted for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, Cholera, or those complaints incidental to tropical climates, it is invaluable, as in numerous cases a dose or two has checked and frequently cured most alarming attacks. No family should be without it. Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-eighth pints.

Agreeable Sedlitz Powder, in one bottle, protected by a case, with measure and spoon included. The advantage of this preparation is the perfect combination of the solid ingredients of the Sedlitz Spring in one compound powder.

It is very cooling and refreshing, well adapted for exportation, or travellers by land or sea.

Aromatic Tincture of Quinine.—For the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria.

No person exposed to the influence or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for it taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria.—Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

MRS. JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTH-

ING SYRUP, FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR TEETH.—This infallible remedy has preserved hundreds of children when thought past recovery from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as elixir, tending to produce the teeth with ease; and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery where there are young children; for, if a child wakes in the night with pains in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and copying parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bills, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle.

Sold by all chemists and medicine vendors.

Earl Russell sent to the College of Physicians a communication received by him from Manila (where Cholera had been raging fearfully), to the effect, that, of all remedies tried, Chlorodyne was the most effective.—See Brit. Med. J., Dec. 31, 1864.

CHLORODYNE (TOWLE'S). Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Cramp, Ague, Consumption, Asthma, Cough, Colds, Bronchitis, Sea Sickness, &c., immediately relieved by a dose of TOWLE'S CHLORODYNE, which is admitted to be a most wonderful and valuable medicine, and preferred by the profession for its known composition and moderate price.

IMPORTANT TO SHIPPERS AND EMIGRANTS.

Liverpool, Feb. 22nd, 1864. Ship Gertrude.

Mr. TOWLE.—Sir,—Having recently arrived from Bombay, and during our stay there myself and crew being violently attacked with dysentery, so general in India, Captain Clements, of the ship Marseilles, lying near us, seeing the condition we were in, kindly sent a bottle of your Chlorodyne, from which myself and crew found immediate relief; and during the voyage home proved a most effective and valuable medicine. Having been instrumental in saving my own life and that of others, we feel it a duty and pleasure to send this statement of facts, to make what use of you think proper, believing that no vessel ought to leave port without a good supply in her medicine chest.

(Signed) GEORGE ALLEN, Chief Officer.
J. C. CONGDON, Master.

Retail by Chemists, 1s. 14d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d. per bottle. Supplied Wholesale and for Export by the Manufacturer, A. P. TOWLE, Chemist, 99, Stockport-road, Manchester.

NOTHING IMPOSSIBLE.—

The greatest and most useful invention of the day, AGUA AMARELLA.—Messrs. JOHN GOSNELL and Co., Three King-court, Lombard street, Perfumers to her Majesty, respectfully offer to the public this truly marvellous fluid, which gradually restores the human hair to its pristine hue—no matter at what age.

The Agua Amarella has none of the properties of dyes; it, on the contrary, is beneficial to the system, and when the hair is once restored, one application per month will keep it in perfect colour. Price one guinea; half bottles, 10s. 6d. Testimonials from artists of the highest order and from individuals of undoubted respectability may be inspected on application.

Messrs. J. GOSNELL and Co. have been appointed Perfumers to H.R.H. the Princess of Wales.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS,

Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 225, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price, 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d. JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 225, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

—Sores which are daily extending, ulcers which are hourly deepening, may be arrested in their torturing progress and induced to take a healthy action by applying this healing Ointment and taking these purifying Pills. It soothes all distempers of and extracts all morbid humour from the skin. Old ulcers of the legs, inflammations caused by varicose veins and cramps of the lower limbs, can sensibly be eased and shortly cured by Holloway's never failing Ointment, which represses excessive, and stimulates sluggish, vascular, and nervous action. In constitutions breaking down under piles, fistulas, and other similarly painful maladies, a few applications of this cooling Ointment will give relief, and a persistence in its use will effect a cure.

EXPANDING SADDLE.

GIBSON AND COMPANY

Respectfully invite the attention of MILITARY MEN, EQUESTRIANS, and OWNERS OF HORSES, to their Newly-Invented EXPANDING SADDLE, which admits of ready adjustment to the size of any horse, creating a secure and easy seat without the slightest inconvenience to either horse or rider. The principle of EXPANSION and CONTRACTION comprises a simple arrangement of mechanism within the saddle so perfect, that by merely turning a screw the pad is proportioned to the size and form of the animal, on which it firmly rests with a uniform pressure, and is securely retained in its position by means of an ordinary girth.

This invention has obtained the approval and distinguished patronage of HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, and from the very favourable opinions expressed by competent judges, and all who have had an opportunity of testing its merits, there is no doubt it will come into general use; indeed, its success is already established.

Green,	Canary,	Orange,	Yellow,
Phosphine,	Scarlet,	Red,	Ultramarine,
Brown,	Black,	Regina,	Soluble Blue.

The majority of our Dyes are entirely soluble in boiling water, and will dye without the addition of other ingredients.

ANILINE DYES.—"I shall commence my observations on dyeing, by referring especially to the remarkable and beautiful colours derived from coal tar, the introduction of which into this art may be said to constitute the chief distinction, as far as dyeing is concerned, between the present and the former Exhibition, creating, in fact, a new era in the tinctorial art. Coal tar colours deserve attention for their power, as well as for the facility with which they may be applied, for one grain will deeply tint half a gallon of water, and little or no skill is required for their application."—Vide Report by Grace Calvert, Esq., F.R.S., Ph.D., Honorary Professor of Chemistry.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

We have received our usual files of papers from Bombay to the 23rd of August, and Calcutta to the 16th of that month.

The news from either Presidency was of but small interest, beyond a few official changes. Sir Robert Napier had resigned his appointment as military member of the Governor General's Council, with effect from the 10th of March last, the date of his departure from Calcutta. The Hon. Mr. Taylor is accordingly held to have assumed permanently the office of an ordinary member of Council from that date, and Colonel Durand to have filled the vacancy caused by the resignation of the Hon. Mr. Harrington. It is also announced that the Hon. Mr. Trevor is to officiate as Chief-Justice of the High Court during the absence of Sir Barnes Peacock, or until further orders; and that Mr. Stokes has been appointed Assistant Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department, Legislative Branch.

There was considerable discussion in the journals concerning the Bhootan command. Major-general Showers, who was decidedly the "favourite" from the first, still maintained his ground in popular opinion. He is even stated by the Times of India to have been appointed. This, however, seems to be a mistake, as the Delhi Gazette declares authoritatively that the command has been given to Brigadier-general Tytler, and follows up the announcement in a subsequent issue by stating that "The force destined to act in Bhootan, with a view of restoring our lost prestige, will advance upon Punakah in two columns, one from Buxa the other from Dewangiri. The first will be commanded by Brigadier General Tytler, the second by either Colonel Richardson or Colonel Dunsford; so says the latest rumour." The Hurkaru also declares that Brigadier-general Tytler has been appointed, and the announcement seems to be confirmed by the presence of that officer in Calcutta. The entire force, it is said, is to consist of 7,000 troops, of which 1,000 will be Europeans. It is intended to start early in October, and it is calculated that Punakah may be occupied in December. Among the accessory arrangements, which are of a very complete character, we hear of two coolie corps, each 500 strong, to be commanded by a European officer; and ponies are being purchased in great numbers for transport. Great difficulties are anticipated from the nature of the country, which is said to admit of marching only in single file! That the campaign will now be necessary may be taken for granted, for Tounsoo Penlow, who has withdrawn himself beyond Dewangiri, far away into Eastern Bhootan, is still determined to hold out; and, indeed, if he keeps his position he will remain to be dealt with after peace shall have been dictated to the Durbar at Panakha. In the meantime the accounts of the country are greatly discouraging. At one of the posts, Buxa Doar, the rain falls six inches in the twenty-four hours; and the officers of the 1st Goorkhas, who wrote down to secure houses for their accommodation, have been simply laughed at, the nearest approach to a habitation being a line of bamboo and mat sheds. As an addition to the joke, too, it was found that these same officers had intended taking their wives with them on the campaign—an idea which, we need scarcely say, has not been carried out.

It is satisfactory, however, to know that that the 44th and 11th N.I., which have suffered most severely while with the occupying force, are withdrawn from Gohawtty and Putla Rowa, respectively, but they are a mere wreck of what they were, and their sacrifice still excites the deepest indignation.

The summaries of the Bombay papers declare that Mr. Davies, the Financial Commissioner, had been appointed—as was expected—to officiate for Mr. Wingfield in the Chief Commissionership of Oudh. But it turns out that Mr. Davies has declined that honour, not being, apparently, so ready to enter into the Governor-general's arrangements as was supposed. It was expected at Lucknow that in default of Mr. Davies, Mr. Muir, Mr. Campbell, or Mr. Roberts, would get the acting appointment, with the certainty of succeeding to the Chief Commissionership on Mr. Wingfield's retirement—not in January, as before stated, but in April next.

It is affirmed that the Secretary of State has sanctioned all the propositions of the Governor-General for the reorganisation of the establishments of the Department of Public Works. Those to be carried out will cause a considerable increase to the higher classes of the Executive Engineers, some augmentation of the salaries of the Chief Engineers, and an important increase to the salaries of the Civil Superintending and Chief Engineers. On the other hand, a scale of maximum salaries is to be introduced for military officers, which will affect, prospectively, all that class whose position in the Department is not commensurate with their army rank. The result will be a much more equitable distribution of emolument, according to standing in the Department, without any actual increase of expense; while the position of the Civil Engineers will be materially improved, both from these arrangements and those lately carried out.

Sir John Lawrence, it seems, notwithstanding the refusal of the loan by Sir Charles Wood, has ordered the new barracks to be commenced throughout India. The total cost is estimated at £10,000,000.

The report of the Salt Water Lakes Commissioners has been published. The committee has recommended that everything asked for be conceded; and the few conditions that are attached to these concessions are considered fair to all parties. The Commissioners are of opinion that, even if the lake were merely drained, and the soil ordinarily drilled, and even assuming that the full estimated cost had to be paid for the lands, the undertaking would still yield five per cent.; whereas, with the application of sewage, the annual returns would be fully ten per cent. The Commissioners also state that some persons, and among them Mr. Armstrong, think that the reclaimed lands would yield as much as Rs. 30 per acre, and even more.

A European police inspector has been torturing, with great cruelty, a native prisoner, for the purpose of extorting a confession. There is an apparent attempt to hush up the case on the part of his superiors, but the local papers insist upon knowing all about it.

It is stated that the Government of India is about to move the Secretary of State to select six gentlemen in England to fill present and prospective vacancies in the Educational Department. One of these gentlemen, who must be a high Cambridge wrangler, will be appointed to the Chair of Natural Philosophy, on a salary of £900, to be raised in the course of four years to £1,200. The remaining five must be graduates in honours of one or others of the Universities in classics, mathematics, or physical science. They will receive an immediate salary of £600, to be increased in four years to one of £900. All these officers will be required to pass the usual examination in one vernacular language before becoming entitled to any increase of salary. These appointments are to be made at once, so as to enable the selected candidates to arrive by the 1st of January.

The Viceroy was to leave Simla during the present month, and to hold a great darbar at Delhi on his way down. It was said, too, that his Excellency would visit Rajpootana. The vice-regal progress from Delhi was to be made additionally pleasant by the opening of the Jumna Bridge, by means of which there is now a permanent through communication from the City of the Mogul to the City of Palaces.

The news from Bombay is even more tame than that from Calcutta. Mr. Chisholm Anstey had taken his seat upon the Bench without incurring that storm of public reprobation which was anticipated by one of the local journals. There was plenty of cold water, however, to throw on the appointment, for the rain had been falling to an unwonted extent, the total registered for the season being seventy inches. The downfall had been general throughout the presidency, and a great deal of damage had been done, especially to railway property, by inundation. The state of the public health, notwithstanding, continued very satisfactory. Indeed, the Presidency appears to be less dangerous to life than is generally supposed. The accounts of the mortality in the army at least appear to have been exaggerated. According to a rejoinder to the report of the Army Sanitary Commission, just published by Dr. Leith, it appears that the average rate of mortality during the last fifteen years in the Bombay army has been about 29 per mille.

It was said that Mr. A. D. Sassoon would be appointed a member of Council in the place of Mr. Juggonath Sunkersett, for a memorial to whom a subscription was being raised in Bombay.

Financial affairs were still progressing favourably, both in Calcutta and Bombay.

Of home news we give a few items elsewhere.

It is notable that there is a renewed report of a change in the India Office by the retirement of Sir Charles Wood and the accession of the Duke of Argyll in the course of next month.

The next arrival from India will be the Calcutta mail, which may be expected in London on Saturday evening next.

THE OUTWARD BOMBAY MAIL.—It appears the Peninsular mail steamer Pera, to sail this day (27th inst.), takes out £110,575 in specie, of which £10,000 is in gold for Alexandria, and £100,575 in silver for Bombay.

BENGAL.

THE BHOOTAN FIELD FORCE.

We understand that a difference of opinion still exists between the civil and military authorities in the Bhootan Field Force. The military authorities impute the delay in providing materials to insufficient action on the part of the civil authorities of the district. The civil authorities maintain that, throughout these operations, there has been shown in all branches—the Quarter-master-General's, the Commissariat, and the Field Engineers'—a tendency to rely on the civil authorities for doing much of the work which the officers of those departments ought to do for themselves; and the officers of both the departments have used harsh language in their correspondence. The Governor-General has observed that this would cause a mischievous effect on the public service, which must result from the acrimonious tone adopted by both parties in carrying on their public duties. His Excellency further said that all experience had shown that it is better for the Government and the people that requisitions only should be made by the military, and that they should be supplied by the civil authorities as far as possible. It is not, the Viceroy remarked, optional, but the duty of the civil officers in charge of districts to work to the utmost of their power in meeting the requisition of the military departments; and this is so well understood that it has seldom been necessary to enjoin attention to so obvious a duty. The Governor-General in Council is of opinion that, if the military departments were left to work the resources of the district for themselves, it would prove more harassing to the inhabitants, and more costly to the State, than if they obtained their supplies through the agency of the officers, who must, from their position, possess local knowledge, experience and authority. It would, moreover, certainly bring the military into lamentable collision with the civil authorities. Even in an enemy's country, requisitions for forage, fuel, food, lodging &c., should be through the civil authorities, or influential made men, in preference to the employment of direct action upon the people by the military departments, which it would be the duty of a general commanding a force always to avoid, if possible.—Englishman, August 8.

A correspondent from the Bhootan Frontier has favoured us with a description of the route from Buxa to Poonakha. The first march is from Buxa to Tabu, fourteen miles in length. The road is broad, but hilly, with streams of water running across it. The second stage, twelve miles in length, is from Tabu to Myrangechang. The road, in parts, is smooth, in parts rugged. A fordable and bridged stream crosses the road. The stream is but ten feet broad, and three feet deep. The third stage, sixteen miles in length, is from Myrangechang to Bantheegong. The road is a good one, and is traversed, about six miles from Myrangechang, by a bridged and fordable stream, twelve feet broad and three feet deep. The fourth stage, sixteen miles in length, is from Bantheegong to Sookhangong. A river, the Pagla, twenty feet broad and five feet deep, bridged during the Monsoon by two planks, traverses the road at a distance of about six miles before Sookhangong. The stream is rapid, difficult to cross, and cannot be considered passable before the middle of October. Sookhangong is situated on the opposite bank of the river Roydak, over which there is an iron suspension bridge, which permits of the passage of carts and horses. The fifth stage from Sookhangong to Chapcha is twenty miles in length. Fourteen miles of the road is good; a bridged stream, ten feet broad and three feet deep, is then met with. Hence, the road is, in parts, irregular and hilly. The sixth stage, twelve miles in length, is from Chapcha to Paga. The road is hilly, and a stream, ten feet broad and two feet deep, crossed by a wooden bridge, traverses it. The seventh stage, from Paga to Lamloom, is ten miles in length. The road is good, but with many ascents and descents. The eighth stage, from Lamloom to Wookha, is also ten miles in length. The road is of the same character as that of the last stage. The ninth stage, ten miles in length, is from Wookha, or Woosokha, to Tasheeshoojun, on the opposite bank of the Roydak river. Tilhagong is twenty miles from Tasheeshoojun. The road ascends for half the distance, and, for the remaining ten miles, is a descent. Poonakha itself is twelve miles from Tilhagong, there being, half way, a bridged stream.—Ibid, August 11.

TORTURE BY A POLICE OFFICER.

Such a case has lately been brought to our notice, and we shall do our utmost to frustrate the attempt which we see is being made in the department to dispose of the matter as lightly and silently as possible. We are not fully acquainted with the circumstances of the case which led to the torture, which was inflicted by a European Inspector, and, as the District Superintendent of Police assures the magistrate, an honest, intelligent, educated, and respectable man. The torture itself appears, from all we hear, to have been of a much more aggravated nature than the official letter of the District Superintendent would lead one to suppose. The arms of the victim were bound behind his back with ropes, so tightly that they cut into the flesh, and prevented his lifting his hand to his mouth; he was also branded with a hot iron, and flogged—all which necessitated his being sent to hospital. The magistrate of the district, Mr. J. M. Lewis, deputed the investigation of the case to the District Superintendent, and the following letter conveys the result of his inquiry, and his opinion on the case:—

From the District Superintendent of Police Beerbhoom, to J. M. Lewis, Esq., Officiating Magistrate of Beerbhoom.—No. 120, dated 24th July, 1865.

Sir,—With reference to your communication of the 19th inst., No. 222, I have the honour to inform you that I proceeded to the spot and entered into an investigation. I have every reason to believe that Mr. J. H. Maclean is guilty of having ill-used prisoners under his charge, with the view of obtaining confession from them, and of recovering the dacoited property. But before I proceed further I would wish to ascertain if, under the following circumstances, the case can be settled departmentally by a severe punishment, or that the Inspector must be tried in the Court. In the first instance I quote the strong precedent of the late Mr. Assistant-Superintendent Ogilvie, who was not tried at Arrah. Again, the matter, you well know, was not brought to your notice by the sufferers. The hurt is of a very trivial kind—decidedly not grievous. The Inspector, throughout the investigation of the dacoity, has worked very hard, and, as I have every reason to believe from the recovery of property, successfully; he has hitherto displayed great energy, and has an excellent character as an honest, energetic, and intelligent officer. He is of a respectable family, and an educated man, and is very young, though undoubtedly deserving of punishment, and, if possible, I would save him from gaol.

I have the honour, &c.,

(Sd.) T. BUTTANSHAW.

The District Superintendent displays an amount of charity that might be justifiable if the offender were a native, with a very faint idea of the moral impropriety of torture; but the circumstances urged on behalf of Mr. Maclean are all, except one, aggravating, and not extenuating ones. From the spirit which has actuated the District Superintendent of Police in this affair, it is not difficult to predict what would have been the upshot of it, had it not attracted public attention. We need hardly say that it was the duty of the magistrate to have the preliminary local investigation himself, and that it would have been much more conducive to justice had he done so, instead of entrusting the enquiry to the police, for it is not at all natural to suppose that the subordinate police would come forward and peach against a brother officer of a superior grade. Even supposing any of them had the temerity to come forward as witnesses, the natural consequence of this would be to involve them as accessories after the fact, and abettors, and thus render them liable to punishment. To show that this is not mere supposition, we have the instance of the sub-inspector of Nullhattee, who came forward and gave evidence before the district superintendent of police that he was an eye-witness to the torture inflicted by Mr. Maclean. A few days after he was suspended, and is now made a co-defendant with Mr. Maclean, taking his trial as an accessory.—Englishman.

DETENTION OF OVERLAND MAIL STEAMERS AT GALLE.

Bengal Chamber of Commerce, Calcutta, July 20th, 1865.

E. C. Bayley, Esq., Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department, Simla.

Sir,—The unusual detention of the Overland Mails at an intermediate port is a subject which the Committee of the Chamber of Commerce consider it their duty to bring to the notice of Government, and I am desired to request you will be so good as to submit the following instances for the information of the right hon. the Governor-General in Council, in order that his Excellency may have the opportunity of taking such further notice of them as may appear expedient.

The committee refer to the detention at Galle of the mail contract packets Simla and Bengal with the London mails of 26th May and 10th June.

The Simla arrived at Galle at 7 A.M. of 18th June, and left at 6.30 A.M. of 21st, being nearly 72 hours in port.

The Bengal arrived at Galle at 6.30 A.M. of 3rd July, and left at 3 P.M. of the 6th, being upwards of 80 hours in port.

It happens occasionally that the steamer is detained at Galle for the mails and passengers by the China or Australia line, that being provided for by the Peninsular and Oriental Company's contract, and no objection can be made to such provision.

But in the two instances now under consideration the detention could not have been occasioned by the expected arrival of the China and Australian mails, since in the case of the Simla the China and Australian packets arrived two days previously; and in the case of the Bengal the China mail arrived the same day.

Assuming twenty-four hours stoppage at Galle to be ample time for coaling, &c., the mails might have been delivered at Calcutta two days earlier, that is, on the 24th June and the 10th of July instead of the 26th and 12th.

The Peninsular and Oriental Company may possibly justify the detention by a strict adherence to their contract, which allows forty-two days for the conveyance of mails from Southampton to Calcutta, but his Excellency in Council will probably be of opinion that the company might conduct their contract in a more liberal spirit, and, instead of unnecessarily detaining the mails at an intermediate port, give the public, by whom they are handsomely subsidised, the benefit of any time economised by an unusually rapid passage from Suez.

The Committee of the Chamber of Commerce therefore respectfully represent this question for the consideration of the Governor-general in Council, in the hope that his Excellency will refer it to her Majesty's Government with the view to the unnecessary detention of mails at intermediate ports being authoritatively prohibited.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) H. W. I. Wood, Secretary.

Bengal Chamber of Commerce, Calcutta, 24th July, 1865.

E. C. Bayley, Esq., Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department, Simla.

Sir,—I am desired by the Committee of the Chamber of Commerce to supplement the representation made in my letter of the 20th instant, by citing an additional instance of detention of the English Mails at Galle.

The incoming mail steamer Candia, from Suez for Calcutta, reached Galle on the 19th instant at about 9 A.M., but did not continue her voyage till 7 A.M. of the 22nd, she was consequently nearly three days in harbour.

This practice on the part of the contract carriers of the public mails is considered by the Chamber of Commerce so objectionable that they trust a prompt and energetic remonstrance by his Excellency the Governor-General in Council will prevent a recurrence of a great public inconvenience.—I have the honour to be, &c.,

(Signed) H. W. I. Wood, Secretary.

No. 651 A.

From A. M. MONTEATH, Esq., Under Secretary to the Government of India, to the Secretary to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, dated Simla, the 3rd August 1865.—Home Department.

Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your two letters dated the 20th and 24th instant respectively, and in reply to inform you that a copy of your communications has been forwarded to the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for India.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient Servant,

(Signed) A. M. MONTEATH.

Under Secretary to the Government of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GREAT DISTRESS prevails in the city of Lucknow. The price of grain is somewhat lower than it was before the rains set in; still until the yield of the crops now on the ground is beyond doubt, no material decrease in the price of the necessaries of life will be made by the corn dealers. A good Government that took a permanent interest in the welfare of its subjects might prevent the very great and constantly recurring fluctuations in the price of food, by simply taking advantage of what, in this country, nature has lavishly furnished.—Oude Gazette.

MR. GEORGE TREVELYAN.—The return of Mr. George Trevelyan for Tynemouth has added to the new Parliament a gentleman who, to use his own language, has served a severe apprenticeship to his father, and has devoted himself to acquire, in the first-class port of Calcutta, the details relating to the trading and commercial interests. The shipowners and traders of North Shields have swallowed these brave words, and the author of the "Letters of a Competition-wallah," and of "Cawnpore," is now a member of the Legislature. He will enter that Legislature, however, not by virtue of his abilities as a writer, not as the hard-worked apprentice of the first-class port of Calcutta, but by the same title that Louis Napoleon first presented himself to his countrymen—as the nephew of his uncle. We have yet to see whether the mantle of Macaulay has fallen upon the youthful senator. His early career, up to the present moment, has certainly not been a success. We willingly admit the many readable, and sometimes even brilliant, passages that adorned the "Competition-wallah." Amidst pages full of prejudice and detraction, there were occasionally flashes of eloquent description. On the whole, however, the book was very readable, and in England, certainly, it was a success. The great fault, in our opinion, was the evident want of sincerity which characterised the political opinions of the writer. It was but too apparent that Mr. Trevelyan was writing to make his way in England, and that he was working up to opinions which were fashionable in high political circles. The same fault was greatly exaggerated in "Cawnpore." In his last work, he scoffs and sneers at the people of Calcutta—that is, at all classes of society in Calcutta except the civilians. If any class more than another is singled out for his especial scorn, it is the Calcutta merchant. Yet, at Tynemouth, where it was his interest to pretend a knowledge of things mercantile, he did not hesitate to state that he had served an apprenticeship under those very men who appear stigmatised in his book as cowards and bullies!—Englishman.

THE LATE RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—This occurred to the down mail train at the Cawnpore Station, East Indian Railway, on the 2nd August. This train, due at about 3 A.M., when it arrived at the goods shed, about three or four hundred yards from the station, and consequently still going at a considerable speed, left its own line for the goods siding and ran into the goods train which was being unloaded at the sheds. It appears that, at the place of junction between the mail rail and siding, the point had been carefully locked by the two pointmen stationed there, so as to permit the goods train to proceed, without disturbing them from the sleep to which they betook themselves. The Jemadar, who ought to have satisfied himself that the pointmen were on the alert for the down train, thought it sufficient to tell a chuprassie to see to the matter, and the chuprassie contented himself with giving a shout from near the passenger station, without seemingly thinking any answer requisite. Thus the two trains came into collision, the engines were locked fast together, and three carriages behind either engine were piled one on the other. Six natives were killed on the spot, and one died shortly after. The latter was an honorary magistrate in the Cawnpore district, named Kinder Sing, and two of the others were his servants. The head of one of the victims was completely severed from his body. A native, who was unloading oil-casks from the goods-train, was crushed, and is not expected to live; others, who had received more or less injuries, were taken to hospital. There were only two English travellers in the train, one of whom, Sir William Hamilton, was slightly injured. The magistrate of Cawnpore has been most prompt in inquiring into the cause of the melancholy accident. The two pointmen, to whose carelessness the disaster appears to be entirely due, have been committed to the sessions on a charge of culpable homicide, and the chuprassie who, it is proved, warned the pointmen in ample time of the near approach of the train, has been exonerated from all blame. The Sir William Hamilton mentioned above is Captain Sir William Hamilton, Royal Artillery. He is said to have received some severe bruises about the head and body.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR'S LEVEE.—The levee which his Honour the Lieut.-Governor held on Saturday last, on board his yacht the Rhotas, was well attended; but we cannot help thinking there was a stiffness and coldness about his manner towards the European section of the community, in strange and marked contrast with his melting condescension to the natives, to every one of whom he had a word to say. Perhaps he took pity on the excessive humility, bordering on servility, which marked the demeanour of nine-tenths of them, as they stood with folded hands and bated breath, listening to the gracious words which fell from the lips of the great Hakim, the dispenser of so many good things to craving minds. In the afternoon there was an aquatic exhibition, in which fishermen paddled in fishing boats—et voila tout, as far as we could make out. At night there was a ball on board the yacht, and as we have not heard of any casualties we suppose it went off to general satisfaction.—Dacca News, Aug. 12.

THE LATEST OPIUM SALE.—The following is the result of the opium sale held by Messrs. Mackenzie, Lyall, and Co., on the 11th August :—

	Chests.	Highest.	Lowest.	Proceeds.
Behar ...	2,920	1,070	1,025	30,57,900
Benares...	2,135	1,045	1,025	25,19,175

The number of chests was the same as at the sale July 10. The present sale exhibits a marked increase in the prices realised. This increase in price was even greater in the biddings for Benares than for Behar opium. The difference will be well shown in the singular fact that the lowest price realised on each case was the same, Rs. 1,025, and that although the quantity of Behar opium sold exceeded that of the Benares by 485 chests, the total proceeds show that the latter fetched Rs. 36,725 more than the former, a feature peculiar to Thursday's sale, and which has not, we believe, been witnessed for a considerable time. The following is an analysis of the sale :—

Behar ...	Rs. 205	increase in the highest price.
Benares ...	250	" " " lowest price.
Behar ...	170	" " " average price.
Benares ...	240	" " " proceeds. "
Behar ...	189 1 4	" " " "
Benares ...	241 13 3	" " " "
Behar ...	553,125	" " " "
Benares ...	588,850	" " " "

The total increase in the proceeds represents no less than Rs. 11,40,975. In the July sale there was a falling off as compared with the sale in June of Rs. 1,27,000. August's sale is, therefore, better than that for June by a little over ten lacs, a leap upwards on the prices which must have favourably astonished the Revenue Authorities.

ACCIDENT AT PORT CANNING.—CANNING TOWN, August 12.—The new wooden jetty built by the railway company, of which I made mention in my last letter as being finished, has been completely washed away, through the bank below it sinking. A more complete wreck I never witnessed. The circumstance of the bank gradually giving way was noticed months ago, and suggestions were, I believe, made for its stoppage. These injunctions were received with a deaf ear, and here we see the result. The expenditure of a few hundred rupees would have saved a work which had cost upwards of five thousand. It has now, however, become compulsory for the railway company to take up a matter which should have engaged their attention long ago, viz., the laying of stone ballast along the bank of the river, wherever the jetties are constructed. The patent iron jetty is likely also to be washed away if proper remedies are not promptly applied. The bank just below it is fast sinking, and a very great difference, for the worst, is apparent now, to that which it had some five months back. This jetty alone has cost near upon Rs. 30,000, and some means ought surely to be taken to save it. The Grand Conde was, at the time the accident occurred, alongside of the jetty, but, however, through the timely assistance of the station master, Captain Jones, no damage occurred.—August 13, 9 A.M.—The land slip to-day is something frightful. It has piece by piece been falling in all last night, cutting through the strand and creating a space of one hundred feet square. It has not stopped yet. Some state that the river intends taking a new course, others that a canal was formerly on that spot, and that it is likely to reopen again. Means are, however, being taken to remedy any further progress being made by it, but this I fear will be useless for the present.—August 14, 5 P.M.—The land slip has enlarged considerably since my note of yesterday. It is now some 300 feet in length and 150 in breadth; its encroachments are nearly over; it cannot do much more harm. The Strand-road has been completely cut through, causing a stoppage of traffic to and from the railway-station eastward up the Strand-road. Heavy earthwork is being resorted to in order to construct a temporary roadway. The remains of the destroyed jetty still keep floating about the spot where it fell. We have had a number of visitors during the last two days, and all mingled with surprise, attribute the accident to the river undermining that spot, and the bank consequently falling right in. There is no further fear to be apprehended that any more of the bank will slip away. The eddy has exhausted its strength.—Hurkaru.

THE CHARGE AGAINST MR. FRAZER.—A Calcutta correspondent of a Bombay paper gives the following account of this case, as far as it has yet gone :—The city has busied itself this week in the case of Mr. Frazer, manager of the Indian Peninsula, London and China

Bank, who has been charged with criminally misappropriating the money of the bank to the extent of one hundred and fifty thousand rupees. Though the case has occupied the court several days, it is really a very simple one. Mr. Frazer was manager of the bank and had a current account with it. He appears to have been dealing somewhat extensively in shares, and has had a most fluctuating account during the few months that the Bank has been open. When Mr. Frazer's account was considerably on the debit side, the subordinate officers frequently drew his attention to the "irregularities" of the account; but Mr. Frazer, being the manager, overruled them. Things went from bad to worse; and Mr. Deane, the accountant, made a representation of the matter to head-quarters, and he received instructions and authority to supersede Mr. Frazer in the management. In the meantime, however, Mr. Frazer's account was getting worse, and was about a lac and a half to his debit. This state of the case was again represented to him by his subordinates, when Mr. Frazer seems to have hit upon a plan to turn the balance in his favour. He paid in a cheque for Rs. 1,63,500; but told the clerks to enter it as cash, or to "treat" it as cash; and further instructed them that the cheque was not to be realised, or, in other words, it was not to be presented for payment at the National Bank, where it purported to be payable. The native broker who gave the cheque says the agreement with Mr. Frazer was, that the latter should give him a lot of shares upon which he could obtain sufficient funds to honour the cheque. These shares were not forthcoming, and the cheque was returned to the broker, who says his brother destroyed it. He also says he gave no other cheque. And yet it comes out in evidence that Mr. Frazer gave the bank a second cheque in substitution for the first, with the same instruction to treat it as cash, but not to realise it. This point has not yet been cleared up, as the case for the prosecution only has been gone through. I do not enter into the evidence adduced to show that Mr. Frazer wished to "skedaddle," and took away his furniture down the back-stairs of the bank. That may give rise to inferences, but I confine my remarks to the graver charge involved in reference to the account. It may be premature to enter judicially upon an examination of the case until Mr. Frazer enters upon his defence. He has always represented that his account was covered by ample securities, and that the charge against him cannot be maintained. In this opinion many people coincide, though the fact of the magistrate remanding him to the lock-up would almost indicate that the bench looks at the case very seriously. However the matter may turn on technical points of law, it is evident that Mr. Frazer has made use of the bank's money in a way that would not have been permitted to any other man. This may be an abuse of his position as manager of the bank, but it yet remains to be seen whether the criminal charge can be sustained.

MILITARY ITEMS.—We hear that Brigadier-General Mulcaster is to go to Agra when Brigadier-General Harris, who has been promoted, is gazetted, and that Brigadier-General Dunsford goes to Mooltan.—We understand that a representation has been made to the Indian Government as to the unsuitability of Hindostanee regiments for service in the Cossyah hills, on account of the excited state of the people there.—It is reported that the Bengal Sappers and Miners are about to be reorganised on a very liberal footing. The number of both officers and men is to be increased, and an "instruction branch" formed.—We learn, on good authority, that the A-14 Battery of Artillery, which recently returned from China, and which it was supposed would be disbanded, is to be sent to Singapore, and formed into a garrison there.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN FITZMAURICE, R.A.—We regret to hear the death of Captain Fitzmaurice, Royal Artillery, Adjutant of the Artillery Brigade in Oudh. The melancholy event occurred at Mussoorie on the 3rd instant. Captain Fitzmaurice had, early in 1863, met with an accident in a rather extraordinary manner, and from the effects of which he was obliged to go on sick leave to England. While stepping out of his buggy one Sunday evening at the church door at Lucknow his foot slipped. He fell, and put his knee out of joint, and otherwise so injured himself that he was confined to his bed for several months afterwards. His stay in England, however, seemed to have quite restored him, and when he came out, about four months ago, he looked stouter and heartier than ever. He was not long in Lucknow, however, before he took seriously ill from fever and affection of the kidneys, brought on by exposure to alternate heat and cold. He was then hurried away to the hills, but never showed any symptoms of improvement, and at length died on the 3rd, deservedly regretted by all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance. He was a capital officer, and a very worthy man.

CHEAP TRAVELLING BY RAILWAY.—With its usual liberality, the East Indian Railway has again come forward to assist us in the enjoyment of our annual holiday. Every facility is afforded us to defy time and space, and see all that is to be seen as far as the railway will carry us, at a cost adapted to the shortest purses. For Rs. 120 first-class passengers will have an opportunity of travelling 2,086 miles, and visiting all places of interest on the route; while second-class passengers may accomplish the same for Rs. 70, or about three-farthings a mile. The railway company are as liberal with regard to the time allowed as to the fares charged, the tickets holding good for a full month, going and returning. The pious Hindoo can go to Benares and back, returning any day within the time specified, for the insignificant sum of Rs. 12, the distance travelled by rail being 1,080 miles, or nearly four miles for a penny, one farthing a mile, or about the Brighton Sunday Excursion rate, with a much greater privilege as to time.

THE JUMNA BRIDGE.—A further, and, if we mistake not, a final testing of the Jumna Bridge is to take place in the presence of Lieutenant-Colonel Drummond, R. E., and the chief railway officials. A greater weight than hitherto is to be concentrated on one spot, and thus put the bridge to the severest of all possible trials. Since we last wrote on the subject, the works on the north side have been progressing rapidly. The last of the arches which form the viaduct over the road at Motteegunge was keyed some days ago, and no time has been lost in continuing the roadway. The line will be opened on the 15th August. It is pleasant to think that an uninterrupted journey from Calcutta to Delhi is so soon to be realised, and we congratulate all those who have had any hand in the undertaking, in having anticipated, by a couple of months, the date fixed for the opening of the bridge to the public.—Pioneer.

THE RUMOURED MURDER OF LIEUTENANT CAMPBELL.—We are very sorry to have been unwittingly the cause of giving vent to a report, which we now have every reason to believe has no foundation. We allude to the rumoured murder of Lieutenant Campbell, of H.M.'s 90th Foot, whilst travelling in Cashmere. General credence was given to the story for some days, both at Muree and Rawul Pindie, and it is only by a private letter that we learn that a note had been received from the officer in question, bearing a date later than that of his alleged death. We, therefore, take the earliest opportunity of correcting a mistake, for being guilty of which we are the more sorry as it must necessarily have been the cause of great anxiety and grief to his friends and relations.—Pioneer.

HUMAN SACRIFICES.—The Hurkaru says:—We stated some time ago that the Rajah of Dhulbhoom, in the Hazareebaugh district, was accused of offering a human sacrifice to the goddess Rokinee, and was acquitted by the Sessions Court for want of direct evidence against him. We now hear that the British authorities there have destroyed the image of the goddess in question, as the repeated cause of human sacrifices in that quarter. If our information be correct, we hail this evidence of vigorous action on the part of the authorities, in a direction in which it is sadly needed, with great satisfaction. Without at all wishing to advocate any iconoclastic theories, it is impossible to refrain from urging the demolition of these hideous images wherever they may be found, before which the blood of defenceless and innocent people is relentlessly poured out.

ALLEGED FORGERY BY A GENTLEMAN.—The Delhi Gazette says:—The other day a European called at the Delhi Bank and requested a loan of Rs. 200 on the security of Lieutenant ——. The manager agreed, and gave him a promissory note to sign, and to get it attested by his surety, whom he brought with him for the purpose. After the lapse of an hour he came back and presented the note signed by himself in the name of William —— and Lieutenant ——. On this the bank gave him the sum of Rs. 200. An accident caused the Lieutenant to be communicated with in the course of the day, when it appeared that the note was a forgery, the supposed author being the son of an officer of his acquaintance who has disappeared from the station.

FEMALE EDUCATION.—So far as education is concerned, we are glad to learn that the Government of India, on the recommendation of that of the North-Western Provinces, has sanctioned the establishment of a European Female Normal School at Loodianah, and two others for males at Agra and Meerut respectively, at a cost of about Rs. 25,000 per annum, subject to the approval of the Secretary of State. The European Female Normal School is to be conducted on an efficient footing. A European lady superintendent is to be appointed on a salary of Rs. 400, and two European mistresses on Rs. 200 each per mensem.

THE BORE IN CALCUTTA.—Yesterday morning (Aug. 15) the long-predicted Bore made its appearance in the river in full force, to the no small satisfaction of numerous persons who had been on the look-out for the phenomenon during the last few days. Its effect, as viewed from the ground of vantage we had secured upon a house-top on the strand, was extremely fine as it advanced in a long line of tumbling foam from the bend of the river at Ford Point striking the tall ships at their moorings, and hurrying along the smaller craft that had put out from the shore with a view of profiting in their upward course by the wild rush of the wave. We have not heard of any casualty caused by the Bore amongst the shipping.

RAILWAY BRIDGES AND SLEEPERS.—A rumour has reached us (for the truth of which, however, we cannot vouch), that on account of the unsatisfactory state of the bridges and the ant-eaten sleepers on the line of the East Indian Railway between Cawnpore and Delhi, it is under consideration whether or not to close that portion of the line, at any rate for the present. The bridge over the Hindun, near Delhi, we understand, is really unsafe, and trains have to be taken over it very slowly and cautiously.—Mofussilite.

CONCESSION TO RAILWAY TRAVELLERS.—Railway companies have been authorised by Government "to receive currency notes of other circles of issue than the one in which notes are tendered," provided they be tendered in payment of railway fares and charges for baggage. Carriage for merchandise must not be included in the arrangement.—Delhi Gazette.

THE SOVEREIGN NOT A LEGAL TENDER.—A Parliamentary return, which we have just received, publishes a despatch in which Sir C. Wood declines to make the sovereign a legal tender in India, on the ground that the facts submitted by the secretary to the Bank of Bengal, and urged on his consideration by the Government of India, are not sufficient to justify that step. Yet in seven months the Bank of Bengal has received and paid, at par, no less than £650,000 worth of sovereigns, and the want of the legal tender has so flooded the currency department with gold that the legal limit of one-fourth has been almost reached.—Friend of India.

THE COSSYAHs who were implicated in the murder of the late Mowigam Rajah have been sentenced to various terms of imprisonment. It appeared during the trial that the Rajah was in the habit of oppressing and maltreating the Cossyhs in an unusual degree, and of taking away their cattle, and also of imprisoning their women and children. In March last the late Rajah demanded from them a share of the money they had earned by working on the roads; this they declined to give him. The Rajah in person, accompanied by his Taikes, went to plunder the Cossyah villages, and an affray took place, and the Rajah was unfortunately slain.

STATION INTERPRETERS.—The appointment of station interpreters will cease from the 1st proximo. Any officer who has passed P.P.H., the present second standard, may in future be appointed by the officer commanding the station to interpret to any station court, on the allowance of five rupees per diem, and to any court assembled under the orders of the Government, or the Commander-in-Chief, on ten rupees per diem.

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS.—The second quarterly statement of the accidents in the East Indian Railway Company shows that, from 1st April to 30th June last, fifty-six cases of accidents happened. There are twelve cases of dead bodies found in the railway carriages, and twelve cases of deaths by accidents on the rail; the rest are wounds and collisions.

THE VICEROY, says rumour, will visit Rajpootana during the ensuing cold season, passing through Bhurtpore, Jeypore and Ajmere, en route to the ancient capital of Oodeypore. At Ajmere, the head-quarters of the Governor-General's Agent, his Excellency will probably remain a week.—Delhi Gazette, August 15.

COLONEL E. [B. JOHNSON, C.B., of the Royal (late Bengal) Artillery, is gazetted Assistant Military Secretary to his Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief from the 10th July, 1865.

MAJOR GENERAL COLIN TROUP, C.B., is gazetted to the Divisional Staff of the army, in succession to the late Major-General Sir S. Corbett, K.C.B.

COTTON CULTIVATION IN MADRAS.—We gather from the returns published by the Board of Revenue, that at the end of June last there were 18,01,316 acres under cotton cultivation, assessed at 22,52,062 rs., as compared with 18,14,487 acres assessed at 23,19,427 rs. at the same date last year. In the districts of Ganjam, Vizagapatam, Godavery, Nellore, Madras, North Arcot, Tanjore, Trichinopoly, where the staple is not produced in any very large quantity, and in the Kistna district, where it is extensively grown, the area of cultivation is steadily increasing, but in Coimbatore, where grain appears to offer a surer and larger profit, the cultivation has fallen off 50,000 acres during the twelve months. In Bellary a decrease to almost the same extent is reported, and in Cuddapah, Kurnool, South Arcot, Tinnivelly and Salem, the cultivation is gradually declining. We also observe that the cultivation of indigo in this Presidency is rapidly decreasing; and that 1,14,585 acres only, assessed at 2,82,847 rupees, were under cultivation at the end of June last, against 1,54,449 acres assessed at 3,62,874 rs., at the same date in 1864. In Cuddapah the decline in the area of cultivation exceeds 50 per cent. of the area under cultivation last year, and in South Arcot, the largest indigo field in our Presidency, 53,560 are now under cultivation, against 57,183 acres last year. Kurnool now devotes barely 3,800 acres to this unremunerative staple, whilst in 1864 she employed 20,047 in its cultivation. In Vizagapatam and North Arcot the cultivation is on the same scale as it was last year.

CHOLERA AT NAGPORE.—We regret to say that cholera has visited the station during the past week, and we have to record the deaths of Mr. Hughes, of the Telegraph Department, and Mr. Campbell, of the Ordnance Department, who were both buried on Sunday evening last. Among the natives in the city sickness is very prevalent; this is chiefly caused by the want of proper drainage.—Central India Times.

A CAUTION TO SPORTSMEN.—It is with regret we have to record the occurrence of a serious accident, a few days ago, in the Narsingpore district. Lieutenant Doveton, of the Forest Department, fired at a chikara, and the ball glancing off the animal hit one of his servants, who was standing among a group of villagers quite out of the line of fire. A coroner's inquest returned a verdict of accidental death.

EARTHQUAKE AT COIMBATORE.—The collector of Coimbatore has reported to the board of revenue that on the evening of Saturday, the 24th of June, at about twenty minutes past eight o'clock, the shock of an earthquake was felt at that station by many of the European and native residents, and that its direction was from north-east to south-west.—Madras Athenaeum.

CENTRAL ASIAN AFFAIRS.

The taking of Tashkund by the Russians is a fact to pause over. The line of operations has been all along the left bank of the Jaxartes; and only two years ago there had been completed an uninterrupted chain of forts and walls pushed on as far as Kali Rahim, which is thirty-two miles from the city just conquered. That city is the key of all conquests in Central Asia, situated about 800 miles from Srinuggur. The taking of Tashkund was, however, reported at St. Petersburg on the 10th of October 1864, so there is no especial novelty in the fact. It is worth while reflecting, nevertheless, how slow has been the progress about which we hear such doubts, surmises and apprehensions in the political world.

So far back as 1820 great agitation prevailed all over Khiva and Kokan concerning the movements of the Russians. The whole country was scoured by troops of horsemen with orders to slay every one who bore the slightest resemblance to a Russian. The pretence under which Russia sheltered her aggressive policy was, that many of the Khirgiz tribe, who yielded to her supremacy, had been captured by the Kokanites and Khivites and sold into slavery; and a great force was despatched over the Steppes between the Aral and Caspian Seas. The hapless force never returned to Russia, but after suffering unutterable hardships is said to have perished miserably for want of water. An inferior force despatched down about the same time was never even heard of again. After such warnings Russia completely changed her tactics. Finding war fruitless she tried diplomacy, an art of which she is pre-eminently mistress, and events have proved that she has been completely successful. Fends have been fostered between the Audijanis and Kokanis, and Russia has offered to be arbitrator and peacemaker. Splendid presents, ushered in with every possible ostentation, and accompanied by autograph letters from the Czars of all the Russias, have poured into Yarkund. Emissaries from the Taeping dynasty have been met, and civilities and cordialities exchanged. All these things have been long known at the Court of the British ruler of India, and considerable councils have taken place thereon. The Mussulman religious power has been largely used in these Central Asian disturbances. The crafty Mollah has led many a noble tribe to destruction, and escaped scot-free himself.

The chief policy of Russia is to aggrandise her trading importance as to the greatest territorial power in the world, to equal, in fact, the combined maritime influence of France and England. Russia on the sea is comparatively—but only comparatively speaking—insignificant. There is fair reason for rivalry in so proud a nation as that whose boundaries extend over myriads of miles of Europe and Asia with the two foremost nations of the West. The rivalry costs much money and blood, and England at least can afford to watch the expenditure patiently for another half century.—Dellhi Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE FOUNDATION STONE OF A COLLEGE AT POONA for training natives as civil engineers was laid by the Governor of Bombay on the 9th inst. Half the cost of the building—Rs. 50,000, £5,000—has been delayed by Mr. Cowasjee Jehangheer Padyamoney, a wealthy and well-known Parsee of Bombay.

RETURN OF THE S.S. "LORD CLYDE," FROM STRESS OF WEATHER.—The Bombay Coast and River Company's steamer Lord Clyde, which left on the 7th instant for Aden, laden with rice and grain, returned to Bombay on the 16th, short of fuel. Shortly after leaving Bombay she fell in with bad weather, and then experienced a succession of gales, against which she could make little or no headway. Captain Thearle stood on bravely until it became evident the coal bunkers would be empty long before the steamer could possibly reach Aden. Under these circumstances a return to Bombay was the only alternative, however annoying and humiliating it might be. It is to be hoped the Sir Bartle Frere, which left on the afternoon of the 16th for the same port and similarly laden, will have a better passage than the unfortunate Lord Clyde.

SOCIETY IN BOMBAY.—There is a rage for propriety just now in India—the sober Vice-regal Court having led the way. A Bombay correspondent of the Pioneer does not seem quite to like it. He says:—"Balls and parties are still tremendously sought after and largely attended; society is rather different here, I think, to what it was on the Bengal side a few years ago. I have never been in any place in India where there was less scandal, that is, for its size. Every one is so tiresomely respectable and particular that very little fun goes on indeed; as a lady said to me the other day,—People say it is so hard to be good, but it seems to me that the difficulty is to be bad."

INSOLVENCY IN BOMBAY.—The Gazette says:—We understand that a Bill is to be introduced into the Legislative Council to amend the law of insolvency in this presidency. The nature of the measure, we believe, is to assimilate the present insolvency law to the bankruptcy law of England, especially in one important particular. The Insolvent Act in India allows any petty creditor—no matter how small the sum due—to force his debtor into the Insolvent Court, despite the wishes of his other creditors, whereas in England it requires a majority of the creditors to determine whether or not the debtor's estate shall be carried into the Bankruptcy Court. There can be no doubt that to deprive individual creditors of such unlimited power as they possess in India is decidedly necessary and proper, as it protects debtors against the spleen or vindictiveness of creditors for, perhaps, the most trifling amounts.

DAMAGE TO A RAILWAY BRIDGE.—The Bombay Gazette says:—We hear that a bridge on the Bombay and Baroda Railway, over a nullah some forty yards broad, near a station called Bysur, at a distance of sixty miles from Bombay, was so much injured by the heavy rains of last week, a large portion of the masonry having been carried away, that the up-train from Baroda, on Friday, the 19th, was stopped on the other side of the bridge, and the passengers were brought on by a train sent from Bombay to fetch them, and did not reach the Grant-road station till Saturday morning. A supply of building materials and a gang of workmen were sent on to Bysur on Friday, when the damage to the bridge became known here. The great bridges on the line remain very firm and in sound condition, having been very materially strengthened since last year. They have hardly been tried yet, however, by this year's monsoon, as the rain last week did not extend further north than Baroda, and at Ahmedabad a few days ago only ten inches had fallen for the whole season.

ALLEGED COMMERCIAL FRAUDS.—A case is undergoing investigation in the Bombay Police Court in which three native directors of the Commercial Finance and Stock Exchange Association are charged with purchasing at a premium four thousand shares of that association from six fictitious persons, with a view to defraud the company.

COLONEL PLAYFAIR, political agent at Zanzibar, arrived in her Majesty's steamer Lyra on the 14th. He has been ill for some time past, and was obliged to leave very suddenly on that account. The Sultan leaves Zanzibar about the 25th of next month. He will be accompanied by three frigates, and comes to Bombay for the purpose of paying a visit. It was Colonel Playfair's intention to have travelled in company with the Sultan, had his health permitted him to have waited long enough.

THE IMPERIAL BANK OF BOMBAY has obtained an order from the High Court against the Eastern Financial Association, authorising the Bank to proceed to recover from the debtors of the Eastern Financial the amount of the debt due to it by the association for which they have obtained judgment. It is the intention of the Bank to proceed in the first instance against Mr. Premchand Roychand, who is entered—rightly or wrongly we do not pretend to say—in the list of debtors to the Eastern, as a debtor to it to the extent of seven lacs.

ACCIDENT AT POONAH.—We hear that a rather serious accident has occurred to Mr. Percival. The buggy in which he was driving in company with Major Clerk, upset on the old Gymkhana ground. We are sorry to state that Mr. Percival is rather severely injured. Major Clerk escaped with very slight bruises, but the vehicle was completely smashed.—Poonah Observer.

THE LATE JUGONNATH SUNKERSETT.—A subscription list for the purpose of establishing a memorial in honour of the late Honourable Jugonnath Sunkersett has been put in circulation. The names of some of the leading people of Bombay have been registered, and it is believed that a large sum will be realised.

A MOST DISASTROUS STORM has taken place at Hyderabad and Kotree, in Scinde. Fortunately only one life was lost; but an immense number of houses have been either wholly or partially destroyed.

EXTRA STEAMERS BETWEEN BOMBAY AND SUEZ.—The Bengal and Bombay Steam Ship Company have determined to despatch a steamer once a month between Bombay and Suez, and vice versa, in connection with steamers from Alexandria to Liverpool, for the conveyance of passengers and cotton.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL HAWKINS, R. A.—This officer, we regret to say, died on Wednesday, and was buried the following morning, H.M.'s 95th Regiment furnishing a wing as a firing party, and the band and drums. Col. Hawkins had been to Ghizree for the benefit of his health, but was brought back in a very dangerous state on Saturday, from which he never rallied.—Sindian, Aug. 5.

INTERPRETERS.

Aug. 3.—No. 755.—The following regs. on the subject of the appointment of interpreters are laid down for information and guidance:—

British Troops.—An interpreter will be allowed, as at present, in each regiment of her Majesty's British cavalry and infantry, on the following allowances:—Staff salary, Rs. 60 per mensem; stationery, Rs. 10; total, Rs. 70. He must have passed the old interpreters' or P. examination, or the tests under the second standard, as notified in G.G.O. No. 734 of Sept. 9, 1861. When no officer who has passed either of these tests is available, one who has passed the old P. II. examination, or the first standard, under the general order of Sept. 9, 1864, may be appointed temporarily to act; receiving the stationery allowance, and half the staff allowance, viz.:—Stationery, Rs. 10; half staff, Rs. 30; total, Rs. 40. A moonshee on Rs. 30 per mensem will be allowed on the establishment of each British regiment of cavalry or infantry.

Native Troops.—The appointment of interpreters to native regiments, under the new organisation, is not considered necessary, as every officer now on the regular establishment of such a corps must at least have passed the P. H. examination, and eventually all will have qualified under the second standard above referred to.

Station or Garrison Duties.

Formerly the duties of interpreting at courts martial, courts of inquiry, courts of inquest, and courts of requests, &c., convened by officers commanding stations, were performed in turn by the regimental interpreters.

To provide for these and all other duties hitherto appertaining to interpreters that may be extra-regimental, the following rules are laid down:—

In the event of the assembly in a station of a court-martial, or any other court at which the services of an interpreter may be considered essential, the brigadier general or other officer commanding should nominate an officer for the duty. This officer, who should always be selected with reference to his qualifications as an interpreter, must at least have passed either the P. H. examination or that under the present second standard.

The officer so appointed may be a regimental officer, or an officer doing general duty; but, if the former, such occasional employment should not remove him from his regiment, or exempt him from any regimental duty with which the special duty does not necessarily interfere.

For the duties above indicated an allowance will be passed at the following rates:—

For all station or district courts, Rs. 5.

For all general courts-martial or other special courts held by order of the Commander-in-Chief or of Government, Rs. 10.

Should the courts sit more than one day, the above allowance of Rs. 5 and 10 respectively will be passed for each day during which the interpreter's attendance may be actually necessary.

All appointments of station interpreters will cease from the 1st prox., from which date the foregoing rules will come into operation.

ADMISSION TO THE STAFF CORPS.

No. 757 of 1865.—The following paragraphs of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 219, dated 30th June, 1865, are published for general information:—

Para. 3. . . . I shall not object to modify the decision conveyed in my despatch dated Dec. 9, 1861, No. 397, to the extent recommended by your Government, and allow to officers, during the time they are on probation, the option of entering the staff corps from the day following their cadre promotion, instead of from the prior date of their appointment on probation. Under this view, a lieutenant appointed to the staff corps on probation on Jan. 1, 1865, who obtains cadre promotion on July 1, 1865, and completes his course of probation on Dec. 31, 1865, will be appointed to the staff corps as a captain from July 2, 1865, instead of from Jan. 1, 1865.

4. The promotion of an officer during probation will thus go on in the regt. or cadre to which he belongs. The officer who during his period of probation obtains no regtl. or cadre prom., will enter the staff corps from the date of his appt. on probation.

No. 758.—The services of Lieuts. K. C. Pye and J. A. Armstrong, of the R.E., are placed at the disposal of the public works dept.

Deputy Judge Advocate General " 45

2. A special additional office allowance of Rs. 30 per mensem will be allowed to the majors of brigade at Allahabad, Cawnpore, Lucknow, Agra, Umballa, and Meeran Meer, where the duties are unusually heavy.

3. The foregoing rules will come into effect from the 1st prox.

No. 764.—The admission to the Bengal staff corps of Lieut. A. Vallings, of H.M.'s 108th foot, adjt., 1st Punjab inf., announced in G.G.O. No. 481 of May 11, 1865, is to be held to have effect from Dec. 5, 1864, instead of the date previously notified.

MADRAS.

BY THE GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL.

THE LATE HURRICANE AT MASULIPATAM.

Fort St. George, Aug. 8.—The following despatch from the Right Hon. Sir C. Wood, Bart., Secretary of State for India, to H.E. the Hon. the Governor in Council, Fort St. George, dated India-office, London, June 30, No. 17, is published for general information:—

Sir,—I have read with great and painful interest the details of the ravages occasioned by the hurricane of the 1st November last in the town and fort of Masulipatam, transmitted with your despatch dated Feb. 21, No. 5 of 1865. The accounts which you forward, while they exhibit the great and sudden dangers and difficulties of the night, place in a most advantageous light the zeal, energy, and perseverance with which they were encountered by all branches of the services and residents who were on the spot, or whose duties brought them within the sphere of action.

2. With regard to the particular measures which you bring under my notice, I can only say that they have my approval.

3. The means adopted for the prevention of the outbreak of any epidemic disease, comprehending the improved system of drainage, as well as the measures for ensuring a supply of good water, appear to have been most judicious.

4. I agree with Mr. Ellis and Mr. Thornhill in the expediency of retaining the port of Masulipatam as a civil station, and I await the report of the Commander-in-chief as to its retention as a station for native troops, before passing an opinion on the subject. The question will of course reach me in the military department.

5. The sums you have sanctioned for compensation to public officers for the losses they have sustained from the inundation, amounting in the civil department to Rs. 23,456, have my approval. The sums for compensation you have granted in the military department will doubtless be reported in that department, in which it will receive my attentive consideration, as well as the remissions and advances you have proposed in the revenue department.

6. I cannot close my remarks on the subject of this despatch without specially alluding to the valuable services rendered in this trying emergency by Mr. Thornhill, and the officers, soldiers, police, and residents on the spot, of every grade, named in your General Order, No. 111, dated Jan. 25, who so ably supported him; and I must convey to you my cordial approval of the steps you have taken to show your appreciation of their services, and those of the other gentlemen named in the despatch.—I have, &c., (Signed) C. Wood.

Court Martial.

LIEUT. JOHN LEIGH GOLDIE SILVER, GENERAL LIST, MADRAS ARMY.

Head Qtrs., Simla, July 27.—At a General Court Martial, assembled at Singapore on the 5th day of May, 1865, Lieut. John Leigh Goldie Silver, gen. list, of the Madras army, and doing duty with the 34th regt. Chicacole light inf., was arraigned on the following charges:—

First.—For having at Singapore, on Jan. 16, 1865, failed to appear at the place appointed by his commanding officer for parade, in heavy marching order and sword exercise of his regt.

Second.—For having at Singapore, on Jan. 17, 1865, failed to appear at the place appointed by his commanding officer for parade, for batt. drill of his regt.

Third.—For conduct unbecoming an officer and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in the following instances:—

First Instance.—In having at Singapore, on or about Jan. 17, 1865, rendered himself incapable of performing his duties from the effects of intoxication.

Second Instance.—In having at Singapore, on the thirty-first of January, 1865, when under arrest, been incapacitated from attending at a Court of Inquiry into his conduct from the effects of intoxication.

The above being in breach of the Articles of War.

Finding.—The Court, on the evidence before it and what has been stated in defence, is of opinion that the prisoner, John Leigh Goldie Silver, Lieutenant on the General List of the Madras Army, doing duty with the 34th Regiment Chicacole Light Infantry, is:—

Finding on the First Charge.—Guilty; but the Court finds the parade, at which the prisoner failed to appear, to have been for "Battalion drill," and not for "Heavy marching order and sword exercise," as averred in the charge.

Finding on the Second Charge.—Not Guilty.

Finding on the First Instance of the Third Charge.—Guilty of the Third Charge in its First Instance.

Finding on the Second Instance of the Third Charge.—Guilty of the Third Charge in its Second Instance.

Sentence.—The Court sentences the prisoner, John Leigh Goldie Silver, lieutenant on the general list of the Madras army, doing duty with the thirty-fourth regiment Chicacole light infantry, to be dismissed from her Majesty's service.

(Signed) R. G. H. GRANT, lieut. col., R.A., President.

Singapore, May 18, 1865.

RECOMMENDATION BY THE COURT.

The Court having awarded a sentence commensurate with the offences of which the prisoner has been found guilty, begs most respectfully to recommend him to the merciful consideration of H.E. the C. in C., on account of his youth, and the contrition he has expressed.

CONFIRMED.

It appears to the C. in C. that the Court erred in stopping the cross-examination of the first witness on a material point. This would have been sufficient to cause the verdict to be disallowed, but for the sufficient evidence given by the second witness.

H.E. sees no extenuating circumstances in this case. But if the Court thought it was one in which a less punishment than dismissal should have been awarded, it would appear that their sentence should have been in accordance with such views, the charge not being such as to render it imperative on the Court to record such a sentence as dismissal.

H.E. further thinks that this trial, the evidence taken at which is very brief, should have been closed in five or six days at the most, instead of being spread over thirteen days.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, September 27, 1865.

PROSPECTS IN BHOOTAN.

THE Bhootas, who, like most simple people, are inclined to come to natural conclusions, have arrived, it seems, at the idea that the reason why their invaders have not beaten them is that they are unable to do so. The Bhootas believe, at any rate, that we are quite content with the advantage we have gained, and have no intention of pushing our advance into their mountain homes, where we might expect to find them too much for us—preferring to let our troops waste away in the plains in order to show our contempt of the climate. The news of the intended march upon Ponakha has not reached the Bhootas, or, if it has, is evidently considered a mere threat, unworthy of attention. We allude here, of course, to the war party, headed by Tounsoo Penlow, the Deb Rajah being still anxious for peace, and the Dhurm Rajah apparently prepared to do anything for a quiet life, which—with the proverbial result of such amiability—he is sure not to get. According to the latest accounts, Tounsoo Penlow is more defiant than ever. He has a large force in the field, defies the Deb Rajah, and even threatens the Dhurm, and has at last gone so far as to quarrel with Thibet. Considering that Thibet is the only country likely to help him in the war with the British, such conduct is rash in the extreme. We say his conduct, as he may be considered the dictator of the policy towards Thibet, as he was of the reception of the British mission—the treatment of the Envoy in either case being, it is said, much about the same. But whoever may have been the instigator of the proceeding, it is certain that when the Thibetan Agent last made his appearance to receive the usual tribute due to his Sovereign from the Bhootan Durbar, he was met with a decided refusal, couched in terms of choice offensiveness, being told that it was a waste of the tribute to give it to a Power which was both unwilling and unable to afford protection in return. The reason of the rupture is thus apparent; but as it is one thing to have a powerful neighbour neutral, and another thing to provoke him into active hostility, such a course of action must be considered in the highest degree imprudent. It is not to be expected, too, that Thibet will tamely endure what followed—the expulsion of their Agent from the country, and the insulting treatment by which his enforced exit was accompanied.

However, the infatuation of the Bhooteas is so much in favour of the British, and now that decisive measures are determined on, we may expect that the war will be brought to a close. There is one fear, however—that the force assigned for the cold weather campaign will be found too large, and the arrangements of too elaborate a character. The baggage and carriage necessary for so large a body of troops may well be an encumbrance in the peculiar kind of country, and involve loss of time, where time, of all things, is precious. A column of picked men, well led, equipped, and supplied, would probably do the work with a dash, and settle matters at Punakha before the Bhooteas had any idea that we were departing from our usual tardy tactics. On the other hand, there is danger that a campaign conducted in an orthodox manner, with all the requirements of a complete army to supply, would be extended into the hot weather, involving the old tale of sickness and wasting away, and—everything to be done over again. Such at least are the latest fears expressed in Calcutta, and with every desire to take a cheerful view of the case, it must be admitted that they are not quite unreasonable.

OVERLAND POSTAGE.

WE expect to hear of a display of fireworks at the Three Presidencies, in celebration of Mr. Frederick Peel's departure from office—so great is the indignation caused by the proposal of that gentleman to increase the rates of overland postage. "Ruthless," "atrocious," "cold-blooded," are some of the mildest epithets bestowed upon the scheme; and so far from the Indian community "bearing the burden with patience," according to his cheerful expectation, Mr. Peel is assured in so many words that "those concerned never contemplated the possibility of so gross an attempt at imposition." The Englishman, to whom we are indebted for this candid expression of opinion, gives very good grounds, too, for maintaining it. The object of a weekly mail, to be secured by four additional despatches in the course of the year, is not so much, as the writer says, to have more frequent communication with England, as to secure precision and certainty in the despatch of the mails. The Messageries Impériales steamers have for some time past afforded, once a month, an additional means of communication with Europe, and when so few care to avail themselves of the opportunity, it is not to be supposed that four extra despatches by the Peninsular and Oriental, in the course of the year, will yield any very important benefit to the public, except for the reason stated. Yet for such an advantage, whatever it be, our contemporary calculates that Mr. Peel would impose an amount of taxation equivalent to increasing the postage of letters so conveyed nearly nine fold. Thus, forty-eight letters per annum, at 10d. each via Marseilles, now cost exactly £2; while fifty-two letters on the proposed scale of 1s. 4d. would cost £3. 9s. 4d., or £1. 9s. 4d. for the four extra letters, being at the rate of 7s. 4d. each—rather a large sum to pay for an idea, however excellent the idea may be.

The fact is, as the Englishman says, it is false in principle to attempt to tax the public for improvements necessitated by the requirements of the age. It may be that the mail service with India is at present carried on at a loss of £100,000, and that it may cost £30,000 more; but the collateral advantages are still such as to amply repay the two Governments for making good the deficit, and in any case it is a public injury to inflict the cost upon the public. If an experiment is to be made, why not make it in the other direction? Wherever cheap postage is introduced, it is found to lead to a gain instead of a loss; and we doubt whether, as regards India, a full trial of the system has been experienced. Indeed, in that country, even the present tax is regarded as excessive, and while it is considered probable that a reduction would lead to an increase of revenue, it is declared as an absolute certainty that the augmentation proposed would add largely to the existing deficit, and so make matters worse than they were before. This we can quite understand, for though the great commercial houses must correspond regularly with home, at whatever cost, there are little commercial houses which may manage to economise their communications, and upon private persons the change would have a sensible effect. There are opulent people who, profuse in every other item of expenditure, are curiously mean about postage. Men who will pay a tradesman's bill without looking farther into it than the sum total—who would be ashamed, in matters of social expenditure, to seem to care about a guinea one way or the other—may be seen putting themselves to an absurd amount of trouble in epistolary matters—denying themselves an extra sheet, or contenting themselves with a half or a quarter, adjusting the weight again and again with the utmost nicety—all for the sake of saving threepence or sixpence, for which they need not have a moment's consideration. But apart from this it must be remembered that there are large classes of our countrymen in India to whom a saving in postage is a real object, and whose communications with home would be seriously interfered with by an advance upon the present rates. Consider, too, the idle people, who want nothing but an excuse for epistolary inconstancy to their affectionate families and friends. Consider the weapon of defence placed in their hands by enabling them to say—"I really have had nothing to write by the last two mails that was worth the postage!"

We trust, then, that whenever a change is made in the rates of overland postage, it will be for the better instead of the worse; and that in the meantime the realisation of the weekly mail may not be retarded by any such delusive ideas as those propounded by Mr. Peel on the subject.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE NEW COMMISSION UPON THE CLAIMS OF INDIAN OFFICERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—It is generally understood at the clubs that the instructions given by Sir Charles Wood to the members of the new Military Commission on the claims of Indian officers entirely ties up their hands, and renders the Commission simply a sham. Can this be true?

If such be really the case, and the members of the Commission be not free agents, it is due to the Indian officers, to the House of Commons, and to the public, that the fact should be officially avowed, in order that the necessary steps be taken to force a fair decision upon the Government. It is to be hoped, therefore, that, as soon as the new Parliament meets, some member of the House will move for copies of the instructions issued to the members of the Commission, so that all doubt in the matter may be set at rest.

Another question in connection with this unhappy case arises at the present moment. There is a strong rumour afloat that Sir Charles Wood vacates his office in October, and that the Duke of Argyll is to be his successor. How far the change will tend to the advantage of the Indian service remains to be seen. It is probable, however, that if the new Secretary for India listens to the same advisers as those who have the ear of Sir Charles Wood, the result will be found much the same as under the present state of things.

For the double reason, therefore, it is desirable that some independent member of the House exert himself.—I am, Sir, Yours, &c., X. Y. Z.

SCINDE RAILWAY (INDUS STEAM FLOTILLA, PUNJAB, AND DELHI RAILWAYS) COMPANY.

The following are the heads of the report of the directors to the proprietors, to be submitted at the general meeting of the committee to be held September 29:—In the commercial crisis through which the whole of India, but more especially the western portion of that country, has recently passed, the proprietors will be prepared to learn that the traffic on the Scinde

Railway has in some degree suffered. The general trade of the district through which the railway passes has been in a great measure paralysed, and to this cause and to the unsettled state of the cotton market occasioned by the course of events in the United States of America the directors attribute the falling off in the receipts from goods. The trade of the country has also been affected by the prevalence of a great amount of sickness, the heat during the season just ended having been unusually severe, and cholera and other epidemics having carried off large numbers of the population. In the following table is given a statement of the traffic from the date of the opening of the railway to the 30th of June, 1865:—Passengers, £59,646. 4s. 11d.; goods, &c., £256,383. 14s. 7d. Total, £316,028. 19s. 6d. During the half-year ending 30th June last, the number of passengers carried was 58,567; the train miles run were 160,895, and the gross receipts per mile of line open, £369. 15s. 2d. The line and rolling stock are reported to be in good working order, and the traffic continues to be conducted without accident to train or passenger. The Punjab Railway being now opened for traffic throughout its entire length a system of through booking between the Scinde and Punjab Railways has been arranged, and the native merchants appear fully alive to the advantages which are thus placed in their power. It is satisfactory to state that a considerable saving has been effected during the past half-year in the cost of maintenance, and also in the locomotive and other departments, and that quite independently of the fact that a less amount of traffic has been carried, the expenses have been reduced by means of improvements in the organisation of the several establishments. Satisfactory progress has been made with the survey of the Indus Valley, two of the routes originally suggested having now been completely surveyed. The distance between Kotree and Mooltan by the left bank is 480 miles, and that by a line carried along the right bank as far as Sukkur, and from that place to Mooltan upon the left bank, 515 miles, thus showing a saving of 35 miles in favour of the left bank. It is satisfactory to observe that the harbour improvements now in progress at Kurrachee have considerably increased the depth of water at that port.

INDUS STEAM FLOTILLA.—During the half-year ending June 30, 1865, the bi-monthly communication between Kotree and Mooltan has been maintained with regularity, the large steamers having been employed on this service, while the small tugs have been engaged as formerly, in running between Kotree and Sukkur. The number of voyages which have been made since the first vessel of the flotilla commenced running in 1862 is as follows:—In 1862, 28; in 1863, 42; in 1864, 77; in 1865 (to June 30), 33. The revenue returns, after deducting the cost of stores consumed, and the working expenses, leave a surplus amounting in the aggregate to upwards of £69,000, are subject to deduction for the formation of insurance and depreciation funds, in accordance with the provisions of the contract with Government. The traffic on the river during the past half-year suffered from the same causes as those which affected that on the Scinde Railway; but it is satisfactory to observe that a considerable improvement took place in the month of June. One of the small tugs, "F," which had been employed by the chief engineer of the Scinde Railway while engaged in the prosecution of the Indus Valley survey, has been sold, with one 35-ton corrugated iron barge, to the Nawab of Bahawalpore, for the sum of £4,850. The directors having given their serious attention to the question of the provision of new vessels, have determined to entrust the construction of one steamer and two barges to each of the following firms:—Messrs. Laird Brothers, of Birkenhead; Messrs. Robt. Napier and Sons, of the Clyde; and Messrs. Samuda Brothers, of Poplar; all of whom undertake that the boats shall be completed and ready for shipment to India in about six months. The designs on which these vessels are to be constructed have been prepared by the builders, in concert with Captain Wood, the agent and superintendent of the flotilla, who recently came to England for the purpose of assisting the directors with his experience and advice on this occasion. While the course which has been adopted will, there is every reason to feel assured, secure for the company three thoroughly efficient steamers, it will also have the advantage of affording an opportunity of practically testing upon the Indus the relative merits of three vessels, built each by one of the most eminent shipbuilders in this country, and will thus place the directors in a position to make any future additions to the fleet with the smallest possible delay and risk. The following is a list of the vessels of the flotilla on the Indus:—The Stanley, Sir Charles Wood, Frere, Lawrence, Outram, Havelock, Indus, and Parah, passenger and cargo steamers, Lahore and Mooltan line; tug steamers C, D, and E, for cargo for the Kotree and Sukkur line; besides a number of accommodation and other barges running in connection with the steamers.

PUNJAB RAILWAY.—The directors have the gratification to state that upon the 24th April last the Punjab Railway, 253 miles in length, extending from Umritsur to Mooltan and Sher Shah, was opened throughout for public traffic. The revenue accounts for the half-year ending 31st December, 1864, which have been submitted to Government, show that the balance available towards the liquidation of guaranteed interest advanced by Government amounted to about 17 per cent. of the gross receipts during that period. In the following table is shown a statement of the traffic for the half-years ending 30th June, 1864, and 30th June, 1865. The returns for the latter period being as yet incomplete the figures given are only approximate:—For the half-year ending 30th June, 1864, the total receipts were £10,604; for the 30th June, 1865, the total receipts were £16,400. The weekly receipts during May and June have averaged about £1,065; but during the latter month the receipts have steadily increased, those in the latest week for which returns have been received amounting to £1,405. It is satisfactory to state that the traffic has been conducted without loss of life or property. From Ferozepore, which is situated at a considerable distance from the railway, large consignments of goods have recently been despatched to Raiwind, the nearest station for transmission to Kurrachee. A resolution will be submitted to the proprietors for the purpose of authorising the creation of additional capital, to the amount of £500,000, by the issue of 25,000 shares of £20 each. Upon this proposed addition to the capital of the undertaking the Secretary of State for India in Council has guaranteed 5 per cent. interest.

DELHI RAILWAY.—It is satisfactory to report that during the half-year ending the 30th of June last considerable progress has been made with the works of the Delhi Railway. On the Umritsur district brick burning has been commenced at several points; during the past half-year 7,391,162 cubic feet of earthwork have been executed, and 373,914 cubic feet of ballast deposited; a number of sleepers have been made by the contractors, and arrangements are being made for delivering at Umritsur a further supply, which has been collected by the company at Lahore. On the Jullunder district 30,000 bricks have been burnt; the earthwork has been commenced, and a number of sleepers have been collected at Phillore, on the Sutlej. On the Umballah district 25,370,000 cubic feet of earthwork have been executed, and brickmaking has been commenced. On the Saharunpore district earthwork has been executed to the amount of 6,462,434 cubic feet, and arrangements have been made for burning bricks at several points. On the Meerut district 3,620,916 cubic feet of earthwork have been executed, and 185,562 cubic feet of ballast deposited; 20,000 bricks have been collected at Ghazeeabad, and 290,000 are being burnt in kilns on various parts of the line; 980 cubic feet of concrete have been executed, and 3,600 cubic feet of brickwork in culverts. It has been arranged that the ground which has been reserved within the city of Delhi for the separate stations of the Delhi and the East Indian Railway shall be divided longitudinally, in equal portions, between the two companies. At Ghazeeabad, the point of junction of the two railways, it is proposed that a portion of the station accommodation to be provided shall be jointly used by the two companies, while at the same time a separate portion shall be reserved by the Delhi Railway for the accommodation of its own traffic. During the past half-year considerable quantities of permanent way and other material have been shipped, both for Kurrachee and Calcutta. The directors continue to receive every support and furtherance from the Government, both in England and India, and they have the satisfaction to state that the conduct of the officers engaged in the several undertakings of the company has, throughout the past half-year, been such as to merit entire approval.

EAST INDIA COTTON AGENCY.

An extraordinary general meeting of the East India Cotton Agency (Limited) was held on Tuesday, the 19th inst., at the London Tavern, Bishopsgate-street, to consider the present position of the company, the propriety of cancelling, and (if so resolved) to cancel, the appointment of Mr. Alexander Charles Brice as managing director, and also either to pass a resolution for a voluntary winding-up or to authorise the directors to make further calls not exceeding £2 per share; Mr. R. N. Fowler in the chair.

The Chairman said that this meeting was convened for the purpose of receiving the report of the committee appointed by the shareholders to inquire into the affairs of the company. The report had been handed into the directors, and in the first instance they recommended the cancellation of the appointment of Mr. Charles Brice as their managing director. The board of directors were prepared to give effect to that recommendation, and he therefore, as chairman, begged to move that the appointment of Mr. Brice be cancelled, and that he be removed from his office.

Mr. Rouse seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.

A resolution was passed, enabling the directors to make a call not exceeding £2 per share. A further resolution was passed to the effect that the company be wound up.

Mr. Rouse moved a resolution that the company be wound up voluntarily, and that a call of £1 per share be made to meet pressing emergencies.

The following letter upon the subject of the above, which appeared in the Standard, has been addressed to the editor of that journal. We publish it as the readiest way of correcting the error complained of:—

"SIR,—As one of the committee of the shareholders of the East India Cotton Agency, permit me to call your attention to an error in your report of the proceedings of the meeting of yesterday.

"The resolution passed in regard to the call, was on the amendment of Mr. Rouse, that 'to enable the directors to meet certain debts due, for which we are all equally liable, a call of £1 per share be sanctioned, and that the surplus be used to carry on the operations of the company until the end of the current cotton season, when, say in May or June next, the directors are to convene an extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders, then to decide whether the company should be voluntarily wound up, or whether, if success has attended our operations under new management and the exercise of a strict economy, the existence of this company shall be prolonged.

"Such, sir, was the nature of the resolution passed with the sanction of the directors and the committee of shareholders. It is, therefore, an error likely to prove of serious injury to the company to 'assert that it is to be wound up,' by depreciating most valuable property.

"There can be no doubt that, under good and trustworthy management, it ought to prove one of the most successful enterprises of the day. Hitherto it has only proved a source of profit to its promoter, whose evil influence was fully exposed at the meeting.—I enclose my card, and am, Sir, faithfully yours,

"A SHAREHOLDER.

"London, Sept. 20."

MISCELLANEOUS.

LUCKNOW PRIZE MONEY.—The following notification is published in last night's Gazette:—"The distribution of the second portion of the Lucknow prize money falling to the share of the officers, seamen, marines, &c., forming the naval brigade of her Majesty's ship Shannon, between the 29th June, 1857, and the 21st March, 1858, will commence on Monday, the 2nd October, in the Prize Branch of the Department of the Accountant-General of the Navy, Admiralty, Somerset-house. Agents and other persons holding powers of attorney, prize orders, assignments, or other instruments, by virtue of which they may be legally entitled to claim the share of any person serving in the brigade for the period stated, are requested to present the same at this office. Any officer, seaman, marine, or other person, who may desire to receive his share from the collector of customs or of inland revenue within the United Kingdom, is required to intimate the same by letter to be addressed 'On Prize Business, to the Secretary of the Admiralty, London' (enclosing his certificate of service, or an attested copy thereof, excepting in the case of commissioned officers), in which letter his own place of residence is to be precisely stated, as well as the place of the nearest collector of customs, or of inland revenue, from whom it would be convenient to receive such share of prize money."

DUTCH, INDIA, AND JAPAN.—(THE HAGUE, Sept. 18).—"The opening of the Dutch Chambers took place to-day by King William in person. His Majesty thus alluded in his speech to his Eastern possessions:—"The expedition against the Prince of Nagato, which our fleet, united to the fleets of other Powers, has brought to a glorious termination in Japan, has greatly contributed to establish our relations with that country upon a better footing. The position of our colonial possessions is generally favourable. I regret that the central portion of Java should have so greatly suffered from earthquake. The new administrative measures will tend to increase the prosperity and welfare of Surinam and Curacao. In the course of the present session Bills will be laid before you settling the relations of the press in our East Indian possessions, and for other purposes connected with agricultural and industrial enterprise."

ROYAL NAVY.—(Whitehall, Sept. 23).—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal granting unto Admiral Sir George Francis Seymour, G.C.B., the office or place of Vice-Admiral of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and Lieutenant of the Admiralty thereof, in the room of Admiral Sir Thomas John Cochrane, G.C.B., promoted to be Admiral of the Fleet.

APPOINTMENT.—(Foreign-office, Sept. 16).—The Queen has been graciously pleased to appoint Sidney Locock, Esq., now a second secretary in her Majesty's Diplomatic Service, employed in her Majesty's Legation at the Hague, to be Secretary to her Majesty's Legation in Japan.

DESPATCH OF THE INDIA AND CHINA MAILS.

She took out 100 first and 56 second class passengers; and on freight a general cargo, including 85 boxes specie, value £32,286, for the following ports, viz:—Alexandria—Sovereigns, £10,000. Madras—Gold coin, £160; silver, ditto, gold thread, &c., £410. 4s. Calcutta—Watches, jewellery, &c., £1,078. Hong Kong—Bar silver, £5,000; dollars, £109; gold thread, £346. Yokohama—Dollars, £2,160. Shanghai—Bar silver, £3,385; dollars, £1,240; jewellery, &c., £242. 15s. Hobson's Bay—Watches and jewellery, £1,245. Sydney—Jewellery, £265. Foo-chow-Foo—Jewellery, £115. Amongst the passengers by this mail are Captains Davis, Astley, Humphrey, Busfield, Jones, Parry, Prendergast, Earle, Middleton, and Cudell; Majors Hardy, Drew, and Brown; Lieutenants Clarke, Beattie, Gilpin, Cotton, and Plunkett; Drs. Chippendale and Dalzell; Rev. Mr. Robinson, Colonel Middleton, Ensign Abbott, Cornet Lloyd, Assistant Surgeon Thorburn, Lieutenant Assistant Surgeon Mackaw, Lieutenant Surgeon Bayfield, Lady Pitcairn, and the Hon. W. Beddingfield.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for £230,000 in Bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 20th inst., at the Bank of England. The proportions allotted were:—To Calcutta, £105,100; to Madras, £14,900; and to Bombay, £80,000. The minimum price was as before, 1s. 10½d. on Calcutta and Madras, and 1s. 10½d. on Bombay. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 47 per cent., and on Bombay at 1s. 11½d. about 49 per cent., above these prices in full.

LIEUT.-COL. C. HERBERT, of the Bengal Staff Corps, arrived in Birmingham on Thursday from Portsmouth, in charge of the three sons of his Highness the Nawab Nazim of Bengal, Mirza Syed Hussum Ali, Mirza Syed Hoosein Ali, and Mirza Syed Mahommed Ali and their suite.—Court Circular.

BRITISH BURMAH has made an enormous stride during the past year. Its trade has risen to £10,341,733, or £3,292,708 more than the previous year. Its customs revenue has risen to £203,866, a gain of £35,748, although under the new treaty the frontier customs, which amounted to £9,436 the previous year, were surrendered. The increase of trade was common to both that by land and by sea. The latter amounted to £8,819,754, and the frontier trade to £1,521,978. The increase of the trade seawards was £2,899,663, and that of the inland trade £3,930,045. Colonel Phayre and the advisers of Lord Elgin's treaty have just cause for satisfaction. Free trade is not only a wise but a paying policy in semi-barbarous Burmah as well as in civilised England. In the same year the 1,732,844 people who are scattered sparsely over the 81,446 square miles of British Burmah, paid a gross revenue of £1,016,080, or eleven shillings and ninepence a head, a higher rate than that paid by any other class of our subjects, even if the opium revenue be included. British Burmah may be said to pay its way, for it contributes £301,510 for its military defence. What will it not do with double its present population? Will Sir John Lawrence not encourage the importation of Chinese peasants?

HINDOOS AND THE SACRED RIVER.—An article in the Dacca Prokash, on the subject of the removal of Hindoos when dying to the river side, seems likely to cause some commotion. The article points out in very plain and forcible language that this custom leads to a vast amount of unsuspected crime, and that it is both cruel and indefensible. The Government of Bengal will very probably take action in the matter by instituting an inquiry into the general prevalence of the custom and its effects.

TRAVELLING ALLOWANCES.—We learn that on the recommendation of Mr. Temple, previous to his departure for England, the Governor-General has sanctioned an increase of one-third of the existing rates of travelling allowance granted to the Commissioners, Deputy Commissioners, and Assistant Commissioners in these provinces, on the ground of the dearth of provisions, and of the various privations which ministerial officers in these provinces are generally subject to, when moving from one station to another, especially in the interior of the country.

THE NEW THEORY IN RIFLES.—

Lieutenant James Forsyth, in his excellent work, "The Sporting Rifle, &c.," first promulgated the startling theory that Rifles could be so constructed as to lessen the elevation by increasing the charge of powder. This theory, which the Advertiser has proven to be correct, alters the whole position of Rifles in favour of the sportsman. Formerly, with a high trajectory, the bullet which would have hit a tiger in a vital part at 100 yards, would pass over his back at 25 or 50 yards. By the new system, as elaborated and perfected in DOUGALL'S LOCKFAST BREECHLOADERS, there is a point-blank range to 150 yards, combined with a velocity and smashing power hitherto unknown. (See Times, 11th October, 1864.) No other Rifle possesses the same advantages.

SARSAPARILLA.

WILKINSON'S (late BRIDGE'S) ESSENCE OF FLUID EXTRACT OF RED JAMAICA SARSAPARILLA is appreciated for its Purity, and marked superiority, daily prescribed by the Faculty for Impurities of the Blood, Affections of the Liver, Constitutional Debility, Attenuation of Body, as an Alternative Medicine at the Changes of the Seasons, and for freeing the system from the effects of Mercury.

In India and the Colonies it is extensively used to prevent taking complaints incidental to Tropical Climates, and as a renovator of the system after Sickness Invaluable.

"A superior preparation, that may always be relied on."—Sir Astley Cooper.

"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.

"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medical Review.

"Latterly, in consequence of much debility, &c., subsequent to Cholera, I have freely used 'Bridge's Sarsaparilla' myself, with complete benefit and success."—J. Poett, F.R.C.S.

Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter pints. One pint is equal to eight pints of the ordinary preparations.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against cheap preparations of Sarsaparilla, which, instead of being what they profess, are nothing but a decoction of common herbs, sweetened with molasses, and flavoured with American Winter Green. The genuine has "Thos. Wilkinson (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London," engraved on each bottle.

AGREEABLE SEIDLITZ POWDER in one bottle, protected by a case with measure and spoon included. This preparation is highly recommended, not only as a Mild Aperient, but to allay Fever, Thirst, &c.

AROMATIC TINCTURE OF QUINIDINE for the prevention of Fever, Intermitting or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria. No person exposed to the influence of or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for if taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria. Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by Thos. Wilkinson (late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

MRS. JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR TEETH.—This infallible remedy has preserved hundreds of children when thought past recovery from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as efficacious, tending to produce the teeth with ease; and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery where there are young children; for, if a child wakes in the night with pains in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and copying parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bills, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle.

Sold by all chemists and medicine vendors.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS,

Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 22s, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price, 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d. JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 22s, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

BRAGG'S CHARCOAL BISCUITS afford

speedy relief in case of bile, acidity, indigestion, heartburn, flatulency, impure breath, and children suffering from worms; are an excellent preventive for sea sickness, are made of the purest vegetable carbon, and are recommended by the most eminent of the Faculty.—See Dr. Hassall's Report.

Sold only in tins, 1s., 2s., 4s., and 8s. each, by J. L. BRAGG, Sole Maker, 2, Wigmore-street, Cavendish-square. Also the Pure Carbon, in bottles, 2s. and 4s. each.

COUGHS, ASTHMA, and INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION ARE EFFECTUALLY CURED BY KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.

This world-renowned medicine, which has obtained such celebrity in all parts of the globe, for curing the above-named complaints and other affections of the chest and pulmonary organs, is strongly recommended to all suffering from any of the above disorders, as one trial will be sufficient to prove their undoubted efficacy, being frequently used under the recommendation of the most eminent of the Faculty.

Prepared and sold in boxes, 1s. 1d., and tins, 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 10s. 6d. each, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, &c., 79, St. Paul's-churchyard, London. Sold retail by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Vendors in the world.

N.B.—To prevent spurious imitations, please to observe that the words "KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES" are engraved on the Government Stamp of each box, without which none are genuine.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

—SAFE and SURE.—Day by day are cases of ulcers, wounds, sores, contractions, and deformities cured by these well-esteemed remedies, after all other known means have been tried in vain. Varicose veins and all descriptions of sore, ulcerated, and bad legs, which seem to defy the best surgical skill, succumb in a short time to the soothing, healing, and purifying properties of Holloway's Ointment and Pills. They operate both locally and constitutionally; they strengthen both capillaries and nerves, and regulate the circulation of the blood. The most valued testimonials are constantly received from persons whose chance had directed to Holloway's safe and certain remedies, which effected a complete cure, even after the constitution seemed thoroughly broken down.

EXPANDING SADDLE.GIBSON AND COMPANY

Respectfully invite the attention of MILITARY MEN, EQUESTRIANS, and OWNERS OF HORSES, to their Newly-Invented EXPANDING SADDLE, which admits of ready adjustment to the size of any horse, creating a secure and easy seat without the slightest inconvenience to either horse or rider. The principle of EXPANSION and CONTRACTION comprises a simple arrangement of mechanism within the saddle so perfect, that by merely turning a screw the pad is proportioned to the size and form of the animal, on which it firmly rests with a uniform pressure, and is securely retained in its position by means of an ordinary girth.

This invention has obtained the approval and distinguished patronage of HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, and from the very favourable opinions expressed by competent judges, and all who have had an opportunity of testing its merits, there is no doubt it will come into general use; indeed, its success is already established.

The majority of our Dyes are entirely soluble in boiling water, and will dye without the addition of other ingredients.

ANILINE DYES.—"I shall commence my observations on dyeing, by referring especially to the remarkable and beautiful colours derived from coal tar, the introduction of which into this art may be said to constitute the chief distinction, as far as dyeing is concerned, between the present and the former Exhibition, creating, in fact, a new era in the tinctorial art. Coal tar colours deserve attention for their power, as well as for the facility with which they may be applied, for one grain will deeply tint half a gallon of water, and little or no skill is required for their application."—Vide Report by Grace Calvert, Esq., F.R.S., Ph.D., Honorary Professor of Chemistry.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE have received our usual files of papers from Calcutta to the 22nd of August, Madras to the 28th, and Ceylon to the 31st of that month.

In Calcutta there was little to talk about except Bhootan; and in reference to this subject there was a favourable change—that the preparations for war were once more accompanied by reports of peace. The Deb Rajah was, we are told, still anxious for an amicable arrangement, and had despatched envoys to treat with Lieutenant-Colonel Bruce. A draft treaty, it is added, has been submitted to the Governor-General in Council, and approved by him. "If this treaty," says the Englishman, "receives the assent of the Bhootan Durbar, and Lieutenant-Colonel Bruce is persuaded that the Deb Rajah is in a position to enforce its provisions, the war will be at an end. It is not improbable that the Deb Rajah will accept our terms, which include the surrender by both parties of all prisoners made during the war; but it is evident that in insisting on proof of his ability to carry them out, the Viceroy leaves open a very wide discretion, which, if judiciously used, will prevent our withdrawing from the contest without some more substantial guarantee than a piece of waste paper. There is no sign of diminished preparation on our part to renew the campaign, and we think it extremely doubtful whether the nominal nature of the proposed engagements on the part of the enemy is not a foregone conclusion."

The command of the expeditionary force was still unfilled. Brigadier-General Tytler, who was appointed to the post by the Delhi Gazette, is so reduced in health as to be unable to continue in his present position, and Major-General Showers is not again mentioned. It was "understood" that the officer selected is Colonel D. M. Stewart, Deputy Adjutant-General of the Army.

The story about Mr. Davies having declined to officiate as Chief Commissioner of Oudh was contradicted by the Gazette, which has announced that gentleman's appointment.

The Postmaster-General has doubled the rates of postage from India to China and Australia—to the intense disgust of the Calcutta people, and no doubt of the people of the other Presidencies, when the fact becomes known. The Englishman connects this measure with the warning in reference to Overland charges, and says that the thin end of the wedge has been introduced.

The High Court, says the Hurkaru, has been busy lately in disposing of a couple of cases of a disagreeable complexion. The first was that of a native, the trusted treasurer of the firm of Messrs. Temple and Fenn, attorneys-at-law. By means of forgery and other such delicate means, he managed to defraud his masters of something like £10,000, and then absconded to Moorshe-dabad; where, so little did he fear the detective abilities of the police, he lived in splendour and wasted his ill-gotten substance in coarse debauchery. He was at last recognised by an individual who had gone to Moorshe-dabad on business, and who gave the necessary information to the police, by whom the delinquent was arrested and brought down to Calcutta just as he was about to fly once more. On arriving at the railway terminus he met one of his masters, at whose feet he fell, promising to make a clean breast of it, if further proceedings were abandoned. He was referred to the Court, and there he was sentenced, the other day, to transportation for life. The other case is a more melancholy one, as the prisoner is a European named Fraser, who lately occupied a respectable position in society, who has a wife and family, and who has fallen a victim to the terrible mania for speculation which raged here not long ago, rather than to any want of principle. He had been speculating in shares and lost considerably; to meet his heavy liabilities he drew money from the bank of which he was the trusted manager, and falsified the accounts for the purpose of misleading the directors at Bombay. The case has created great excitement in Calcutta among commercial circles. The jury, which was almost entirely composed of mercantile men, brought in a verdict of guilty. Sentence has been reserved, as the validity of a legal objection advanced against the indictment by the prisoner's counsel has to be determined before a full bench. There are few men who are not perfectly convinced of the guilt of the prisoner, and if he now escapes by reason of some legal quibble, the people of the country will lose all confidence in the High Court.

The Viceroy, it is said, does not acquiesce in the objections urged by the Lieutenant-Governor to placing the management of the port in the hands of a River Trust, and has requested that the Government of Bengal will take immediate steps for carrying the recommendations of the committee into practical effect, with as little delay as possible. The Government of India observes that the points of most immediate importance are, that the authorities at home should at once commence with the bridge over the Hooghly, and that, as it will take five years to complete the bridge, the East India Railway Company should be moved without delay to make the required improvements in their Howrah terminus.

There was no alteration in the state of the money market, which still represented an increasing amount of facilities for which employment could not be found, even at the low rates of interest ruling.

Madras was in its usual tranquil condition. The few items of news which its journals furnish will be found elsewhere.

Ceylon, to judge by the inflammatory style of the Columbo Observer, was in the throes of a political convulsion. The "League" was still progressing, but apparently finding it difficult to get up a satisfactory disturbance. The vacancies caused by the retirement of the offended non-official members of Council, had been quietly filled up.

The next arrival from India will be the Bombay Mail, of which nothing has as yet been heard; but it would be due in the ordinary course of things on Friday next.

Of home news there are a few reports this morning which will be interesting to our military readers. In the first place we find that the report of the Commission upon the claims of Indian officers has been received at the India-office, where, although in a printed form, it is kept sacred from the public eye. Our own efforts to obtain a copy have certainly been unsuccessful, which is to be regretted, as not the smallest advantage can be gained by keeping back, for a few days more or less, an inevitably public document, while to a very large class of our readers its contents are of the highest importance. It is declared, however, by those who know more of most things than other people, that the report has caused great consternation at the Horse Guards, where it has been discovered that the Brevet of the 22nd of March, 1865, has placed the Royal troops in a great minority by the supersession of Royal by Indian officers—in some cases to an extent utterly beyond endurance, and calling, it is considered, for an alteration of some kind. It may be supposed, therefore, that a very pretty quarrel is imminent on the subject, and the probability is that the entire battle will be fought over again by the new Parliament. This, indeed, is the more apparent if we are to accept the statement of a correspondent in our last number, who declared that the re-investigation was something very like a farce, the hands of the committee being completely tied.

It is now believed that if the question cannot be satisfactorily adjusted on the basis of this last report, Sir Charles Wood will decline to have anything more to do with it, and will leave the problem to be solved by a successor. The report mentioned by the correspondent already alluded to, of Sir Charles's resignation next month, has reference, probably, to this point.

One report this morning was to the effect that all officers of twenty-one years' service are to be allowed to retire with a bonus of £2,000. But this is too good to be true, though it is to be hoped that it has a foundation in some liberal arrangement.

The Law Officers of the Crown, we are informed, have given their decision against taking over the Funds. It is likely, therefore, that an Act of Parliament will be passed on the subject.

THE LATEST INDIAN HERO.

It cannot be denied that the Indian army has contributed its fair share to the members of the Order of Valour. The long list of heroes has just received an addition in the person of Captain G. V. Fosbery, of the late 4th Europeans. It was known that Captain Fosbery had been, at the time of his gallant exploit, recommended for the Cross, but in these matters, especially under one so jealous of the honour of the Order as Sir Hugh Rose, there are always delays. The distinction, however, is not the less on that account. In Captain Fosbery's case it was a very great distinction, for that officer has known how to unite great personal daring with an inventive genius of no mean order and considerable literary attainments. It may not be generally known that during the Crimean war, before the recent improvements in the manufacture of ordnance had been seriously considered at home, when the War Department at all events was perfectly satisfied with the old smooth-bore guns, Capt. Fosbery, then an ensign with his regiment, succeeded in rifling, on a plan entirely his own, an old brass gun, and in making with it very excellent practice. The circumstance made some sensation at the station where Captain Fosbery was, and was mentioned at the time by one of the up-country papers, but we never heard that it attracted the notice of the authorities. Captain Fosbery was himself then unable to proceed to England, and when he did go there he found that science had made such progress that his own invention would probably carry with it little weight. But he was not disheartened. On his return to India Captain Fosbery found that the muzzle-loading Enfield rifle was in general use in the European army. He at once set himself to invent a shell which might under certain circumstances take the place of the conical bullet. He brought to the task so much industry and ingenuity that in a few months he had prepared a shell, the effects of which, he thought would be such as had never been before witnessed.

The invention was reported to Government, and, on the breaking out of hostilities on the Punjab frontier, Captain Fosbery was placed in command of a body of marksmen of H.M.'s 71st and 101st regiments, supplied with his shell instead of the ordinary bullet. The result equalled all the inventor's expectations. The shell exploded on striking the object aimed at, and the object so struck was blown to pieces. The dead bodies of the enemy against whom these marksmen were directed showed the extraordinary efficacy of this invention. It prevented all mere wounding. No matter what part of the body was hit, the effect was mortal. An arm in one direction, the legs in another, the trunk in a third, showed its terrible execution. No wonder that the Craig and Eagle's Nests pickets were well defended, nor that every attack of the enemy was repulsed. When the first-named of these positions had been stormed on the 30th October by parties of the 1st Punjab Infantry and the Guide Corps, Captain Fosbery had taken part in the attack as a volunteer, and he was the first man in the trenches. It was this that gave him the Victoria Cross. He afterwards well defended with his shells the position he had contributed to gain. We believe that, as a reward for his invention, the Indian Government ordered to be paid to Captain Fosbery the sum of Rs. 5,000. That officer is now in England. The possession of the Victoria Cross and his inventive genius have made him a man of considerable mark, and he may have it in his power to render still further services to his country. Every practical writer on the subject seems to allow that the scientific improvement of small arms is yet in its infancy. The very best weapon is admitted to be imperfect. Yet this is a period when the British Government have decided upon altering the construction of the weapon given out to the army, and converting them into breech-loaders. The success of the Prussian Needle gun certainly startled Europe. Every one admitted that the Prussian Army possessed a weapon which, by the rapidity of its fire was more than a match for any breech-loader. What effect this has had upon the alteration of the weapon used by the French and Austrian armies has nowhere appeared. Changes in those countries are worked silently and secretly. But in England it was at once decided to change the muzzle-loading Enfields and the carbines of the cavalry into breech-loaders. After many months of discussion and much hesitation, now inclining to the Mount-Storm principle and now to the Westley-Richards, the latter pattern has been decided upon as that to which the carbines of the cavalry should be adapted. But for the infantry, we believe, no choice has yet been made. The best authorities, we are informed, incline to the Mount-Storm principle, and only hesitate because of the expense.

Still, as we said before, the science of small arms is as yet in its infancy, and we can well understand why the authorities should hesitate before sanctioning an expenditure, which, if their choice should be an unfortunate one, may all have to be undergone again. Under these circumstances, we would recommend the War Department to take advantage of Captain Fosbery's visit to Europe. That officer has shown himself eminently a practical man. He displayed great ingenuity in rifling an old brass gun, before the idea of applying that system to ordnance had been thought of in Europe, and lately he has developed inventive powers of a high order. We do not think that, at the present time, the authorities could do better than utilise these qualities. Let them either appoint Captain Fosbery alone, or associate him with two other officers of practical ability. Let them send these officers on a roving commission to Europe and to America,—their object being to examine the arms of the infantry in every country, to report upon their various efficiency, and to endeavour to produce something even better than the best. It is true that the Prussians defy any one to equal their needle gun, or to make up the materials of which the cartridges are composed. The exact composition is known, it is stated, to very few men in Prussia, and those men of the highest trust. Yet much may be anticipated from the practical examination of the cartridge by so practical an officer as Captain Fosbery. The expense of such a commission would be small in proportion to the object aimed at, and when it is considered that that object is of vital importance to the position of England as a military power, we are sure it would not be grudged. Even now the authorities cannot make up their minds; they do not even believe that the best pattern submitted to them is equal to the famous Needle gun. It is better far to wait a little longer than to decide foolishly; better to exhaust every invention before coming to a decision. This cannot be said to have been accomplished until the existing methods in use in the different armies of Europe shall have been examined, and to examine these there is no more fit or more practical officer than the recently nominated member of the "Order of Valour."—Friend of India.

INCREASE IN THE RATE OF COLONIAL POSTAGE.

It has been our fortune for some time past to receive from the Postmaster-General of Bengal certain notifications, accompanied by a memorandum, of which the following is a true and faithful copy:—

OFFICE MEMO.

The accompanying notice No. — dated — is not intended for insertion as an advertisement, and nothing will be paid for the publication of the same.

The "accompanying notices" have, unlike angels' visits, been neither few nor far between; but we, being of opinion that the Post-office ought to pay, like other advertisers, for notices to which they wish public attention called, have invariably consigned every notice, with its accompanying economic memorandum, to the waste-basket. A mighty host of such notices and memoranda lie undivided in that limbo of neglected genius—side by side with letters from classical Baboos—appeals from men with grievances—invectives against the municipal commissioners—informations of official dishonesty—denouncements of Government incapacity—and all those various and wonderful communications which go to make up the thousand and one ills which editorial flesh is heir to. It is still our intention to consign to this early grave all postal notifications sent to us with the reminder that "nothing will be paid for the insertion of the same." De nihilo, nihil. We are, however, induced to break through our rule for once, and give the public the benefit of perusing the latest communication which we have received from the Post-office. And here it is:—

Notice.—No. 8,313.

From and after September 1, 1865, the steam postage on letters despatched by her Majesty's mail steamers to the following places will be eight annas per half-ounce, one rupee per one ounce, and one rupee additional for every one ounce or fraction of an ounce:—To the Australian colonies, China (including Hong Kong), Cape of Good Hope, Natal, Ascension, Mauritius.

C. K. DOVE, Postmaster-general, Bengal.

Calcutta, August 18, 1865.

The above requires few words of comment, but the public have a right to know why the present rates of postage to the places named are, from the 1st of September next, to be doubled. There are two institutions in India in which the hope of improvement has been so long deferred as to make the heart of a most forbearing public sick. It is scarcely necessary to name them—the Electric Telegraph, and the Post Office. They are household words amongst us, and represent, in the Anglo-Indian mind, nearly all that can be understood by incompetency, delay, and inefficiency. A change has come over the management of the Electric Telegraph Department—whether for better or worse remains to be seen. We had fondly believed, until the receipt of the notice we are commenting upon, that no change which might come over the spirit of the postal department could possibly be for the worse. We were of opinion that that institution had at length reached that part of the lane where the proverb tells us there must be a turning. But we were mistaken; the proverb, perhaps, like ourselves, never contemplated a turning back, a retrograde movement.

The extra postage to Australia, China, and the Mauritius may not affect a very large portion of the community; but once submitted to, there is no guarantee against further imposition. Our readers will bear in mind that a proposition to increase the postage upon our Home letters has already been mooted. The present move may be the insertion of the thin end of the wedge. If the Indian public submits to this extortion, it may have to submit to a still greater one. We hope, therefore, that a general protest will be raised against the order—an order which the veriest tyro in political economy could demonstrate to be false in principle and more likely to entail a loss than to ensure a gain to the State.—Englishman.

MISCELLANEOUS.

COMMAND ALLOWANCES.—We are informed that a new arrangement has been assented to by the Government with regard to the allowances to be granted in future to senior regimental officers, who may, in the course of events, command a station which is, or has been, a Brigadier's command. The rule has been, hitherto, for the senior regimental officer to draw an allowance of Rs. 250 a month whilst in charge of such a station. The Government, taking into consideration the varying circumstances under which the command of a station may become vacant, and that, in some stations, the duties may be important, whilst in others they may be quite the reverse, have resolved to cancel the General Orders of 1861 on the subject, and to reserve the right of granting the allowance of Rs. 250, or of withholding it or of modifying it, in stations which may cease to be the head-quarters for Brigade command in future. The Government is of opinion that, in some cases, where the duties of the command are not of a nature to warrant special consideration, senior officers may be justly required to exercise the command without any extra remuneration. Delhi has recently ceased to be a Brigade command, and Government, in consideration of the duties of that station, have authorised an allowance of Rs. 250 a month for the command.—Englishman.

AN INTELLIGENCE DEPARTMENT FOR BHOOTAN.—One of the greatest difficulties thrown in the way of the officers commanding the columns which operated last cold weather against Bhootan was the total absence of anything like information as to the country over which they were to move, and the singular embarrassments surrounding the formation on the spur of the occasion of a proper intelligence department. General Tytler was, perhaps, the first to recognise the vast importance of placing at the command of the leaders of columns all the knowledge of Bhootan floating about the various Government offices, as well as the means of easily acquiring information of the country through which an advance might be made, and he selected his major of brigade, Lieutenant C. Macgregor, for this work. A better selection could not certainly have been made, and under his skilful hands the work, as far as the Western portion of the line is concerned, is fast assuming a form and proportion which will prove of the utmost value to the leaders of the proposed expeditionary corps. Colonel Paton lately addressed Government on the subject, and drew its attention, in a particular manner, to the want of an Intelligence Department, experienced by Colonel Richardson in Assam. This was the more severe, as the authority of Colonel Hopkinson had not been extended to the newly acquired tracts, and the civilians were therefore just as ignorant of the matter as the military. The Viceroy entirely concurred in the opinion of the Commander-in-Chief on this point, and requested the Bengal Government to make immediate arrangements for detailing an officer for this special duty. It was suggested that Mr. Metcalfe's successor might very appropriately take up the work. Now, with all submission, we would point out that there is a vast fund of information regarding Bhootan, and the various tribes on the Eastern frontiers, lying half forgotten and wholly unused in the offices of the various departments of the Government of India, and in the Bengal Offices. The Asiatic Society, too, might, we have little doubt, contribute its share to the knowledge so requisite at this moment, and we would therefore recommend that an officer thoroughly acquainted with Bhootan should be deputed during the next two months, with a suitable temporary establishment, to search out all this now useless knowledge, and to throw it into a systematic and handy form. General Tytler might be asked to select the officer for this duty, which might be got over in a couple of months, with what benefit to the expedition we will leave the General and Colonel Richardson to testify.—Hurkaru.

INJUSTICE TO THE MEDICAL SERVICE.—All of a sudden, though not to those behind the scenes unexpectedly, a halt has occurred in the higher grade medical promotions in this Presidency; and, as far as filling up vacancies, nothing has been done with reference to the two appointments of Deputy Inspector-Generals of Hospitals now waiting for incumbents. The fact is that the Bengal Medical Service are about to lose four of the prizes of their department, by the abolition of that number of Deputy Inspector-General's circles; those about to lapse being, we understand, that at the Presidency, Allahabad, Sealkote, and Dacca. The arrangements for this reduction are now in the hands of Sir Charles Wood, and cannot, we should think, be expected in this country for some months to come. How, we would ask, in this case, about service rights and Parliamentary guarantee? Every medical officer who entered the Honorable Company's Service did so with the full number of these appointments in prospective view and hope; and those who, by the coming measure of reduction and abolition, are stopped in their career of promotion and benefit, can certainly, with justice, complain of broken faith and an unjust deprivation of that which they have lived through a quarter of a century of tropical service to obtain; and which, by the abolition of the Government in whose service they commenced their career, they now find torn from their grasp.—Englishman.

COTTON MILLS IN OUDH.—Luckmee Chund Sett, the great banker of Muttra, has, we learn, ordered a large quantity of machinery from England, with a view to erecting cotton mills in the district of Mohumdee, Oudh. The object in choosing this locality would seem to be the wide area of fertile land suitable for the growth of cotton, and the abundance of fuel for steam power operations existing on the spot. We have never heard that cotton experiments in that or any part of Oudh have yielded particularly encouraging results, but it may be questioned whether experiments have ever been fairly tried, and Luckmee Chund Sett appears to be speculating under the counsel of a shrewd and experienced planter. All honour to the first native landholder who has essayed to bring capital into that part of the province. Unless the virtues of its soil and the geniality of its climate have been absurdly exaggerated, there is no part of India in which judicious embarkation of money in tea and indigo (inter alia) would yield so generous a return.

THE DOCTOR AND THE BEEF TEA.—Dr. Constant's proceedings in having administered beef-tea to a sick Hindoo prisoner have attracted the attention of her Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council, and this flagrant enormity has induced that functionary to call upon the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council for a report as to the nature of the diet supplied to prisoners in the provinces under the Lieutenant-Governors of Bengal, and the North-West. We trust that the report will contain valuable appendices on the effect of crime and imprisonment on caste, and on the propriety of allowing sick Hindu prisoners to sink from exhaustion, instead of resorting to the free administration of beef-tea and other similar strengthening nutritives.

DR. WALKER.—We regret to learn that Dr. Walker has never completely recovered from his late accident at Simla, and that he was, by recent accounts, so indisposed as to render it necessary for him to resign his appointment of Secretary to the Sanitary Commission. We believe that Dr. Cunningham will succeed him.

SCARCITY OF RAIN has been very much felt by the peasantry in the upper divisions of the Bengal and North-western Provinces. The paddy fields are in a miserable state. The husbandmen are sitting idle looking into the skies for rain.

MR. FRASER'S CASE.—The jury has found Mr. Fraser, whose case we have already referred to, guilty of criminal misappropriation, but recommended him to mercy. The sentence is reserved until Wednesday. This case has created a great sensation here, both from its novelty and importance. Those who take a purely legal view of it are naturally at a loss to understand at what point it becomes a felony for the manager of a bank to overdraw his account. Had the sum overdrawn been Rs. 150, instead of Rs. 150,000, it can hardly be supposed any jury would have found him guilty; yet it is absurd to contend that the addition of the three ciphers converts the act into a felony. The case shows the imprudence of Banks in allowing their managers to keep accounts with them at all; and it will probably be the occasion of a general reform in this respect.—Englishman.

THE REVENUE OF THE DOOARS.—We learn from the Bhootan frontier that the civil authorities in charge of the Bengal Dooars have been directed by Government to realise from the Bhootas, Meechees, and Chowdhries, the revenues for the last and present years. The revenue of these Dooars is estimated at present at twenty thousand rupees. These revenues are to be collected through the Tesildars, Chowdhries, or the chiefs, as the authorities may find most convenient. The Rajahs of Bijnee and Siddlee, who declared themselves as independent chiefs, are to be treated as zemindars; in fact, they were subordinate officers of the Bhootan Government.—Englishman.

BURGLARY AT MORADABAD.—A letter from this sanitarium, dated August 2, says:—"Most extraordinary events, I learn, are taking place at Moradabad. The houses of Lieutenant Gordon, commanding the 10th N.I., and Lieutenant W. D. Palmer, station staff, have been broken into, but it seems evident that robbery, or rather gain, was not the object. From the house of the former officer a valuable piece of plate and a quantity of official papers were abstracted, and, after being destroyed, were thrown into the compound; and from that of the latter some plated ware was also taken, and destroyed in like manner. Suspicions have arisen that some of the sepoys of the 10th N.I. have committed these depredations, having been induced to the acts by some supposed grievances."

CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF OUDH.—Rumour has brought forward another gentleman as successor to the Chief Commissioner of this Province.—Mr. Richard Temple. Mr. Wingfield, according to public report, has, for some time past, been like an auctioneer's hammer—going, going, going, but he is not gone yet; and as great men sometimes change their determinations like small ones, he perhaps may yet continue to rule over us for some considerable time.—Oudh Gazette.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL WATSON.—The Englishman has heard that the Viceroy has entirely acquitted Lieutenant-Colonel Watson, Commandant 11th Regiment Native Infantry, in the Bhootan Frontier, of his statement that no police had been furnished him during the late operations in Bhootan. That officer, in his explanation, stated that he had no intention to misrepresent or exaggerate the fact, and the Governor-General was pleased to acquit him.

A REMARKABLE TRIAL FOR MURDER is now engaging the attention of the people of the Punjab—the trial of Goorbux, who was Prime Minister of the Raja of Nabha, for the murder of a lady of rank in British territories, a member of the Nabha family. This is the last volume of a long tale of native intrigue and crime, an abstract of which we (Englishman) hope soon to be able to lay before our readers.

MR. W. W. HOLLINGBERY has been enrolled as a pleader in the Sudder Court at Agra.

STAFF CORPS.—On the recommendation of the Government of India, the Secretary of State has so far modified his despatch of December 9, 1864, No. 397, as to allow officers "during the time they are on probation the option of entering the Staff Corps from the day following their cadre promotion, instead of from the prior date of their appointment on probation." Thus a lieutenant entering on his twelve months' probation on January 1, and obtaining cadre promotion on July 1, will be appointed a captain in the Staff Corps from July 2, instead of being admitted from Jan. 1. The promotion during probation will go on in the regiment or cadre to which the officer belongs. In the event of there being no promotion in the meantime, the date of entry to Staff Corps will, of course, continue to be that on which the officer entered on probation.

DELHI, Aug. 6.—As to official changes: Major C. Smith, District Superintendent of Police, will go back to Goorgaon in January next. Captain Orchard will take his place. Lieutenant Millett, Assistant District Superintendent, will shortly leave for Kurnaul, to officiate for Major Legalliss, who is going on leave. Mr. W. Blewitt, Collector of Customs, is, it is rumoured, to be transferred to Mooltan, and Mr. W. Wright will come in his place.

DEATH OF A RACER.—Many of our readers who remember Hotspur in his best days will be sorry to learn that the good old horse died at Deyrah on the 8th of this month.—Pioneer.

THE DEPUTY COMMISSIONER OF LUCKNOW.—Mr. Lane, Deputy Commissioner of Lucknow, is reported as about to avail himself of leave to England.—Mofussilite.

THE VICEROY AND THE VOLUNTEERS.—The honorary secretary to the Calcutta Volunteer Rifle Corps received yesterday a cheque for Rs. 1,000 from his Excellency the Viceroy, for the purchase of a prize, to be designated "His Excellency the Viceroy's Prize Cup," and to be shot for by the members of the regiment in the coming cold season.—Englishman.

SETTLEMENT OF THE DOOARS.—The Englishman has heard that, in the ensuing cold season, Captain Lance will proceed from village to village in the newly-acquired territory of Bhootan, and make a settlement with the ryots, following the settlement now existing in Darjeeling. Leases will be given, and kabool-yuts are to be taken from the ryots.

MOVEMENTS OF CORPS.

A correspondent signing himself "Justitia" called upon us in yesterday's paper to protest against the contemplated removal of the 18th Hussars from Bangalore to Secunderabad in November next. Our correspondent pointed out that the regiment will have been in India little more than a year, and urged that such frequent changes are anything but calculated to increase the popularity of service in India, a service by no means too popular as it is. The men have barely had time to clear off the debts which every European regiment when it commences service is pretty sure to contract, and yet they are called on to incur the expenses of a fresh move. There are, indeed, many, according to "Justitia," who would find it impossible to move their wives and families at all without assistance from their officers, and this assistance the officers, who are rarely men of fortune, and have already endless calls upon their purse, can ill afford out of their slender salary to give. "Justitia," therefore, concludes by asking whether "the requirements of the service demand the removal of the regiment," and "what public good is likely to arise therefrom."

We readily admit the force of these objections, and would gladly join "Justitia" in his protest, if we saw any safe escape from the course of which he complains. But, so far as we are able to ascertain, the local authorities have been driven into a choice between two evils, and we are inclined, on the whole to think that they have chosen the lesser evil of the two. Our correspondent is doubtless aware that the 16th Lancers are expected very shortly in Madras. They are on board the Golden Fleece, which ought to be here somewhere about September. The Home authorities were probably under the impression when they sent the regiment by Madras that it could disembark at Masulipatam, and thence proceed by the ordinary route, a comparatively short and easy one, to Secunderabad. As it happens, however, the Masulipatam contractor, who used to undertake the conveyance of troops by this route, has discontinued his contract since the cyclone. There would, therefore, be no transits for the troops if they disembarked at Masulipatam. It is still, of course, open to the authorities to send them at once from Madras to Secunderabad, instead of moving the 18th Hussars. But the evils which too commonly result from exposing freshly arrived troops, altogether unaccustomed to a tropical climate, to so long an Indian march as that from Madras to Secunderabad are, we are inclined to think, even greater than those against which our correspondent so strongly and justly protests.

There has been, we believe, more than usual difficulty in arranging the various moves, partly because those at first contemplated would have involved an expenditure in excess of the sanctioned estimate by more than five lacs, and partly because the local authorities are waiting to know whether the supreme Government intend to reduce the European force in this Presidency by one regiment. They have already recommended the reduction of the numerical strength of each regiment (56 in the cavalry, and 60 in the infantry), and, although Sir Gaspard Le Marchant is said to have declared it undesirable to make this reduction in addition to dispensing with a regiment, it is more than probable that both measures will be carried out. The Government are bent upon economising, be the consequences what they may. But upon their decision in this matter depends the ultimate destination of the 60th. Its relief is compulsory, since the home authorities have ordered the 24th from the Mauritius to Rangoon. The 60th must, therefore, be brought to Madras, and, if meanwhile it has been decided to dispense with one regiment, they will probably go home. This step necessitates several troublesome changes. The 18th Royal Irish are going home, and so the 21st will have to be moved from Bellary to Secunderabad, and the 105th from Wellington to Bellary, Wellington being for the future used simply as a convalescent depot. But if, on the other hand, it is decided not to dispense with a regiment, then the 60th, instead of going home, can be used to relieve the 18th at Secunderabad. In fact, the moves generally seem at present to be in a glorious state of uncertainty, not to say confusion.

There is, indeed, one arrangement contemplated against which we beg to enter our most vigorous protest, and trust that all military men will join us. It is proposed to move the 7th N.I. from Raipore to Singapore, embarking them at Munsorecottah. The only intelligible explanation of this extraordinary step is, that whoever arranged the march from Raipore to the sea-board must have taken the shortest route on the map (by Sonepoor and Russell Konda), forgetful or ignorant of the character of the country. The route lies through one of the deadliest jungles in India, and any regiment taken through it may look out for decimation. We shall have a repetition in Madras of the famous "Mhow March" tragedy. We take it for granted that it cannot be the intention of the authorities to evade the jungle by taking the regiment round by Cuttack, for if so they would scarcely carry it all the way back to Munsorecottah. The natural course would then be to embark from Pooree, and this indeed seems to us the only plan which is at once sensible and safe. It is at any rate clear that both these qualities do not belong to the plan now in contemplation.—Athenæum and Daily News, August 26.

MESSRS. C. SHAND'S COTTON-PRESS.—We are glad to learn that these works commenced operations very successfully on Wednesday. They have been erected with a rapidity very unusual in India, the foundations not having been laid before the middle of February. They comprise a large and substantial Press-house, and spacious godowns, with two of Nasmyth's three-cylinder patent presses. As our readers are aware, this success is due to the able management of Mr. W. Sowerby, C.E., as contractor, and Mr. Tipping as engineer.

MR. WHITLEY STOKES has been confirmed in the appointment of Assistant Secretary in the Legislative Department to the Government of India from the 23rd of May last.

THE MADRAS BANK.—Mr. R. C. Walker having declined office, Mr. W. W. Munsie, of the firm of Messrs. Walker and Co., was yesterday elected a director of the Madras Bank, in succession to Mr. H. Hicks, resigned.

MADRAS HARBOUR SCHEME.—We understand that the public spirited Madrassees, who took this scheme in hand, have been perseveringly working at it, regardless of all the difficulties by which in such a place as Madras an enterprise of this magnitude is naturally beset. The capital required is estimated at fifty lakhs, and a considerable portion of this has been already promised in Madras. There is fair prospect, we are told, of obtaining the remainder in the course of this year from other sources, chiefly in Calcutta and Bombay.

THE AGRA BANK.—We understand the Agra and Masterman's Bank are about to erect a handsome building on the Esplanade, designs for which have been already prepared under instructions from Mr. Birks. Those who have seen the designs say that the building bids fair to be one of the greatest ornaments of Madras, the broad lines of blue paint, which have hitherto played so prominent a part in our local architecture, being happily "conspicuous by their absence."

AN ADMINISTRATION REPORT FOR THE STATE OF TRAVANCORE, is of so interesting a nature, although it carries us back to the year 1863-64, that we may well devote a few words to it here. That little principality has clearly proved how well a Native Government can manage its affairs, for its own benefit equally with that of its subjects, when the governing power is led rather than sought to be driven by the British power into the adoption of right courses. Had other Native States been treated in times past with the same friendly moderation and confidence, it is most probable that some of them too would have escaped the rocks and shoals on which they suffered shipwreck. But in a great majority of instances, we lament to say, the high handed policy of the Indian Government, and even more the offensive manner in which British residents at their courts sought to carry it out, baffled the objects which they were directed to accomplish.—Athenæum and Daily News.

MADRAS RAILWAY.—We hear that there is every probability of the North-West line of the Madras Railway being opened as far as Cuddapah on the 1st proximo. This will take us some forty miles farther north, and we trust the day is not far distant when Madras will be united by rail to Bombay.

Cotton to London and Liverpool.—£1. 5s. to £2
Indigo and Hides, £1. to £1. 5s.

Rates for Cotton to London range from £1. to £1. 5s. according to the probable departure of vessels, and £1. 12s. 6d. to £1. 15s. to Liverpool.

STOCK AND SHARE MARKET (Aug. 26)—The Bank's rates of interest and discount are unchanged, and money continues very plentiful. In Government Securities there have been frequent fluctuations during the fortnight, in the early part of which rates were almost 1 per cent. all round in advance of those last advised. Of late there has been less inquiry, and the market is now dull at 10½ to 10¾ premium for Five-and-a-Half per Cents, 4 to 4½ for Five per Cents, and 8½ to 9 dis.

count for Four per Cents. Bank of Madras shares have ranged from 70 to 75 per cent. premium, and are now quiet at about 78 at which there are both buyers and sellers.

EXCH.—Rates are firmer, and we quote credits at 9s. 9-16d., and documents at 2s. 11-16d. The banks have drawn for this mail at 2s. 0-16d. to 5-16d. They raised their advertised rates on the 23rd inst. to 2s. for six months' sight drafts.

FREIGHTS are still very dull. Several large clearances have been made of late, but the port is still over supplied with tonnage, and there is little inducement to vessels to lay on. No dead freight is procurable.

BOMBAY.

GOOD SOCIETY AT PESHAWUR.

The Englishman's Peshawur correspondent gives the following account of a "genteel" dinner party which he was induced to attend at that station:—"I felt myself compelled by the fear of social exclusion to accept the Gridlestone's kind invitation to dinner, and so it happened that, one evening, I found myself in their drawing-room, patiently waiting for the appearance of my host and hostess, who, being very genteel, think that their guests will not arrive until at least one hour after the time fixed for dinner, and I therefore had the pleasure of prowling about the apartments whilst the servants were lighting the candles and removing the chintz covers from the furniture. At last, my entertainers arrived, and were profuse in their apologies for their rudeness in keeping me waiting so long, but, as Mrs. Gridlestone naively remarked, 'People in society now-a-days are generally so very late in keeping an appointment, that any punctuality quite takes one by surprise,' thereby leaving me to infer that she did not consider me to be in society, and thus at once rendering me very comfortable for the rest of the evening. After a time, a few more highly genteel people came in,—the Snappers, pere et mere, with a highly-bred and highly-boned Miss Snapper, in pink muslin tres décolletée; young Yamstock, of the Royal Emu Regiment; and Miss Romanillia, damsel either of Italian or Eurasian descent. And we then paired off, like beasts going into the Ark, and marched upon the dinner-room, I escorting the younger Snapper female. The table looked remarkably well, being covered with electro-plate of the very best description, and there being an abundance of light the effect was exactly the same as if it had been real silver, whilst the quantities of wonderful artificial flowers (the work of Mrs. Gridlestone's fairy fingers) lent an air of refinement to the scene which could never have been gained by using the natural flowers fresh from the garden. We had clear soup, as a matter of course, no other sort of pottage being considered correct in good society; and if it was rather watery and tasteless, why, that was all the better for us, as it did not destroy our appetites for the hecatombs of delicious viands (which were afterwards coming. Then we had the whole of a 1lb. canister of salmon, which looked very filling and substantial as it lay amidst an enormous grove of parsley; and there were oyster pates, composed of very light pastry (the oysters, like the part of Hamlet, being omitted, by particular desire), and four side dishes, filled with indescribable edibles called 'ongtrays,' and a saddle of mutton, and chickens, with their legs in paper frills, and loads of sweet stuff, and a dessert of bruised peaches. So it was a grand feast, undoubtedly; but if I could have only have found something really substantial amongst all these genteel trifles, my mind would have been in a happier frame; and if the wine—a harmless beverage, of no particular brand or vintage—had been placed on the table, instead of being handed round, at long intervals, by a nervous khidmutgar, perhaps I might have felt rather jollier, especially as this black Ganymede every now and then gave me a champagne douche down my back. But still, to be in fashion is more than to be comfortable, and the satisfaction of dining à la Russe more than compensates for such little contretemps as the emptying of an 'ongtray' into your lap, or your eye being knocked out with the corner of a dish; whilst any little delay which occurs in handing round the dishes tends to promote digestion, to facilitate conversation, and to teach true Christian resignation. Our conversation during dinner time was carried on in a low and gentle tone, the remarks of the ladies being, as a rule, so intensely genteel as to be quite inaudible—which I much regretted, as I particularly wished to hear our feminine gentility disporting itself among the intricacies of the English language. Besides, the conversation, although very refreshing at first to an outer-barbarian like myself, certainly became rather monotonous in the end, the only subjects touched upon being the private manners, customs, and daily lives of the English aristocracy, with which everyone appeared to be acquainted, but which to me are a sealed book—my lines having chiefly fallen amongst the shopocracy. I tried hard to get up a mild flirtation with Snapper junior, and advanced as far as a possession of craving for the companionship of a kindred soul—that being my usual poetical way of declaring a tendresse—but the sweet Emmeline was so occupied with guarding her shoulders from further exposure, and with eating her dinner in a perfectly comme il faut manner, that I could get no response to my amatory allurements, and therefore had to fall back upon the general conversation and anecdotes of blue blood in particular. Of course, we did not perpetrate the horrible vulgarity of remaining at the table after the departure of the ladies, but rose with them, and adjourned (sans "peg" and sans cheroot.) to the drawing room, where the nervous khidmutgar handed round some very astringent coffee, and where we amused ourselves with turning over the pages of divers 'Books of Beauty,' containing a galaxy of aristocratic portraits. Then we had some deliciously inarticulate and inaudible Italian songs, in the highest style of art, from the ladies,—the Snapper altogether failing in her utterances, so as to remind me strongly of a croupy hen trying to breathe; and then we all went away, after expressing ourselves intensely delighted with the refined pleasures of the evening. When I reached home I ordered a bountiful grill to be got ready at once, to save me from starvation, and it was not until after a very heavy supper, with copious malt, that I recovered my equanimity of spirit. Then, certainly, as I sat smoking my pet meerschaum out in the garden (I always take a pipe as an anodyne, in preference to a cheroot), and drinking a cool liquid, I could not help laughing as I remembered the fearful fables about the aristocracy in which I had indulged during the evening,—fables of such an apocryphal nature that I should have been ashamed of my own daring mendacity, had I not felt that the stories of my genteel friends were equally fictitious."

MISCELLANEOUS.

ACCIDENT TO AN OFFICER.—A letter from Nynsee Tal says:—"On Tuesday last a very serious, but fortunately not fatal, accident occurred to Captain Stanley, H.M.'s 23rd Royal Welsh Fusiliers. It appears he was riding a rather brisk horse, not accustomed to the hills, somewhat fast down a steep slope, when he saw the road was broken, and in endeavouring to pull up the animal's hind leg went over the brink, and it was precipitated down the khud. On reaching the bottom, it alighted on its head, and broke its neck. Captain Stanley, seeing his danger, threw himself off; but he also rolled some distance down the khud, and was much bruised about the body, and received several severe cuts in the head. However, his medical attendants say that none of the wounds are of a very serious nature, the only apprehension being the chance of erysip-las setting in. This is the second accident which has happened here within six days, the other being that of the drowning of a gunner of the Royal Artillery in the lake yesterday week. When in a state of semi-intoxication he went to bathe, and sunk."

OMNIBUSES FOR BOMBAY.—We were recently favoured with an inspection of two photographs of omnibuses, three of which have been shipped, on account of the Bombay Omnibus and General Conveyance Company, on board the Oberon, which vessel left England at the end of June last. These vehicles have been built by one of the most eminent carriage-builders in London, with all the latest improvements, especially as regards the comfort of passengers. The maker obtained the prize of £100 from the London General Omnibus Company for the best made omnibuses for two horses. Independent of the ventilators on the roof, a space is open under the coachman's seat; this is another ventilator, by means of which a current of air will pass through the "bus." There is also a sunblind on each side of the carriage, which can be either raised or lowered as required, and if found necessary a canopy can be erected over the roof to protect the outside passengers from the heat of the sun. These carriages are constructed to carry twelve inside and sixteen out. The public will doubtless appreciate them after the misery and long-suffering to which they have been subjected by being compelled to use those intolerable buggies, which are one of the greatest nuisances of the island. The omnibuses are painted white, and in appearance will much resemble the Brompton omnibuses in London. In addition to those on the way out, nine others will shortly follow.—Times of India.

LANDSLIP ON THE THULL GHAUT.—On the 21st a landslip occurred on the G. I. P. Railway, about four miles from Kussara, at the Thull Ghaut. The slip, which was caused by the late heavy rains, blocks up the line for about forty-five yards in length; but it will not materially interfere with the passenger traffic, as, in consequence of the measures taken by the railway authorities, passengers can walk from one side to the other in safety—a distance of about a few yards. Effectual steps are being taken to clear the line as rapidly as possible. Yesterday two hundred torches were forwarded from Bombay, to enable the labourers employed in removing the obstruction to work by night; and there was every probability of the line being cleared by the 27th.

DISTURBANCE IN CASHMERE.—The following information contained in a private letter, dated Sreenugger, Cashmere, August 4th, has been kindly put at our disposal:—"One Sher Shah, supported by the Akhoond of Swat, has risen and is not far off. A fight was to have taken place with the Maharajah's troops yesterday, and I suppose Sher Shah will be driven to the hills. An absurd rumour was afloat that the Dogras have been licked; were it so, the Swatees would soon be in Sreenugger and would cut our throats. But were such likely, the Dewan would have given us ample notice to flee to the forts of Hurree Purbut or the Sher Gurhee, till our troops, according to treaty, poured in from Pindee and Sealkote to assist the Maharajah."

PROPOSED NEW WEEKLY PAPER.—It is proposed to issue a new weekly journal from the 31st instant, under the quaint title of The Powla, being, we presume, the Hindoostanee term for four annas. We are glad to see it stated that the new paper has already received a great number of promises of support, and that it will be conducted by men of recognised ability, some of whom are not unknown to literary fame.—Times of India.

THE GOVERNMENT AGENCY AT SURAT.—We learn that it is contemplated by Government to abolish the office of the agent of his Excellency the Governor at Surat.—Bombay Gazette.

ATTOCK, Aug. 3.—A sad instance of the suddenness of death occurred here a few days ago. The paymaster of the 3rd battalion of the Rifle Brigade, when returning from Murree to join his regiment at Nowshera, dropped dead on the boat as he was crossing the Indus. Apoplexy was the immediate cause of death. He was interred the following evening with military honours. He leaves a wife and several children to deplore his loss.

THE BOMBAY AND BENGAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY contemplate running a steamer on the 15th of every month to Aden and Suez in connection with a line of steamers from Alexandria to Liverpool. A regular scale of freight is being arranged, to allow of the shipments of all kinds of produce, and this, together with rates of passage, if we are informed correctly, will shortly be ready for publication.

BHAWULPORE.—Our Upper Sind correspondent gives a gloomy account of the state of affairs in Bhawalpore. The Nawab wanted forty lakhs "on the nail"—as the saying goes, but as his Wuzer could produce only nine, the poor official was disgraced, his property confiscated, and himself thrown into prison. The people from whom the balance of the sum is being wrung are deserting the country to such an extent that outposts have been established to prevent their emigration.—Sindian.

CHINA & JAPAN.

We take the following from the Overland China Mail of the 12th of August:—

"There is not any political news of importance to communicate by this opportunity. The well-known Tseng Kwo-Fan has been appointed Generalissimo of the Imperial forces in China, in room of San-ko-lin Sin, whose death we reported some time ago. This appointment is calculated to give foreigners a little anxiety, as Tseng Kwo-Fan's leanings are well known to be thoroughly anti-foreign. There is also reason to believe that Prince Kung, who is now at the head of the Board of Foreign Affairs, is not over well affected towards the western 'barbarians.' There appears to be a lull in political matters at Peking, so far as concerns foreign countries, which may be attributed to the expected arrival of Sir Rutherford Alcock, our new Minister for China. Many questions, commercial and otherwise, are at present pending his arrival; and some anxiety exists as to the success of his regime. It seems to be a question whether China is to get the better of us, or we the better of China; the object to be attained will of course be that neither should get the better of each other. The loss of Sir Harry Parkes, by his removal from Shanghai, may eventually have an effect upon the progress of affairs in China. What we want is the most open intercourse—commercial, social, and religious—with this vast empire. It would almost appear that we are making rapid strides in this direction. The growing prospects of a railway, or of several small lines of railway, lead us to believe that foreign intercourse with the country is likely to improve.

"We are glad to notice that Imperial authority is again in the ascendant, the Northern rebels having been successfully kept back. It was high time that something should have been done in this direction, as constant anxiety and annoyance were caused to the representatives of foreign Powers by the continual internal disturbances which prevailed in the empire.

"From Japan there is positively nothing of political interest to record. Now that the activity of our New Minister there has been thrown into the balance things may be expected to move on somewhat more satisfactorily; and besides, Sir Harry Parkes is certain to be a popular representative, which is of considerable importance in a country such as Japan."

CEYLON.

The following items are from the Colombo Observer of the 31st ult:—

During the fortnight ended the 27th instant, nearly 20,000 cwts. of coffee have been added to our exports of the staple, in the proportions of three-fourths plantation and one-fourth native. The result is that our total exports for the 11 months of season 1864-65 are over 820,000 cwts., of which 578,000 are plantation and 242,000 native.

Political excitement has reached a point during the fortnight. The Governor, after many disappointments and many refusals, has at last succeeded in getting six gentlemen to degrade themselves and retard the progress of the colony, by accepting seats in the Legislative Council under present circumstances. The names of the new members are:—George Dennis B. Harrison, Esq.; George Smyttan Duff, Esq.; Christopher Barker Smith, Esq.; Mutu Coomara Swamy, Esq.; James Adrian Martensz, Esq.; Edward James Dehigame, Esq.

It is a curious coincidence that the steamer which has brought General Hodgson to our shores brought also the not unexpected intelligence of the death, before reaching "Home," of his Excellency's predecessor in command of the forces. General O'Brien, like General Lockyer, temporarily administered the government of Ceylon. Both remained the "year too long," and to both the heat of the Red Sea proved finally fatal. General O'Brien's remains repose at Suez. Let us hope that a different termination of his command awaits General Hodgson, and that after years of usefulness here, years of honourable repose in the old country may be his lot. To an officer whose first residence in Ceylon dates forty years back, the change in the country must be striking.

While active preparations are being made for the opening of the Ceylon Railway on 1st October, a grand scheme is on the tapis for extending the line, when finished to Kandy, on through Gampola, Navellapettia and the Kotmale Valley, to the Rambodde Pass—at the foot of the Mountain range in which Newera Ellia is situated. We have not the slightest doubt that ultimately this scheme will be carried out.

CIVILIANS FURLOUGH ALLOWANCE.

Simla, Aug. 10.—Read the following despatch from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India:—
Financial.—No. 139.

India-office, London, June 16.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

SIR,—I have considered in Council your financial letter, dated Feb. 3 last, in which you bring to notice that that portion of Rule 3 of the Revised Civil Absentee Rules, which regulates the allowance to be drawn by civilians on return from leave, is inapplicable to the cases of civilians returning from furlough, and recommend the continuance of the rules hitherto in force, under which a civilian draws the subsistence allowance of his rank from the date of his return from furlough to the date of assuming charge of an acting appointment, or to the date of his receiving a permanent appointment, when he is at once admitted to the full salary thereof.

I see no objection to the continuance of the rules recommended by you, and you will therefore cause the necessary alteration to be made accordingly.—
I have, &c., (Signed) C. Wood.

In accordance with the instructions conveyed in the foregoing despatch, the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to alter Rule 3 of the Civil Service Furlough and Absentee Rules, as follows:—

“For the interval elapsing between departure from station and the commencement of reckoning absence on furlough, and between the end of reckoning absence on furlough and arrival at station, the absentee shall be allowed special leave calculated at the rate of one day for every ten miles to be travelled, except when railways or steamboats are available, when one day for every 100 miles only will be allowed (or the time actually occupied on the voyage, when its duration exceeds the time calculated at the rate of 100 miles per day), with seven days at the port of embarkation, provided that a period of three months shall in no case be exceeded, and that the time claimed shall have been spent bona fide in progress between the place of departure and the place of destination.”

During the interval between departure from station and the commencement of reckoning absence on furlough, the absentee will be entitled to draw a moiety of his allowance; and from the date of his return from furlough, to the date of assuming charge of an acting appointment, or to the date of his receiving a permanent appointment, he will draw the subsistence allowance of his rank.

TIME TO JOIN.

No. 811a.—From several references recently made to Government, it appears that doubts are sometimes felt regarding the effect of the rules determining the length of time allowed for joining a new appointment, and the amount of travelling allowance to which an officer transferred is entitled. All officers are therefore informed that the route which is most convenient for the public service, and most advantageous to Government both in time and expense, whether wholly by rail or by road, or partly by both, is that which they are required to take and by which joining time and travelling allowance will be calculated, on the principle laid down in the order of Government of India, financial department, No. 1,313, dated March 16 last, and republished in the notification of this Government No. 1,081a, dated April 3.

THOMASON COLLEGE.—SURVEYING CLASS.

Head Quarters, Simla, July 13.—H.E. the C. in C., in concurrence with Government, is pleased to publish the following rules for the Officers' Surveying Class lately established at the Thomason College, Roorkee:—

1. A candidate for admission must be under the rank of regimental field officer, and must be well acquainted with his ordinary military duties.

2. His application is to be addressed through his commanding officer to the principal of the college, who, if there is room, will forward it for the approval of H.E. the C. in C.

3. The application should reach the principal by Aug. 1 (this year it will be received up to Sept. 1), so that the officer may reach the college by Oct. 1.

4. The course of study will include instruction in military surveying and reconnaissance, plan and topographical drawing at the college, and the laying out and construction of field works under the orders of the commandant of sappers and miners.

5. On the successful completion of the course a certificate will be granted, signed by the principal of the college and the commandant of sappers, a copy of which will be forwarded to army headquarters.

6. The course of instruction will, as a rule, occupy seven months, and no officer will be allowed to remain longer than eight months without special sanction and for special reasons.

7. Officers whose progress is unsatisfactory are liable to be remanded to their regiments before the expiration of the course.

8. Officers studying at Roorkee will be considered absent on duty, and will be so reported in the regimental returns (as in the case of officers now studying in the senior department); but no officer of the Indian army who may be serving under the new Furlough Regulations will be allowed to count the period as service towards pension unless he can furnish the certificate specified in Rule 5.

9. The number of officers is for the present limited to ten.

In cases where an officer, having completed the ordinary course, is likely to benefit by a further course of study at the college, and is anxious to remain longer, a special report will be made by the principal to the officer commanding his regiment, who, if the officer can be spared from his regiment, may forward his application for leave to remain until the close of the college session (Sept. 1).

TROOPS FOR ENGLAND.

July 15.—Under instructions from Government, H.E. the C. in C. in India is pleased to direct that Nos. 1, 2, and 3 batteries 17th brigade R.A., in the Madras Presidency, be held in readiness to proceed this year to England.

PROMOTION.

The Right Hon. the Secy. of State for India has ruled that unattached officers of the Indian service cannot be promoted to the rank of lieut. till they shall have served 5 years in the grade of ensign, and that such officers are not considered eligible for promotion to the rank of captain till they shall have served 7 years in the grade of lieut.

This restriction does not, however, apply to the case of unattached officers who may be so fortunate as to perform distinguished service in the field.

General officers and others who may have occasion to submit the claims of unattached officers to promotion, will be careful that none but officers who have performed approved ordinary service for the periods specified are recommended for advancement under the conditions above referred to.

The following officer is assigned local rank from the date specified, subject to H.M.'s approval:—

To be Major.—Capt. H. N. Kippen, 12th foot, from April 18.

The C. in C. in India is pleased to make the following promotion, until H.M.'s pleasure shall be known:—

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SATURDAY, September 30, 1865.

THE ROYAL SANITARY COMMISSION AND DR. LEITH.

THE alarming conclusions of the Royal Commission upon the health of European troops in India were some time since disputed by the local Government; and Dr. Leith, Deputy Inspector-general of Hospitals, and President of the Bombay Sanitary Commission, has just visited the report with what we may consider a conclusive demolition. This "rejoinder" of the Doctor settles the question as far as Bombay is concerned, and leaves little doubt as to the applicability of his facts and arguments to the other presidencies. The object of the Governor of Bombay in directing the investigation made by Dr. Leith, was to ascertain, so far as circumstances would admit, the actual sanitary condition of the Bombay army at the latest date before the introduction of the improvements recommended by the Royal Commission, in order that a starting point more precise than was afforded in the Royal Commission's report upon India generally, being thus obtained, future progress might be more accurately noted. The Governor of Bombay, when ordering the report, determined at the same time that a methodical and minute examination of each station should be made as soon as practicable. In fulfilling this requisition, Dr. Leith, without questioning the conclusions of the Royal Commission as a whole, believed it right to point out certain inaccuracies in the station returns furnished to the Commission, and to mention local circumstances which had been ignored—perhaps unnecessarily so—in the summary conclusions regarding India as a whole, but which were not of an exceptional nature as regarded Bombay, considered separately. The "remarks" of the Royal Commission gave the Doctor reason to suppose that the object of his report had been misunderstood; and he enters into several particulars to justify this view of the case. He complains especially of the Commissioners drawing general conclusions from particular and exceptional data, as in such instances as the following :—

"With reference to paragraphs 5 and 6, on what is said by me on the means of exercise and recreation, and in which certain deficiencies at Bombay stations are specified, it may be noted that, as is shown in Dr. Rooke's Report, published by the Royal Commission in its Appendix of evidence, Sattara, Ahmedabad, Baroda, and Neemuch, all formerly stations for Native troops only, had been merely occupied by Europeans on account of the Mutiny, and there had not yet been the opportunity of providing for the men's amusements; but so soon as peace and order were restored to the country the deficiencies began to be supplied. The Bombay Town Barracks and the Native stations, Malligaum and Surat, which on the same account had become the temporary residence of European troops, were relinquished by them on the restoration of peace.

"In now referring to these changes and to those others which may be ascertained on comparing the appendix of my report with the station returns, I merely wish to show that, whatever reason the Royal Commission had to write as it did regarding India as a whole, or regarding some stations of Bombay as they were described in the years 1859-1860, the conclusion that there were no means of exercise required some qualification before it could be applied to Bombay after the close of 1863, when I wrote.

"The authors of the 'Remarks' have misunderstood my words.—In so far as it is from the Canteen Fund that their implements for play are obtained, their games are connected with drink, but it is not the case, as might be inferred, that drinking accompanies their games or exercise, or necessarily follows them.—when they take them as confirming the unqualified statement that 'the men's amusements, such as they are, are always connected more or less with drink.' When seeking to represent matters as regarded Bombay, in what appeared to me their true relation, I was not the less desirous that the evils connected with the Canteen should cease, and that the time should soon come when canteens should no longer be needed.

"In regard to the 'Remarks' (paras. 7 and 8) on the sewerage of stations, it must be observed that the Royal Commission recommended the removal of excreta by water and their drainage to an 'available outlet,' and it was altogether silent on the utilisation of the sewage. There was reason for its being understood that when a fall to an 'available outlet,' was spoken of, some existing outlet was intended, and not, as is now suggested in the 'Remarks,' a reservoir to be made for the purpose in a neighbouring field; and knowing as I did the difficulties in the way of utilising liquid sewage in this country, and that at most of the stations of this army neither sea nor public sewer was available, and also that the manure in this prescribed liquid form was not in any way to be profitably employed, there was some excuse in such a case for its having been supposed that an outlet into a river was contemplated. 'It might have been added that the discharge of latrine sewage into the ordinary rivers of this country would be most reprehensible even after it had passed through a filter.'

That errors of the kind have arisen may be easily accounted for by the fact that the Royal Commission drew their averages from a period extending over fifty-seven years previous to 1857, whereas Dr. Leith took the more practical course of confining his investigations to a period of fifteen years, including the exceptional time of the Mutinies and the subsequent years, which of course give the surest indication of things as they are. His figures show that during the time under review there has been a steady fall in the death-rate, and a continuous improvement in the health of the European army in the Bombay Presidency. The average mortality during the last fifteen years was 29 per 1,000; for the last ten years, 27.1; for the last five years, 23.7; for the last four years, 20.9; for the last three years, 17.5; for the last two years, 16.3; and for the last year (1863), 12.07.

In commenting upon these highly satisfactory results, the Bombay Government observes that "there seems no doubt of the answer to the question whether the present rate of mortality was exaggerated by the Royal Commission." And the resolution adds these significant words :—"There can be no doubt that the unquestionable facts of the case in this Presidency and army did not agree with the general conclusions stated in the commissioners' report, and the knowledge of this fact caused a deep and universal feeling of injustice and wrong in all those commanding and medical officers and others who had laboured of late most zealously and effectively in the cause of sanitary reform. The Governor in Council has reason to know that this feeling pervaded all ranks from the very highest to the very lowest, that it did in many ways great harm to the cause of sanitary reform, and was likely to prove a most serious obstacle to carrying out the many excellent suggestions of the commission."

The Governor in Council might have added—only it was not his business to point to a matter of Imperial policy—that the impression produced by the conclusions of the Royal Commission has tended in no small degree to render Indian service unpopular, and consequently to interfere with recruiting for the line. The results, to be sure, refer only to Bombay; but their application to the whole of India may be taken for granted; and it is much to be regretted that a mistaken mode of calculation, from unnecessary data, should have led to so false an impression upon so important a subject.

SCINDE RAILWAY (INDUS STEAM FLOTILLA, PUNJAB, AND DELHI RAILWAYS) COMPANY.

The half-yearly general meeting of this company was held yesterday (Friday) at the London Tavern; Mr. William Patrick Andrew in the chair.

The Secretary having read the notice convening the meeting, the report of the directors, which has already been published, was taken as read.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said he was happy to state that by the recent mail accounts of the traffic were received of a much more favourable nature than was indicated in the report. The directors in all their reports had studiously stated what they believed to be the exact facts of the case, and, if anything, they held out hopes of less prosperity than they believed would be realised. He was happy to say on the present occasion that the statement regarding the traffic, and the hopes held out respecting it, had been more than realised, inasmuch as the traffic managers of the Scinde and Punjab Railway had reported that the traffic on both lines had received a great impetus, with every prospect of its continuing. On the last occasion he had stated before he went into details that they had in all their undertakings about 137 miles of railway open and in working order; that they had 531 miles under construction; and that they had about 500 miles under survey, making in all entrusted to this company 1,161 miles, without small branches which would be necessary. He had now to state that instead of having only 137 miles open for traffic they had 358; they had 310 under construction, and they had the same number of miles as before under survey. The improvements of the harbour of Kurrachee, on the ultimate success of which all their undertakings must of necessity depend, were going on now with greater vigour than formerly, and had already greatly progressed, inasmuch as two feet more water on the bar was now available. But those improvements, from what cause he was not aware, that had been suggested by the eminent harbour engineer, Mr. Walker, had been interfered with, and only part of that scientific gentleman's ideas had been carried out. Instead of carrying the project out in its integrity, they had only done half of it. He was, however, happy to say, from the private information he had received, that it had now been finally determined to carry out those improvements in their integrity. Those on the spot, both connected with the harbour and with the railway, and the leading commercial men, all looked forward to those improvements as the most certain means of making Kurrachee Harbour the best possible, in fact, second to no harbour in India, unless it was that of Bombay itself. He thought it necessary to make these observations, inasmuch as several of the shareholders had applied to him for information with regard to the position of the harbour. He had already stated that the traffic of the Scinde Railway was increasing, and he might add he had received a letter from the acting agent, reporting a further increase in that traffic. The flotilla, he was happy to say, had also participated in that increased traffic, the steamers being perfectly inadequate to remove the goods at Mooltan. The directors had taken, as would be seen from the report, the best means possible to obtain efficient steamers for the navigation of the Indus. He might say the plan which he originally, above all others, desired was, to place the building of those steamers in the hands of the eminent firms who now had undertaken to build them. He considered it one of the most difficult problems to solve how to get a boat well adapted for that difficult and treacherous river, but he believed they were now in a fair way of solving that most difficult of all problems. If they succeeded according to their expectations they would be in a position to ask the Government boldly to make a very large increase to their flotilla. If they did not succeed it would then be an additional argument for them to urge upon the Government the absolute necessity for the immediate commencement of the railway along the valley of the Indus. But he should be glad to see that they were able, in the first instance, to navigate these treacherous waters with efficient steam vessels. Other means might suggest themselves, such as the turning of that difficult pass at Sukkur by means of a short canal, and should that project be carried out, one obstacle would be removed in the navigation of the river. The more successful the steamers were the more would the commerce of the country be developed, and the more perfect would be the communication by railways. He had had the honour of explaining on several previous occasions that it was not expected the company would meet with any injurious rivalry whatever. He considered after the Indus Valley Railway was constructed, there would be ample room for those vessels to supply the ports of the river, and indeed to carry some of the less valuable and more heavy goods that might not come to the railway. He might now say a few words with regard to the Punjab Railway. It was mentioned in the report that it was opened throughout at the end of April last. No railway in India has been so highly honoured as that railway had been by the great and illustrious men of the country who had identified themselves with it. The present Governor-General, as they would remember, had turned the first sod, and Sir Robert Montgomery had opened the section to Umritsur. The Viceroy had opened the first section from Lahore towards Mooltan, the opening of the line throughout having been witnessed by the present excellent Governor, Mr. McLeod. The traffic, considering the unusually severe heat of the season—the months of May and June being the hottest in the year, and the least likely for people to travel, or even send their goods—notwithstanding these disadvantages, the traffic was double in the month of June what it had been in the previous month, and the traffic in the last week for which returns had been received was £2,100. That, considering the season and the newness of the undertaking to the natives, was an increase which to him was perfectly satisfactory, as well as to the local authorities. By the last mail the acting agent wrote that there was a large accumulation of merchandise at Mooltan. The estimates taken for the completion of the Punjab Railway had been sent forward by the chief engineer, who thinks the cost of completing the line will but little exceed £2,000,000. His (the chairman's) own opinion had always been that before they had built every station and thoroughly equipped the line with rolling stock, which they had not done yet, the sum of £2,500,000 he had originally named would be very nearly approached. However, it was very gratifying to find that the cost was kept down so much as it would be, notwithstanding the scene of their operations being so remote from the sea. As to the Delhi Railway, the works were progressing rapidly. The arrangements made by their excellent agent, Mr. Stevens, for the local contracts had succeeded well. Everything was being pushed forward, and every preparation was being made by Mr. Brassey to carry that important work to a speedy and satisfactory completion. Those were the four works—the Scinde Railway, the Indus Flotilla, the Punjab Railway, and the Delhi Railway, which they had inaugurated, and so far brought towards completion. But the line of railway of all others to which they attached importance was that along the Indus Valley. They attached importance to that, inasmuch as without it the other three undertakings would be less remunerative to the proprietors, and less valuable to the Government than they must of necessity be if the missing link were supplied. Great credit was due to Mr. Brunton and his staff for their exertions under circumstances of no ordinary difficulty, inasmuch as the last season had been one of unusual severity, and had been attended with great sickness. The plans and sections and maps would do credit to engineers in any country. The route by the left bank he had advocated as the shortest, the easiest, and the cheapest, and the survey and estimates proved that that opinion was correct. Their staff had surveyed from Kotree on the right bank to Sukkur. They had surveyed 480 miles of the left bank, and about 200 on the right bank. But before any final decision could be come to, it was thought necessary to make a third survey, by way of Jacobabad. He considered it waste of time to survey that route. It was beset with physical difficulties, and even if it were one of the easiest lines in the world, as far as he was himself concerned, he would not give his consent to a line strategically on the wrong side of the river. The great thing was to have information on all points, and actual surveys, so as to put them in a position to select the best line. The advantages the Indus Valley line would give to the Government in developing the commerce of the country was very great.

It would also give them great facilities in the movement of troops, and would be the means of saving life. He considered the moving of a regiment up the Indus route by having a railway, instead of the present railway and river communication, would diminish the cost by £1 a man, and instead of taking twenty days it would take four days. He thought that all the circumstances combined must induce the Government to extend their guarantee. He thought by this time next year he might have the pleasure of announcing that the inauguration of this great enterprise had been committed to their hands. He had nothing further to remark on this occasion, and would merely state his desire to give any further information that any gentleman might wish for. He would now move that the report of the directors be received and adopted.

Mr. Williams seconded the resolution.

A Shareholder asked whether it was probable that more money would shortly be wanted for the Delhi Railway.

The Chairman said they had still about £800,000 in the hands of the Government, but they were paying, he was happy to say, large cheques to the contractors as the work progressed, so that the money would be speedily diminished. The directors would not be able to take any money, or make any calls for five or six months. When their money was reduced to £300,000 or £400,000 they would, probably, make a call of about £2 a share, and give the shareholders the option of paying up in full. With regard to the £500,000 additional capital for the Punjab Railway, it would be issued to the existing shareholders in the Punjab Company in the proportion of one share for every three.

The resolution for the adoption of the report was then put and carried unanimously.

A resolution was also past, authorising the raising of £500,000 additional capital by the issue of 25,000 shares of £20 each on account of the Punjab Railway, upon which capital the Secretary of State for India in Council has guaranteed 5 per cent. interest.

A cordial vote of thanks to the chairman then terminated the proceedings.

DEODAR FORESTS.

At the British Association, on September 12, Dr. Cleghorn read a paper upon the "Deodar Forests of the Western Himalaya," and exhibited a sketch map, traced from the Great Trigonometric Survey, showing approximately the position and extent of the Deodar tracts between the Jumna and Indus rivers, so far as ascertained. He dwelt upon the applicability of the wood of the cedrus deodara for railway purposes, for which it is found very valuable. A Government officer is now employed upon each of the great rivers of the Punjab for working the forests upon sound principles of conservancy. The quantity of deodar timber brought down the Chenab alone in one year was not less than 12,000 tons. Allusion was made to an interesting and increasing trade in timber upon the Indus and Kabal rivers, an important subject in its commercial and political bearing. The deodar grows at an elevation of from 5,000 to 12,000 feet, in a cold and changeable climate. The natives of the Himalaya invariably prefer the deodar for building purposes. It is used in the construction of temples, forts, and bridges; in damp and exposed situations, with alternate layers of stone, and some of these buildings have stood for centuries. The underground behaviour of this wood in the permanent way of railways has, so far, been satisfactory in the dry climate of the Punjab.

In its native habitat the beautiful Himalayan cedar deserves all that has been reported of it, and of all the coniferae it yields the most valuable timber for railway purposes. A series of photographs by Colonel C. W.

Hutchinson, R.E., illustrating the characteristic vegetation of the deodar tracts, and other Himalayan trees was exhibited by Dr. Cleghorn, who pointed out the good qualities and uses of all the various species. He also gave the dimensions of several of them, and the rate of growth as indicated by concentric circles of the logs floated down the different rivers. The importance of conserving our Indian forests was first discussed at the British Association meetings in 1850 and 1851, and since then the subject has attracted great attention in India and England.

Mr. Tristram followed upon the same subject, remarking upon the peculiar isolation of certain trees of this kind, and mentioned the attempted growth of cedars in Algeria by the French Government.

Col. Munro thought the deodar would never be of any use if grown too quickly—the quality of the wood so much depends upon the soil in which it is grown.

A discussion took place in which Dr. Thomson, Col. Munro, and Dr. Cleghorn took part, as to the identity of the deodar with the cedar of Lebanon.

CHOLERA EN ROUTE TO AND FROM INDIA.

The following letter to the editor appears in the Times :—

Sir,—If you deem the following statement of facts, or my remarks thereupon, of sufficient importance to merit a place in your columns, pray give insertion thereto.

The steamer Nyanza, belonging to the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, with the outward Bombay mails and passengers, left Marseilles at nine A.M. on the 6th inst.

Two deaths from cholera had occurred among the ship's company prior to that date, but during that stay in Marseilles, and although no warning was given to the passengers prior to or at their embarkation, cholera was then actually in the ship, and one case terminated fatally on the 7th inst. The dead body was immediately thrown overboard.

At Malta a delay of some fourteen hours occurred. Rigorous quarantine regulations retarded the coaling, and necessitated that work being done by the crew of the steamer, reduced in number by three deaths and sickness. The Nyanza arrived at her moorings here at four P.M. on the 12th inst., and, after some delay, the yellow flag was run up, and quarantine declared for ten days from the date of the last death on board, say until the 17th inst.

The passengers addressed a letter to Colonel Stanton, her Britannic Majesty's Agent and Consul-General here, requesting his intercession, in order, if possible, to prevent their missing the steamer Malta, from Suez, and so being detained in Egypt until the 27th inst. The Consul replied that he could not interfere in the matter, and that the rules of the Board of Health (which consists of representatives of all countries) could not be set aside.

At a late hour this afternoon a communication arrived from the company's agent ashore to the commander on board, stating that the local authorities had decided to reduce the quarantine from ten to eight days from the last death, and that after a visit of inspection from Dr. Ogilvie early to-morrow the ship will receive free pratique, and the passengers be permitted to proceed on their voyage.

Assuming that the agent is not confusing dates (eight days would imply the 15th, not 14th inst.), and that the passengers proceed by the steamer Malta from Suez (that steamer having been delayed by a telegraphic order), your columns will doubtless have conveyed that intelligence to your readers long before this letter reaches you. Possibly the Peninsular and Oriental Company's agents in Marseilles and elsewhere would do well in future, when cholera exists on board any of their ships, to inform passengers prior to embarkation, and if the said passengers salute the pest the risk is their own.

Assuming that the passengers receive no intimation of that kind, and that the disease spreads among them, causing death, would not an action by a widow or children—say for the loss of a husband or father—result in a verdict against the company? Other considerations in any number suggest themselves; take one, that of homeward passengers being coolly embarked in an infected ship.

Although sickness still exists among the crew of the Nyanza, all the passengers are in excellent health, and will long retain a grateful recollection of Colonel Stanton, who, although officially unable to help them, yet displayed extreme kindness and courtesy towards them personally.

Permit me to add that I formed one of the number of passengers who embarked at Marseilles in the Nyanza, and that now, as heretofore, I have at all times received unvarying courtesy from the Peninsular and Oriental Company's officials, one and all of them.—I am, Sir, your very obedient servant,
THOMAS CLIFFE.

On board the Nyanza, in quarantine at Alexandria, Sept. 13.

LUCKNOW PRIZE MONEY.

SECOND DISTRIBUTION.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That PRIZE ROLLS for the undermentioned Corps, on account of the SECOND DISTRIBUTION OF PRIZE MONEY for the OPERATIONS and CAPTURE of LUCKNOW in 1858, have been received at this Hospital, containing the names of those whose Shares have been remitted to the Commissioners of this Hospital by the Government of India; and that Distribution of such Shares will be made at my Office, on the 4th of OCTOBER next, and will be continued on MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, and FRIDAYS, during the hours from Eleven to Two o'clock.

The following are the Rolls which have been received, viz.: Royal Horse and Foot Artillery, Royal Engineers, Military Train, Medical Staff Corps, 2nd Dragoon Guards, 7th and 9th Dragoons, 5th, 8th, 10th, 20th, 23rd, 32nd, 34th, 38th, 43rd, 53rd, 64th, 75th, 78th, 79th, 8th, 82nd, 84th, 88th, 90th, 93rd, 97th Foot, 2nd and 3rd Battalion Rifle Brigade.

DIRECTIONS.

All Claimants must state the Regimental Number borne by the Soldier.

In all personal applications at Chelsea Hospital by Discharged Soldiers, they must produce their Parchment Certificate of Service and Regimental Account Book, or Parchment Certificate of Pension.

Pensioners residing in the Country should apply through the Staff Officer of Pensioners for the District in which they respectively reside.

Claimants to the Shares of Deceased Soldiers, and all Claimants, Officers or Soldiers, residing beyond five miles from Chelsea Hospital, must apply by letter, addressed to "The Secretary of Chelsea Hospital," when the necessary Forms will be sent.

Soldiers still serving must apply through the Officer commanding the Regiment or Depot.

OBSERVE.—The Claims preferred are so numerous, that it is found impossible to examine them, except after some delay. They will be investigated as early as possible in the order of date in which they are received; and an answer will be sent without the necessity of again applying on the subject.

A great portion of the delay is occasioned by the unnecessary renewal of the several applications.

GEORGE HUTT,

Secretary to the Commissioners.

REMOVED TO ABOVE ADDRESS FROM
210, REGENT-STREET, W.THE NEW THEORY IN RIFLES.—

Lieutenant James Forsyth, in his excellent work, "The Sporting Rifle, &c.," first promulgated the startling theory that Rifles could be so constructed as to lessen the elevation by increasing the charge of powder. This theory, which the Advertiser has proven to be correct, alters the whole position of Rifles in favour of the sportsman. Formerly, with a high trajectory, the bullet which would have hit a tiger in a vital part at 100 yards, would pass over his back at 25 or 50 yards. By the new system, as elaborated and perfected in DOUGALL'S LOCKFAST BREECHLOADERS, there is a point-blank range to 150 yards, combined with a velocity and smashing power hitherto unknown.—(See TIMES, 11th October, 1864.) No other Rifle possesses the same advantages.

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile.

GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for while the ginger relieves the stomach from distension and flatulency, arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach, and by that means gives it a healthy and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpaired by age or climate, and well adapted for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, Cholera, or those complaints incidental to tropical climates, it is invaluable, as in numerous cases a dose or two has checked and frequently cured most alarming attacks. No family should be without it. Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-eighth pints.

Agreeable Seidlitz Powder, in one bottle, protected by a case, with measure and spoon included. The advantage of this preparation is the perfect combination of the solid ingredients of the Seidlitz Spring in one compound powder.

It is very cooling and refreshing, well adapted for exportation, or travellers by land or sea.

Aromatic Tincture of Quinine.—For the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria.

No person exposed to the influence or predisposing cause of Fever should be without it, for it taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria.—Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by THOS. WILKINSON late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co., 270, Regent-street London, W.

MRS. JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTH- ING SYRUP, FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR TEETH.

This infallible remedy has preserved hundreds of children when thought past recovery from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as efficacious, tending to produce the teeth with ease; and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery where there are young children; for, if a child wakes in the night with pains in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fever, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and copying parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bills, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle.
Sold by all chemists and medicine vendors.

Earl RUSSELL sent to the College of Physicians a communication received by him from Manila (where Cholera had been raging fearfully), to the effect, that, of all remedies tried, Chlorodyne was the most effective.—See Brit. Med. J., CHLORODYNE (TOWLE'S). Cholera,

Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Cramp, Ague, Consumption, Asthma, Cough, Colds, Bronchitis, &c. Sickness, &c., immediately relieved by a dose of TOWLE'S CHLORODYNE, which is admitted to be a most wonderful and valuable medicine, and preferred by the profession for its known composition and moderate price.

Liverpool, Feb. 22nd, 1864. Ship Gertrude.
Mr. TOWLE.—Sir,—Having recently arrived from Bombay and during our stay there myself and crew being violently attacked with dysentery, so general in India, Captain Clements, of the ship Marseilles, lying near us, seeing the condition we were in, kindly sent a bottle of your Chlorodyne, from which myself and crew found immediate relief; and during the voyage home proved a most effective and valuable medicine. Having been instrumental in saving my own life and that of others, we feel it a duty and pleasure to send this statement of facts, to make what use of you you think proper, believing that no vessel ought to leave port without a good supply in her medicine chest.

NOTHING IMPOSSIBLE.—The greatest and most useful invention of the day, AGUA AMA- RELLA.—Messrs. JOHN GOSNELL and Co., Three King- court, Lombard-street, Perfumers to her Majesty, respectfully offer to the public this truly marvellous fluid, which gradually restores the human hair to its pristine hue—no matter at what age.

The Agua Amarella has none of the properties of dyes; it, on the contrary, is beneficial to the system, and when the hair is once restored, one application per month will keep it in perfect colour. Price one guinea; half bottles, 10s. 6d.
Testimonials from artists of the highest order and from individuals of undoubted respectability may be inspected on application.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS.

Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.;
postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 6d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price, 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

—Sores which are daily extending, ulcers which are hourly deepening, may be arrested in their torturing progress and induced to take a healthy action by applying this healing Ointment and taking these purifying Pills. It soothes all distempers of and extracts all morbid humour from the skin.
Old ulcers of the legs, inflammations caused by varicose veins and cramps of the lower limbs, can sensibly be eased and shortly cured by Holloway's never failing Ointment, which represses excessive, and stimulates sluggish, vascular, and nervous action. In constitutions breaking down under piles, fistulas, and other similarly painful maladies, a few applications of this cooling Ointment will give comfort, and a persistence in its use will effect a cure.

GIBSON AND COMPANY

Respectfully invite the attention of MILITARY MEN, EQUESTRIANS, and OWNERS OF HORSES, to their Newly-Invented EXPANDING SADDLE, which admits of ready adjustment to the size of any horse, creating a secure and easy seat without the slightest inconvenience to either horse or rider. The principle of EXPANSION and CONTRACTION comprises a simple arrangement of mechanism within the saddle so perfect, that by merely turning a screw the pad is proportioned to the size and form of the animal, on which it firmly rests with a uniform pressure, and is securely retained in its position by means of an ordinary girth.

This invention has obtained the approval and distinguished patronage of HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, and from the very favourable opinions expressed by competent judges, and all who have had an opportunity of testing its merits, there is no doubt it will come into general use; indeed, its success is already established.

Green,	Canary,	Orange,	Yellow,
Phosphine,	Scarlet,	Red,	Ultramarine,
Brown,	Black,	Regina,	Souble Blue.

The majority of our Dyes are entirely soluble in boiling water, and will dye without the addition of other ingredients.

ANILINE DYES.—"I shall commence my observations on dyeing, by referring especially to the remarkable and beautiful colours derived from coal tar, the introduction of which into this art may be said to constitute the chief distinction, as far as dyeing is concerned, between the present and the former Exhibition, creating, in fact, a new era in the tinctorial art. Coal tar colours deserve attention for their power, as well as for the facility with which they may be applied, for one grain will deeply tint half a gallon of water, and little or no skill is required for their application."—Vide Report by Grace Calvert, Esq., F.R.S., Ph.D., Honorary Professor of Chemistry.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE have received our usual files of papers by the Bombay mail, with dates from Calcutta to the 1st of September, and Bombay to the 8th of that month.

The most important news is from Calcutta, and of this the shipwreck of the Eagle Speed has attracted the most attention. It is a sad story of an inefficient ship, inefficiently officered, and manned by a dastardly crew. The Friend of India sums up the most lamentable facts after the vessel struck, when three of the Eagle Speed's boats were launched, manned by the crew, and commanded by Capt. Hoskins, by the pilot (at Capt. Brinsden's request), and by the second officer, the first being ill. Including the coolies who threw themselves into the water on hen-coops, the boats saved 169, and all the Europeans. Capt. Hoskins' boat made five trips, but the others were soon smashed; one of them had at half-past twelve brought off the captain, whom his own crew refused to help. The steamer's boat was also smashed after one trip. Her two large boats were never launched. Capt. Hoskins said, "Had the steamer anchored ahead, and a raft been made, many more lives might have been saved, but there was no material to make a raft of," and Captain Brinsden in vain "asked the steamer to anchor on the bow or astern, and pass lines, in order to keep up a quicker and safer communication?" Before the captain left, the boat-swain had deserted, the compounder and some topasses had broken into the brandy-closet, the interpreter was not to be found, and the pilot, who knew the language, did not return to the ship. "From first to last the crew acted badly. There was some difficulty in getting them to man the boats latterly. They were shamed into it by the passengers." The steamer left for Port Canning; no hint was given to the three hundred miserable wretches who were sinking, to launch the ship's cutter, which had not been used, though the one European left and five negroes did do so, and, with thirty coolies, were afterwards found by the steamer. The ship continued to float all that night, and did not sink till seven on Wednesday morning, justifying the opinion of Captain Hoskins:—"Considering the rate at which the ship was sinking, I was sanguine that we would have succeeded in getting the greater portion of the coolies out." Two steamers were at once sent round from Calcutta, and the Lady Elyn returned from Port Canning. They found three coolie lads on the mast of the wreck, and saved about 60 more who had floated to Halliday's and Butcher's Island, where the tigers are said to have destroyed some. The coolies assert that the last European attempted to fire the ship. Of the 497 coolies 260 seem to have perished on that terrible Wednesday morning, or afterwards in the jungle." The pilot is being tried in the Marine Court for losing the ship and abandoning the passengers, and four of the crew have been arrested for setting fire to the vessel, with a view to trial in the Admiralty Court. The evidence heard before the former tribunal disclosed a gross case of incapacity among the officers and drunkenness among the crew—though of the latter, those who behaved the worst seemed to know very well what they were about.

The affairs of Bhootan have advanced a stage. It is stated that almost all the Soobahs and Jungpens of that State—among whom, however, the notorious Tongsoo Penlow was not included—lately assembled at Tassissudon, where, at a recent meeting, the Deb Rajah explained to them clearly that if they were not inclined to make peace with the British Government, he and the Dhurm Rajah would resign, and consider themselves at liberty to make their own arrangements. After much discussion the pacific arguments prevailed, and it was resolved that a letter should be addressed to the British Political Agent on the subject. Accordingly, the Deb Rajah wrote to Colonel Bruce that the treaties signed by Mr. Eden would be returned, as required, when arrangements for peace should have been completed; but he remarked that nobody compelled Mr. Eden to sign them, and that it was not customary in Bhootan to return any letters or documents previously written. However, the Deb Rajah said that, on receipt of a reply to this, he would depute his Private Secretary and the Prime Minister to Buxa, with a large retinue, with Mr. Eden's documents, and expressed a hope that the British Political Agent, accompanied by Cheeboo Lama, would be at Buxa, to settle the matter at once. It is further said that the Bhootas had resolved to submit to whatever pecuniary allowance the British Government may grant them, provided the Dooars were left freely open to subjects of Bhootan, for carrying on trade in dry fish, oil, cotton, broadcloth, sandal wood, resin, betelnuts, and betel leaves, which latter they consider so essential for the preservation of their lives. The conditions proposed by the British Government appear to have been briefly as follows:—That the Bhootas should acknowledge the surrender of all the Bengal Dooars and lower hills to the British Government; that the compulsory treaties extorted from Mr. Eden should be returned, and a Bhoota chief should come to the Presidency, and apologise to Mr. Eden for the misconduct of the Tongsoo Penlow towards him; and that all the captives now detained in Bhootan against their will should be surrendered to the British Government, and a treaty of friendship and fair dealing entered into for the future. On the Bhootas agreeing to the above, the British Government would, as an act of grace, grant the Bhootan Government an annual allowance of not less than Rs. 25,000 per annum, to be increased hereafter to the maximum sum of Rs. 50,000 per annum, pending good behaviour and the pleasure of the British Government. Thus far all seems pleasant enough, but the difficulty is still with Tongsoo Penlow, and it is believed in Calcutta that the negotiations will prove a failure. The Englishman, indeed, says that they should never have been entered into at the present stage of the war. It is at any rate satisfactory to find that the preparations for the advance are being carried on with undiminished vigour, though the name of the commanding officer is not announced. The report in Bombay, by the way, about Colonel Stewart, of course comes from Calcutta. In that city it is now said that Brigadier-general Tytler, who has borne the heat and burden of the sickly and inactive season, is also to be at the head of the new expedition. It may be supposed, therefore, that the Brigadier-general's health is better than it was a short time since. With regard to the plan of the campaign the Englishman believes that it is intended to partake more of the character of an expedition for punishment, than of a campaign of aggression. The soldiers will therefore march without tents, and the commander, having dictated peace at Punakha, will withdraw the force to within our own territories. Some prominent positions in the hills will be retained and fortified; but the fatal mistake of occupying the Dooars during the rains will not, it is thought, be repeated.

The sentence upon Mr. Fraser—four years' penal servitude—is considered by a portion of the Calcutta press to be too lenient. Mr. Fraser very probably intended to return the money, and the Court proportioned the punishment to his moral rather than his legal offence—with only the latter of which it had anything to do.

The money and share market reports state that several of the banks and mercantile houses had been purchasing Government securities, in the absence of any other employment for the large cash balances that had accumulated during the preceding two months, there being little or no demand for legitimate business purposes. Loans were still freely obtainable for 3 and 3½ per cent. The share market had been very quiet during the week, and Bank of Bengal shares were rather cheaper. The state of the market was having a depressing effect upon joint-stock companies, the banks not advancing upon any shares but the Bank of Bengal, and the Bengal Credit Mobilier being inadequate for the wants of the public in this respect.

We have no arrival from Madras by this mail, but we hear of a telegram having been received at that Presidency ordering the complete re-organisation of the local army, subject to the supervision of the Supreme Court.

There were unpleasant reports of cholera from Lucknow. This disease, as well as fever and bronchitis, were said to be very prevalent. The depot of H.M.'s 55th Regiment had been the greatest sufferers, according to latest accounts. Four or five men, and as many women and children, had died of the former disease, and though the families had been moved into camp some miles from Lucknow, the sickness had not abated. One man of the Artillery had also died from cholera on the night of the 16th of August, and a lieutenant of the 5th Lancers had been attacked, and was hopelessly ill on the 17th. Five deaths from cholera had likewise occurred in the Church Mission Orphanage amongst the Christian children, of whom many more were suffering at the date of our advices. Cholera had also broken out in the city, and the natives are said to have been dying in large numbers. Fever and bronchitis were principally confined to children in the civil station. There had been a great deal of rain, and this being so the present sickness was by no means anticipated by the doctors.

The most important news from Bombay is contained in the account of a Durbar held by Sir Bartle Frere, at which he varied the monotony of official addresses by giving, albeit in courteous terms, a sharp reproof to the Chiefs and Sirdars of Western India for not educating themselves and keeping pace in the march of progress with the British Government, as wiser Chiefs and Sirdars were doing elsewhere. If they neglected their mental culture he warned them that they would all fall into decay and lose their territories.

There are more troubles in the Enniskilling Dragoons—still stationed at Mhow, and still commanded by Colonel Crawley. We give a couple of the stories flying about, on the authority of the Times of India. The victims—or intended victims—are both subalterns. One was charged with objecting to salute a superior officer when off duty; and the other with borrowing newspapers from the mess-table, and then being detected restoring them. In one case the Commander-in-Chief peremptorily ordered that the offender be released from arrest.

The announcement of the death of Mr. Justice Forbes has been received with great regret.

The next arrival from India is the Calcutta Mail, which left Alexandria on Sunday, and may be expected in London on Saturday evening.

Of home news there is very little afloat. The report of the Royal Commission still remains a sealed book. The only copies issued are marked "confidential," and cannot therefore be made public. It is understood, however, that the members consider the guarantee not complied with, and that among their recommendations are certain changes as to promotion. The bonus question, it is said, is not mentioned in the report, not having been referred to the Commission. It is known that there is a great difference of opinion between the Commissioners and the Horse Guards, and there is no doubt that many changes must take place before the entire question can be satisfactorily settled.

THE MARCH INTO BHOOTAN.

Only six weeks remain for the completion of the preparations for the march of two columns of the British army into Bhootan. These preparations are going on, although the Bhoteas have made another attempt to gain time by promising submission to our too mild demands, and the sanction of the Crown to the invasion of foreign territory has not yet been received. We know a good deal more about the topography and the people of Bhootan than we did a year ago, and we now proceed to publish the latest and most reliable information as to the routes which the two columns are likely to follow, if the present intentions of the military authorities are carried out.

The western or left column, with Colonel Bruce as civil officer, will start from Buxa and deal with Poonakha, Paro and Tassissudon. Buxa has an altitude of 2,400 feet, and Poonakha of 3,759, but Paro is 7,741 feet above the sea, approached through a pass 11,164 feet, while in the direct route between Buxa and Poonakha the Dokiew pass lies at a height of 10,000 feet. The ups and downs, the precipitous cliffs and difficult paths, may be imagined from these facts. From Buxa castle the road ascends and descends to the village of Gygoogoo, eleven miles. Nine miles farther is Muri-chom, a pretty hamlet in the midst of fields of wheat, reached by a rocky and bad road. The next march, of seventeen miles, to Chuka fort is very tiresome. There are two streams crossed by wooden bridges, and the road at one place is almost barred by a precipitous cliff, on the face of which it is cut. Chuka, a strong fort and a mean village, is seen rising from a valley washed by the Temboo. Another seventeen miles' march among the spurs of the hills which shut in the Temboo valley brings the traveller, after a steep ascent, to Chupeha, nearly 8,000 feet above the sea. Here is the finest wheat cultivation in the country. After ten miles of steep descent, by a road tolerably good except where it passes along the face of a cliff above a roaring torrent, Panga is reached, and after seven miles further march by the banks of the river which is overhung by weeping willows, and abounds in fish, Lamroo. Nine miles further is Woollaka or Wanka. Here the Paro Penlow sometimes lives; Paro itself is twelve miles distant. Six miles off is the hot-weather capital of Tassissudon, where the Durbar is at present. Even in May the higher hills are topped with snow, the village itself being 7,271 feet above the sea. The Temboo, which falls into the Berhampooter, washes the walls of Tassissudon, and irrigates the rice and wheat fields. It is well-bridged, and is fordable in May. From Woollaka there is a descent of 1,600 feet for 14½ miles to Telagong, whence the road strikes off to Tassissudon, which can be seen in the distance. Near this the captive Bengalees are kept; on passing the fort of Sontoka, the ascent of the great Dokiew pass begins and occupies three hours. When gained the view is glorious to the south, while Poonakha and the snows of Thibet are seen to the north. A generally steep descent brings the traveller, after eight and a half miles, to Poonakha. The fort and palace stand on the point formed by the confluence of the Patchoo and Matchoo, or father and mother, rivers, which ultimately fall into the Berhampooter. The palace is a mean and dirty structure, consisting of a rectangular enclosure, with the citadel in the centre. That is a six-storied tower in which the Dhurm Rajah lives. This poor boy's rooms are reached by break-neck steps lined with iron, but his reception room in the south of the building is well fitted up. Close to it are some 300 Lamas. The Deb Rajah lives on the west face, and on the east side are the apartments for the Paro (and perhaps the Tongso) Penlow, the Governor of the place, and the amlah. A bridge across each river gives entrance to the palace, and there is a place of public reception to the north. Outside there are chiefly ruins. The Wandipore castle of the Angdu Forung Jungpen, and the Churring pass by which the natives go to the plains, are visible. They reach the plains in seven days. The route we have described is 103 miles long and consists of 9 marches. If it is necessary for us to proceed against Paro, the column must leave the Poonakha road at Woollaka, 80 miles from Buxa, and go up the valley of the Tukehoo five miles to Pemethong, and then for 8½ miles more through the Biel-yah pass, 11,164 feet high, to Paro. The approach to the fort by the river is easy. The valley is a level plain, stretching away to the very foot of the great Choomalari pass. Paro is much more worthy of being called a capital than any other place in Bhootan. It is a large rectangular building of five stories, and its central tower of seven stories is surmounted by a copper cupola. It is well-kept, and the fine bridge of pine logs by which it is approached is a handsome structure. The town is considerable for Bhootan. Seven miles off is the fort of Dakya Jung, held as a protection against Thibet.

Tongso is 56 miles from Poonakha, and is reached by the Peleelapza pass, 10,873 feet high. If the right column, with Lieut.-Colonel W. Agnew as civil officer, approaches it from Dewangiri, the force will have a journey of 216 miles in 16 marches. The road goes for 8 miles to Rydang; for 11 to Kheguupa, 6,000 feet above the sea; for 10 to Sassee; for 11 to Bailfa by a bad road; for 7 to Roong-dong, famed for its poultry; for 6 to Tass-gong above the Monass, where there is a Chinese house belonging to the Rajah; for 6 to Nulkar, over the Monass swinging bridge; for 6 to Khumna, over the Koolong torrent; for 5 to Phullung; for 9 to Tassangsee, where there is a fort; for 7 to Sana; for 15 to Linjee, before reaching which the Doon-glala peak, 12,474 feet high, has to be traversed; for 8½ to Lenglong over the Kooree; for 6 to Tamashoo; for 11 to Donjai; for 9 to the Penree hut, so high as to be covered with snow at the end of February; for 12½ to Boomdungtung, which is approached through the Roodoola pass, 12,635 feet high; for 14 to Jugur; for 9 to Jaessa and 12½ to Tongso. This is a miserable place, though second in importance only to Poonakha. Its palace seems to be contemptible as a place of defence, its loopholes being placed as if intended for firing in the air. It is situated on a nullah defended by outworks 700 feet above it. On the east side these might, from their situation, be easily demolished by stones. The place itself is commanded in every direction, particularly from a hill to the eastward. The palace is crowded by several hundreds of people, and is less imposing than that of Bay-agur, where Tongso Penlow usually spends the summer. A march by this route from Dewangiri seems physically impossible to any but peaceable and enduring travellers. As Tongso Penlow must, however, be made to feel our power, his stronghold might be approached from Poonakha.

Our readers will see from these details, the most authoritative which can be obtained, that the march of four thousand men into Bhootan is a matter to be well considered and carefully superintended. It will not so much require generalship as tact, readiness of resource, dash, and at the same time a ripe military judgment.—Friend of India.

TRIAL OF SIRDAR GOORBUKSH SING.

The trial of Sirdar Goorbuksh Sing, Prime Minister to the Rajah of Nabha, for abetting one Mytaba in the murder of Sirdarnee Mehtab Kour, is one in which the public can scarcely fail to be interested. The delinquent holds a high and responsible position; the murdered lady occupied one loftier still. The offence is of a singularly dark complexion, and the unravelling of the plot introduces us to scenes which speak of the inner life of an Eastern Court. For the particulars which we are about to lay before our readers we are indebted to our contemporary the Lahore Chronicle, who has published in his Supplements of the 5th, 9th and 12th instant the official report of the trial as conducted in the Court of the Deputy Commissioner of Loodianah. The prosecutor on the part of the Crown was Lieutenant R. P. Nisbett, from whose opening address we gather that the prisoner has for a long time served the Nabha State in the highest office it could confer. He had been selected in 1847, by Major Mackeson, the Political Agent at Unballah, to form one of a Council of Regency, when the dethronement of the then Rajah placed a boy on the Guddee. Ten years afterwards he was accused of grossly misusing the authority he possessed, for the purpose of aggrandising himself and his family, and he was in consequence dismissed from office and expelled from the Nabha State. His own jagheer also was resumed. For its loyalty to the British Government in 1857 this State was largely increased, and the rajah was allowed the right of adoption, freedom from tribute, and the exercise of powers more independent than those he had up to that time held. In 1862 this chief sought the recall of the prisoner, and applied to the Lieutenant-Governor for the necessary permission. This, with some reluctance, was granted. The rajah had always been sickly, and at this time consumption was hurrying him to his grave, so that ere the prisoner had been recalled many months his master died. Immediately previous to this event the latter had looked round for some one to whom he might entrust the management of the State, and he selected the prisoner, whom he had himself recalled, because he was a man of brilliant attainments. He therefore deputed him on the 9th November, 1863, to act in all departments of the State; in other words, he was to be the head of the Government. We now come to the lady in this case. She was the aunt of the rajah, and as frail in character as she was comely in appearance. She had carried on an intrigue with one of the sons of the prisoner before the expulsion of himself and family from Nabha, and during their involuntary absence she had conferred upon her as a gift a house which belonged to the prisoner. It was not restored to him on his return, and this was a source of constant grief and annoyance to him. He cordially hated her. In January last she had gone to her family estate in the district of Goordaspour, where she was assassinated on the 4th of that month by Mytaba and another. This man had been sentenced to two years' imprisonment in the Nabha Jail in default of payment of a fine of Rs. 200, but before nine days of his term had expired he was released by the prisoner for no assignable reason. He was convicted before the Sessions Court of Umritsur, and was sentenced to imprisonment for life, a mitigated sentence, caused by the discovery, made during the trial, that he had been instigated and hired to commit the crime by the prisoner. The other murderer, who had turned Queen's evidence, stated that Mytaba was released from jail by the orders of the prisoner, and that such release, irrespective of other inducements, was part of the consideration which was paid for the perpetration of the crime. The present Rajah had investigated the case, and in his report to the Commissioner of the Cis-Sutlej States (Colonel Sir Herbert Edwards) had hinted his suspicions of the prisoner.

It appears from the trial that the prisoner entertained a bitter grudge against the unfortunate lady who was done to death in the prime of life. Besides the occupation of the house which once belonged to him, there was a dispute about certain jewels which the Sirdarnee had lent his son on the occasion of his wedding, and which he, in a fit of "unconscious kleptomania," so common among natives, quietly retained. The lady also had a jagheer, which once belonged to her husband, and this was attached by the prisoner for six years. The prisoner had apparently learnt also that the Rajah had invited her to return to Nabha, with a distinct intimation of his intention to effect the restoration of her jewels. She had, moreover, threatened to complain to the British Government about them. All these causes combined to irritate a man exercising large powers, and it was under repeated representations made by him that the Rajah was induced to order her to retire to her estate in Goordaspour. Shortly after this the prisoner issued verbal instructions to release Mytaba from jail, although but nine days of his sentence of two years had expired. These orders were given to the Nazim of the Criminal Court direct, and to the Jail Nazir himself, through a servant of the prisoner. And now we have the evidence of Mytaba himself. After stating that he had been in prison for debt, he proceeded to say that his uncle waited on the prisoner Sirdar Goorbuksh Sing, about some land, and inquired how long the confinement was to last. He was told by the Sirdar that if Mytaba would undertake a certain business it would terminate at once. His uncle was sure that his hopeful nephew would undertake anything to please the Sirdar, and accordingly a chupprasse went to the jail, got Mytaba released, and carried him to the prisoner, who thereupon said (when they were by themselves) "There is work to be done; will you do it?" and Mytaba replied, "I will if I can, if I cannot I will say so." The latter was then told that the business in hand was a murder; that it was to be committed in the village of Run-gur Nungle, in the Goordaspour district, and that the victim was a woman, who was an enemy of the prisoner, and who had bewitched and poisoned the late Rajah. Mytaba consented, and received Rs. 50, and was told that as he did not know the geography of the Goordaspour district he would be allowed a month to find the village alluded to. The murderer then proceeded to his own village, and thence, by inquiring as he went along, reached Run-gur Nungle. He pretended to be a sugar merchant, and remained near the village for fifteen days, looking about for the house, which he found at last by enquiring from the village boys. "For two nights he went secretly alone round the deceased's house, to see if there was any guard. After this he went for two nights and watched in a roadway beneath the 'chowbara' for an opportunity; he saw a light burning in the room. The Sirdar (prisoner) had told him that Mehtab Kour was of a fair complexion, with a deep voice, and eyes like a cat. The door used to be closed, and he heard the Sirdarnee talking inside. He saw her through the cracks of the door, and in this way he got to know her appearance and her voice. He returned to Nabha, feeling that he could not commit the murder alone." On presenting himself before the prisoner he was told to take another man with him; and having received, at his own request, a sword from the Sirdar, he proceeded to his own village, and got Heera to join him in the undertaking. Mytaba being responsible for getting his (Heera's) brother out of jail. They then set off. We will let witness give the rest in his own words.

"On their arrival witness pointed out to Heera the chowbara where Mehtab Kour slept. At night they went again, and looked well round, and tried the doors, but none of them would open. Heera then said that this would not do, they could not get an opportunity, and that it would be better to come in the evening, before the doors were shut, when the lamps were lighted, and the lady was eating her dinner. There is a barber's house close by, and it was proposed that witness and his friend should cook their food at the barber's house, and get the information they wanted from the barber's wife. Next day, at 8 or 9 A.M., they went in the garb of travellers to the barber's house, and asked his wife, 'Where is this high chowbara opposite?' She said, 'The Sirdarnee's.' Witness asked, 'What name?' She said, 'Mehtab Kour.' Witness asked, 'Does she live in the chowbara or elsewhere?' She answered, 'The Sirdarnee has another pukka house in which she eats her food, and at night she comes to this chowbara.' Witness and Heera then went into the jungle, and witness asked Heera if he had made up his mind. Heera said, 'when the lady is going from her cook-house to her sleeping apartment that will be the time to kill her.' It was determined not to commit the murder that night, lest suspicion should fall on the barber, but to do it next day. Next day in the evening they both went to the village and concealed themselves in a coach-house, which contained a 'ruth,' and which adjoined the pukka house of the Sirdarnee. Presently they saw the lady go from the chowbara to the cook-house. She was talking to some other woman, and witness pointed her out to Heera. Heera had the sword concealed under his arm, and he said to witness, 'Do you kill her.' Witness replied he could not do it. In the meantime the woman had gone into the cook-house. After two ghurees (about forty minutes), the Sirdarnee came out; she had a young man with her. Heera then stepped forward and struck Mehtab Kour with the sword; witness came up after him. Heera struck Mehtab Kour three times."

In the meantime the Tehseeldar of Phool had received orders from the prisoner to remit a portion of the revenue due by Mytaba's father, and not to enter the sum so remitted in the regular accounts. This man suppressed the fact when Major Cracroft had undertaken the preliminary investigation of the case, and he did so at the request of the prisoner. The evidence given by other witnesses, though not of very great weight when taken singly, yet tells heavily against the prisoner when taken as a whole.—Hurkaru.

[The prisoner has since been convicted, and sentenced to transportation for life.]

THE WRECK OF THE "EAGLE SPEED."

On Sunday morning last, the Eagle Speed, a ship of 1,400 tons, left Port Canning for the West Indies, with a large shipment of coolies, comprising:—

Male adults	300
Female ditto	99
Boys above ten years of age	30
Girls ditto ditto	29
Infants, boys	19
Ditto, girls	20

The number of the officers and crew amounted to thirty-five, and there were on board, besides the pilot, Captain Hoskins, the port-master of Port Canning, a Dr. Sullivan, and two servants. The vessel left the port under towage of the steam tug Lady Elgin. All went well the first day, and at night ship and steamer anchored safely near Halliday's Island. They got under weigh early on the following morning, but, on reaching the mouth of the river, encountered very heavy weather, and a high running sea. The ship, however, had got out clear about a mile and a half to the northward of the R. R. Buoy, and the steamer was ready to cast off; but the pilot, so we are informed, wished the vessel to be towed a little further. This was attempted, but owing, unfortunately, to the working of the ship, one of the hawsers parted. A second hawser was passed, but it took upwards of two hours to do this, and, in the meantime, ship and steamer drifted towards the dangerous Roy Mutlah Sands. It would appear, from what we have been told, that no sail was set, nor anchor let go, by the ship until she crossed the Roy Mutlah, in three fathoms, striking heavily. This took place between five and six P.M., but the steamer kept her in tow till between nine and ten P.M., when she herself became disabled, owing to the bursting of one of her steam pipes.

She was therefore obliged to cast off, but remained by the ship, which then anchored. Between the hours of one and two in the morning, rockets, blue-lights, and other signals of distress were made from the stranded ship. The steamer immediately sent off a boat, which returned with the information that the ship appeared to be rapidly sinking. Owing to the accident to the steam pipe, the tug could not get up sufficient steam to near the vessel until dawn. It was then found that, although the ship had not made much water for some time after she struck, yet, towards midnight, the leak had greatly increased, and the coolies were hard at work at the pumps. Three of the ship's boats had been lowered, and succeeded in making the steamer. These boats contained the greater part of the crew, and several coolies. From every source, and they have not been few, from which we have obtained information, we have learnt that, with two or three exceptions, the crew behaved disgracefully. One informant actually goes so far as to state that they wilfully got the boats smashed under the steamer's spinnings, so as to avoid making trips to the doomed vessel, to save the wretched mortals crowded on the deck. It is hard to believe this of English seamen, but we give the tale as it has been told to us, though loath to believe it true. Two of these boats were, however, stove in on first reaching the steamer. The third was taken command of by Captain Hoskins, who, throughout the terrible scene, displayed the courage and humanity of a true British sailor. Until struck down by partial sunstroke, he worked his best to save life, taking coolies from the wreck, and picking up others who had taken to the water on spars and drifts of wood. This boat, however, after Captain Hoskins left it, was unfortunately stove in. The steamer then lowered a boat, and sent it to the wreck; but this boat, on its return, was stove in too. There being then no means of communicating with the ship, and the steamer being crowded with the crew and coolies saved, it was thought advisable that she should make at once for Port Canning, land the rescued, and return to the wreck. Before doing so, however, she was obliged to steam out to sea, to find the light ship, in order to take bearings. This done, she made for the port, and got as far as Halliday's Island that night (Tuesday), where she anchored. Starting immediately after daylight next morning, she picked up a boat, containing one European, four Africans, and thirty-two coolies, who had managed to escape from the ship after the steamer left. These men declared that when they left the vessel she was fast breaking up. We doubt the truth of this story, and we are glad to learn that every assistance available has been sent down to the scene of disaster. The wreck, when last seen, was at anchor, as we stated yesterday, about four and a half miles from the C. B. buoy, and about fifteen miles from the light ship. The steamers Bulldog and Oude have already gone to the scene of distress, and no energy has been wanting on the part of the owners and agents of the ship and steamer to render every assistance, in the hopes of alleviating the disaster. Notwithstanding all this, however, we fear that the loss of life has been terrible. Out of the total number of coolies embarked (viz., 497, including women and children), only 169 are known to have been saved; 328 unfortunates have, we fear, perished. The weather, on Tuesday night was very bad, and it is apprehended that the vessel then went to pieces. There is, however, a slight hope that the steamer sent down may be able to pick up a number of coolies, who may either be clinging to the wreck, or have got hold of spars, pieces of wood, &c., and drifted towards habitable land. Such, as far as we have been able to learn, are the plain facts of this most unfortunate affair. Of course, a Court of Inquiry will be assembled immediately, to investigate all the matters connected with this disaster. We may say this, however, that the public will be satisfied with nothing but the most searching inquiry into the conduct of the pilot, officers, and crew of the lost vessel. We think that witnesses might be examined, with a view towards the elucidation of certain matters, regarding which various rumours are at present afloat. Information as to whether the ship was properly and sufficiently manned, whether the captain and crew did their utmost to save the lives committed to their charge, and whether perfect sobriety was the distinguished characteristic on board, will, we hope, be firmly asked for, and obtained. The captain we hear was sick and weakly. The first officer was the same. It is a question, then, for the agents of the ship to answer, why this state of things was allowed. These officers ought not to have been allowed to sail, unless fit to do their duty in any emergency. We commend this point, affecting the efficiency of the commander and the crew, most particularly to the attention of the court of inquiry. Upon this, we think, hinges the whole question of the cause of disaster, and not upon any shortcomings of tug steamer or river. The reported bad conduct of the crew makes the case more disgraceful. We have read of many terrible disasters at sea, but we can picture to ourselves no more appalling scene than that exhibited on the Roy Mutlah Sands on Tuesday last, in the eager looks of the dark faces which thronged the decks of the Eagle Speed, and watched with hearts, devoid of hope, the white men steaming away, and leaving them to their cruel and relentless fate.—Englishman, Aug. 25.

Particulars have not yet reached us as to the fate of the three hundred deserted coolies left on the wreck of the Eagle Speed. We understand that, in addition to the steamers already sent from the Hooghly, the Lady Elgin started yesterday morning from Port Canning for the scene of disaster. It is to be hoped that some tidings of the fate of the poor shipwrecked wretches will reach us early to-day.

It has been mentioned to us that the chief cause of the tug Lady Elgin leaving the ship and returning to the port was the want of coals, there only being sufficient to enable the steamer to get back to Canning.

We are also assured that the report of a bacchanalian orgie having taken place on board the tug on Tuesday night is without foundation. We are told that, on the contrary, the deepest sympathy was expressed and felt by all on board for the unfortunate beings they were obliged to leave behind. "The health of the two captains was drunk; but no jollity took place." So writes our informant. We presume that the captains referred to are Captain Hoskins and the captain of the tug, for we cannot suppose that there was any reason for drinking the health of the captain of the Eagle Speed, unless it were intended to compliment him on having saved his own life.—Ibid, August 26.

The following particulars, with which we have been furnished, further explain our telegram published yesterday. The Lady Elgin returned to Port Canning, after revisiting the Eagle Speed on Saturday night, bringing forty men and four women from Halliday Island and Bulcherry Island. At the time she left the pilot brig Charlotte and boats were searching for other survivors, who were supposed to have reached land at different points, to the number of thirty or forty. The Lady Elgin communicated with the steamer Oude, which remained in attendance off the schooner Charlotte, and will communicate with the boats searching the coast. The coolies saved state that the deckhouse floated when the vessel sunk, and afforded them the means of reaching land.—Ibid, August 28.

Since the appearance of the above, Mate Pilot J. W. Vardy has been placed on his trial, in the Marine Court, for the loss of the ship, and unnecessarily abandoning the greater portion of the emigrants after it became a wreck. The evidence, which is too voluminous to be repeated here, confirms the above account in most essential respects. The case stood adjourned at the departure of the mail.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CONDITION OF ROYAL OFFICERS IN INDIA.

—The Englishman says:—In the discussions that we look for early next Session in Parliament a prominent place will, we think, be given to the consideration of the position here of Royal officers, and the conditions under which they now serve in India. With the destruction of the government of the East India Company it occasions little surprise that the rights and privileges of the greater part of its servants should, at the same time, be set aside—all guarantees, protestations, and pledges for their preservation notwithstanding. What chiefly aided in carrying the amalgamation measure through both Houses was the pretence that it was thereby intended to put an end to a close monopoly, and to establish the principle that all who served in India should thenceforth participate equally in such advantages as the Indian Government had the means to bestow. What we think will be very clearly shown is, that while a very great deal has been taken away from the larger section of the late Company's officers, it has been expended upon a smaller section of those who were set apart to be the recipients of the loaves and the fishes; but that the Royals, as a body, have been in no way benefited by the change, and are, indeed, in a worse position than ever. Those who entered the service previous to the mutiny obtained, whether at home or here, a certain general advantage by the augmentation of the Royal regiments, which then became permanent, but the officers who have since then joined the line gained nothing thereby. Augmented as the line has been, yet more than one-third of the whole number of regiments must now be quartered in India, whereas the proportion formerly was less than one-fifth. A greater amount of that Indian service, which is now regarded with such extreme aversion, falls now, therefore, to the share of every line officer; and, as the expenses of living here have nearly doubled, all may be considered as serving here at a greater disadvantage than before, to whom no countervailing benefit has been extended.

MINOR PUNISHMENTS IN THE ARMY.—Some very important orders have been issued by the Commander-in-Chief, on the subject of minor punishments in the army. Powers exercised by commanding officers are continued to them; but the license granted to native officers is limited, especially in cavalry regiments. The Commander-in-Chief considers it inexpedient to make rapid changes in systems which have worked well, but he reminds commanding officers of cavalry corps that there is less chance of caprice and petty tyranny if British officers are referred to by native officers for sanction, before the order for punishment is made final. Rules are laid down regarding the forfeiture and restoration of good conduct pay, and are made applicable to all branches of the native army. The whole regulations are to be applicable to the native armies of the three Presidencies—a commencement to assimilating the rules and regulations of the three Presidencies.

EMPLOYMENT OF SIKHS IN NEW ZEALAND.

—A strong brigade of hardy Punjabees, says the Englishman, would, at the present crisis, render excellent service in New Zealand, and afford to the Colonial Government the means of putting down, with a high hand, those disturbances which, through the temporizing policy hitherto pursued, threaten to become chronic. The expenditure which would be incurred for such auxiliaries would be considerably less than in supplying European troops from India; but this would be the least important part of the advantage gained. Independently of the question of expense, it is found that the colonial empire of Great Britain is now so vast that the country is unable to bear a larger drain, in recruiting fresh forces whenever an emergency arises in any of these numerous dependencies. The assistance which might be rendered by the Native forces of India in a large number of those colonies, from the Antipodes to the Cape of Good Hope, becomes, therefore, a matter of very great importance. Whatever uneasiness of feeling there may be as to the dependence which can be placed on our black troops in India, it is certain that we could place implicit confidence in them while they are employed beyond seas. The probability is, too, that those regiments which returned from such duty would ever after prove the most trustworthy of any borne on our rolls.

NEW LINE OF STEAMERS TO SUEZ.—The Englishman says:—“Our readers will all hail with satisfaction the establishment by the Bombay and Bengal Steam Navigation Company of a line of first-class steamers between Bombay, Aden, and Suez, in connection with similar vessels to run from Alexandria to Liverpool. The rates the company propose to charge, for the present, for first and second-class passengers to Suez are Rs. 450 and Rs. 250 respectively, and they hope ultimately to convey first-class passengers through to Liverpool for £50. With the rates of freight we are not acquainted, but we believe £8 per ton will be the charge for cotton, and £5 for piece goods. We look upon this as the first attempt at effectual competition with the Peninsular and Oriental Company; how effectual it is likely to be, if the new company understand their own interests sufficiently to furnish tolerable accommodation, a comparison of the above rates with those charged by the Peninsular and Oriental Company and the Messageries Impériales will show. Until the railway to Bombay is completed Calcutta will not, probably, derive the full benefit of these arrangements; though, even now they will allow those who like to put up with the inconvenience of travelling by the mail cart to go first-class from Calcutta to Liverpool, via Bombay, for about £80. If the new company realise their hope of being able to carry first-class passengers through to Liverpool for £50, the above sum will further be reduced to £70. Few people, however, will willingly bear the hardships of the overland journey to Bombay, and the number that could possibly be conveyed by that route, under existing arrangements, is very limited. For the next two years, at least, the only easily practicable route from Calcutta to Bombay must continue to be by sea. A company which would run fast steamers from Calcutta to Bombay, and content itself with equally moderate rates for freight and passage, becomes, therefore, a greater desideratum than ever. Such a company would, we believe, at once secure a most lucrative traffic. Much better than this, however, would be a line of steamers from Calcutta to Aden and Suez, en rapport with these new arrangements.

ACTION AGAINST THE P. AND O. COMPANY.

—Captain J. J. Brown, of the Naval Reserve, has brought an action against the Peninsular and Oriental Company for 800 rupees, the value of some lost luggage. The plaintiff's evidence was as follows:—I arrived in Bombay on the 14th of April last, and left in defendants steamer Jeddah, for Calcutta, on the 15th idem. I took all my baggage, viz., five packages. I applied to the purser for a label, pointing out that all my baggage was labelled with English labels. I paid my passage-money 400 rupees, to the purser after I had gone on board. I could not get a ticket on shore, as it was a holiday—Good Friday, I think. When I asked for a label, the purser said, “We have no labels; but there is no fear; there is no necessity to have your baggage labelled; there are few passengers, and they are sure to be put safely on board the Nemesis at Galle. I asked to be allowed to take the packages into the cabin, but was told it was against the regulations. At Galle, when going on shore, I made a similar request to take them ashore with me, but was again denied any such indulgence. I stayed four or five days at Galle, and on my going on board the Nemesis, I inquired if the baggage had arrived. I was answered shortly that some had, and some had not. I found great difficulty in ascertaining whether my baggage was safely on board, and it was not until about five minutes before starting that I found out that one of my packages was missing. I immediately made it known to the captain, who said that nothing could be done until our arrival in Calcutta. I then wrote to the agent of the company, but received no reply. This is the letter I wrote. I see a memo. at foot, but don't know the handwriting. It may be Mr. Wood's, the baggage officer. I mentioned to Captain Patterson that my baggage had not had the destination, Calcutta, marked on them. I was advised by Captain Patterson to put myself in communication with the office in Bombay. I said I could not see what benefit I would derive from this, as I had been nearly two months in getting a reply to a special letter written on the subject. The box contained a full dress and an undress uniform, for a lieutenant in H.M.'s Naval Reserve. All the things were new. They were all contained in one box, with a tin case inside, on which my name was legibly marked. This is the bill of the London firm. The amount charged against me is £50. 13s. 6d. I have been to Harman and Co., and asked what I could get the same sort made for in Calcutta, and have been told not less than Rs. 800. The deposition was confirmed by evidence, and a defence of non-liability was held to be untenable; so the plaintiff got a verdict with full costs.

TORTURE IN THE MOFUSSIL.—The Englishman says:—We return to the case of torture by the Beerbhoom police, to which we recently drew attention. The Deputy Inspector-General has investigated the case on the spot, and we are now in possession of authentic particulars. Certain prisoners sent in by Inspector Maclean, as dacoits, were made over, as usual, to the deputy magistrate for commitment to the Court of Sessions. During the preliminary investigation before this officer, none of the prisoners made any complaint against the police; and the subsequent expose of Maclean is due to a piece of jail gossip. Prisoners while awaiting trial naturally talk over the history and the prospects of their respective cases; and a really efficient district officer learns a good deal of what is going on outside by a careful discharge of his duties as head of the district jail. Mr. J. M. Lewis, the magistrate of the district, heard that the dacoits in question were very full of the wrongs they had suffered at the hands of the police; and, with a promptitude worthy of all praise, he sent them forthwith to the deputy magistrate, before whom their case was being tried. This he did in the absence of any formal complaint, and on his own responsibility. The story told by the prisoners is probably exaggerated, but even if only one-tenth of it is true, it is a sufficiently sad one. They stated that they had been burned with a hot iron, stabbed with forks, pricked with needles, and flogged by Mr. Maclean's own hands. One of them deposed that red pepper had been rubbed into his eyes, and other tortures inflicted on him, of which there is not a particle of evidence, and which we will not relate. There is no doubt whatever that their hands were tied in a cruel manner, and that they received a sound beating. A mark of burning is still visible on the body of one of them, and this may, or may not, have been inflicted by the police. Mr. Lewis having, as chief magistrate, taken up the case judicially, then proceeded, as the head of the police within his district, to call for a report from the superintendent. The crime of the inspector was two-fold. It was an offence against public justice, and Mr. Lewis, as magistrate, accordingly took it up under the Penal Code. It was also an offence against the discipline of the police force, and Mr. Lewis, as head of the district police, made it a subject of departmental inquiry and report. The result has not yet transpired.

THE NEW ACTING CHIEF JUSTICE.—The Englishman says:—Among the exceptions that have been taken to the appointment of Mr. Trevor to the acting Chief Justiceship of Bengal, the greatest stress has, perhaps, been laid on one which is altogether irrelevant. Some of our contemporaries, and several of our correspondents, have objected to this appointment on the ground that only a Barrister Judge can legally be made Chief Justice. If it is concluded from this that the acting Chief Justice also cannot legally be other than a Barrister Judge, we can only say that the conclusion is logically erroneous, and incorrect in fact.

INDIGO PROSPECTS.—We learn that the indigo part of the Rajshye Division is quite quiet, though the feeling against indigo on the part of the native zemindars is still very strong. The planters, however, have lately been much increasing their own private cultivation, and the old system of advances is proportionately diminishing. In many factories, too, machinery and steam power are taking the place of human labour, thus rendering the planters independent of coolies.—Englishman.

JUDICIAL RETIREMENTS.—We hear that the Honorable Justices Trevor, Loch, Steer and Bayley will retire next year. There will then be just a sufficient number for all purposes, especially as of late the translators of the Sudder Court have not been able to keep pace with the judges, so that business with "old stagers" can hardly be said to be strongly on the side of the English extrepreneurs.—Hurkaru.

A NEW INDIAN MEDICAL JOURNAL is about to be published by Messrs. Wyman and Co., of Calcutta, under the editorial superintendence of Dr. D. B. Smith, of the Medical College.

BOMBAY.

THE GOVERNOR'S GREAT DURBAR.

As previously announced, the Durbar of his Excellency the Governor took place on Sept. 7, at five o'clock, on which occasion the weather was clear and pleasant; all the guests invited commenced entering the Durbar tents, which were pitched on the open plain opposite the Council-hall, and at five o'clock his Excellency with his personal staff arrived at the Durbar, when a salute was fired by a battery from Kirkee, which was located in the rear of the Council-hall and the Sappers and Miners' lines. His Excellency was received by the guard of honour, which was furnished by her Majesty's 4th (King's Own) regiment, consisting of one hundred rank and file, under the command of a commissioned officer, as well as one hundred rank and file from her Majesty's 22nd Regiment. His Excellency's bodyguard was present on the occasion. All the native chieftains, namely, Luximonrow Rodray, Punt Preeteenudce, Punt Suchew, Muntree Soomunth, and Rajah Ruttunsing, Malligaumkur, the sons of the Rajah of Acukote, all the staff officers, including the Commander of the Forces, Major-General Sir Van Straubenzee, the members of the Legislative Council, commanding officers of the different regiments, field officers, and almost all the officers off duty were present in their full dress. The Durbar tents were honoured by the elite, beauty, and fashion of Poona. The native commissioned and non-commissioned officers of the various regiments were also present, and the Sirdars of the Deccan, the Parsee gentry, the soucars, and all the Government native officials, as well as mamludars, &c. The arrangements made for their reception were most satisfactory and creditable to all concerned. His Excellency made a short and eloquent speech to the Sirdars, and in which Mr. Mahudowrow Vittul Vinchorkur was especially mentioned. Afterwards, pan sooparee, har, guzra, atter, and goolab were distributed, and at six o'clock his Excellency left the Durbar tent, when the guns of the Artillery announced his Excellency's departure, and at the same time his Excellency's band played the National Anthem.

The following are the most important passages of his Excellency's address to the chiefs and sirdars, delivered in the Marathé language:—

"There are many subjects of importance to you collectively and individually, which I trust we may have opportunities of discussing before you leave Poona. But there are matters of the greatest interest to us all, on which I should be glad to say more than it is possible to say, either in a general address to you in durbar, or in one or two necessarily brief and formal private interviews. Among these topics there is much which I should be glad to say on the subject of education. By education I do not mean mere reading and writing. Without these elementary means of acquiring knowledge there can be no perfect education. But much may be learnt from travel—from seeing other countries and conversing with men of wider experience and more knowledge than can be met with at any one place. I would gladly write more than can be said orally on this subject of education, but I find from the reports of political officers that a very large proportion of the Marathé chiefs are unable to read and write their own language; and there are very few indeed who know the language of the English Government and the English Sovereign sufficiently well to understand what I might say or write to them in my own tongue. . . . You know that it is the earnest desire of her Majesty the Queen, and of the Government of India, to maintain the class of nobles to which you belong with undiminished hereditary property and influence, and to see them act as leaders of the people in the moral and physical advancement which it is the eminent desire of the British nation to encourage in this country. But this is simply impossible if you neglect all opportunities of learning. I would ask you, if one of the Princes, the sons of Queen Victoria, came amongst us, how many of you would be able to converse with his Royal Highness in his own language? How many of you can read the laws of the country in the language in which they are enacted? or the correspondence of our Government regarding yourselves and your own rights? Nay more—how many of you could tell a traveller, even if he spoke your own language, anything of the history or geography, or of the people or politics, of any part of your own country beyond the immediate neighbourhood of your own territory? The Government of England has of late years decreed that an active share in the Government of this country shall be given to the people of this country as far as they are worthy of it. You have good reason to know that this is no mere figure of speech, for we have done our best to promote worthy men among the Native community to the highest seats in our Council, and to the bench of our great courts of justice. We would gladly select for such offices men illustrious for their birth and descent—and influential from their rank and family position. How is it, then, that we have been able to find among the Sirdars of the Deccan so few who possess such a knowledge even of their own people and their own public affairs, as to be fitted for such a trust? A powerful nation now protects each and all of you in the enjoyment of his and your property and rights. It is not possible now for any man with a few more retainers, or with better equipment than your own, or even for any one who wields the whole power of Government, unjustly to deprive the weakest of you of his rightful possessions. But there is an enemy against which even the powerful English Government cannot protect you, and that enemy you will find among yourselves. Everything in this world must either grow or decay; and you and your families can be no exception to this great law of nature. It is in the power of every one of you to improve his own estate, to make his ryots contented and happy, to make himself respected by high and low, by his own countrymen as well as by the English Government, and to take a large share in the administration and improvement of the country—a greater share when measured by its capacity for doing good than any minister of former sovereigns could boast. All this power you may command, by simply availing yourselves of those advantages of education and position which are within the reach of you all. But, by neglecting those advantages, it is also within your power to become in each generation smaller and less important men than your forefathers were; to see your lands and revenues slip from your grasp, or remain yours only in name; to see your power and influence usurped by others; to live unhonoured, and to die unlamented. If this be your lot, do not blame the Government under which you live, or any blind fate; for be assured it is entirely your own fault for neglecting the great opportunities before you."

THE ENNISKILLING DRAGOONS AGAIN.

The Times of India publishes a long article detailing more "rows" among the officers of this regiment, still commanded by Colonel Crawley at Mhow, from which we make some extracts:—

"If it were not for all the rows that have taken place in the regiment I would put you in my Confidential Report, and I ought to do so. . . . I don't order you (to salute your brother officer when off duty), but . . . if you dare (to omit doing so) I will bring you to a court-martial, so you had better get out of it (the regiment?) as soon as you can." These eminently judicious and soldierly observations, we have good reason to believe, were uttered in a certain orderly room in this Presidency about three months ago. They were addressed by a colonel commanding to a lieutenant who had been summoned to answer the grave charge of declining to salute a captain when off duty, and after he had, before the said colonel, given a very sufficient reason for so declining. There is no need to inform our military readers, either at home or in India, which is the station where the orderly room in question is situated, and scarcely less occasion to specify the regiment in which "all the rows have taken place." . . . On July 20th, in the morning, two copies of the Court Journal were placed in the reading-room, but in the afternoon were missing, and Cornet Power directed Mess-sergeant Hand, who had charge of the room, to send round a circular note to all the officers' quarters requesting the journals to be returned. This note was sent amongst the rest to Lieutenant Davies, who signed the paper "No, R. D.," meaning that the papers were not with him. The next morning early one of the native mess boys was taken by Sergeant Hand and placed in watch to see who brought any papers into the room. The boy was locked in the library by Sergeant Hand, and told to watch, through the glass door, the officers who came in. Corporal Lucas was also told to observe, and in his written statement avers that he could see into the reading room from where he stood. Here, then, were two spies waiting for the luckless wight who might return with the Court Journals. And it should be observed that Corporal Lucas, in his written statement, says:—"I suspected that Lieutenant Davies had taken them." But relating to the chief circumstance, there is a discrepancy between the evidence of the boy and the corporal, one which is far more important than that between the two witnesses in a celebrated case reported in the "Apocrypha." We refer to the point where the boy says that he saw Lieut. Davies thrust the two papers under the others on the table, and then ran to call his confederate the corporal, who displayed such supernatural celerity as to witness the same momentary action on the part of Mr. Davies. Corporal Lucas, in his own statement, speaks of Mr. Davies taking out of his breast-pocket and putting the "two newspapers" on the table, and yet afterwards says that "Serg. Hand showed me the papers, the Court Journals, which had been on the breakfast table the previous morning." Serg. Hand does not do things by halves in that sort of way. In his statement he says that "Corporal Lucas came to me, and told me that he had just seen Lieutenant Davies . . . take the missing papers, the Court Journals, from under the breast of his jacket," and that he "slipped the Court Journals in among the other papers." Thus, although Lucas was in a "room behind the library," he could see Mr. Davies put the two papers on the table, that action having already been seen by the clever boy before he called Lucas to witness it; and, though Lucas first saw the papers to be Court Journals when he met Sergeant Hand coming out of the news-room, Sergeant Hand writes him down to say that he saw Court Journals taken by Mr. Davies out of his pocket and Court Journals slipped under the papers on the table. This is a sample of the "statements" which are truly, and as if satirically, described in the official letter of Adj. Luck as "not of the nature of evidence!" No; we think these "statements," if offered as "of the nature of evidence" before a jury of school-boys would have been met with jeers of contempt; and if such "a case" were brought before a certain Bombay judge, in his present mood, would be the occasion for the infliction of a swinging fine, either on the witnesses or the getters up of the case. . . . We wish we were able to publish these statements in full, especially the one in which a lady, "Agnes Helen Davies," has been constrained courageously to come "forward on my honour, concerning an accusation against my husband of having taken from the Mess, and falsely denied having done so, certain papers," &c. Were not the prosecutors' case so utterly weak as to need no serious refutation, the statement of Mrs. Davies would, we think, command a judgment for the cause in which she appears. She says that as her husband was leaving the bungalow to go to the mess room, "I reminded him that there was upon the table an old Times of India which he had taken out of the mess room a day or two before. I gave the paper myself into his hand, and he placed it with one other (an English provincial paper, we believe,) beneath his stable jacket, his usual habit when out of doors." Now here is a simple explanation which exonerates the poor Hindoo lad from wilful misrepresentation, though it leaves the two other witnesses to account as they can for their assertions of Lieut. Davies laying down the Court Journals, which both he and Mrs. Davies state had not been in their bungalow at all. In support of this joint affirmation there is the best corroborative evidence that could well be produced. Mrs. Davies says that she regularly receives the Court Journal from her friend Mrs. Prior, and, consequently, never requires them from the mess-room. This fact, as to the regular use by Lieut. Davies and his wife of Mrs. Prior's Court Journals, was confirmed in the Court of Inquiry by Lieut.-colonel Prior, who was himself President of the Court. We need go no further: here we have four witnesses against three, the four being two officers and their wives, and we elect to accept the testimony of the four."

MISCELLANEOUS.

DEATH OF MR. JUSTICE FORBES.—The Hon. Mr. Justice Kinloch Forbes died at Poona on Thursday night, in the house of the Hon. Mr. Ellis. In him we lose one of the most distinguished civilian judges of the High Court on this side of India. Eminent by his general abilities, he was still more so in certain departments of culture to which a fine taste and sound judgment spontaneously directed themselves. His great knowledge of architecture and architectural remains are a tribute to the one, and the several works on Indian subjects, of which he is the author, speak abundantly for the other. It is a loss to India not easily estimated when men of refined scholarship and high unimpeachable character pass away, for the former acts and reacts in many ways for good upon our Indian policy, and the latter is needed as a counterpoise to some of the effects of the opening of our ports to western immigration. Mr. Justice Forbes was seized about a fortnight ago with some affection of the brain, which his medical attendants have not been able clearly to make out, but it was evident during the greater part of his illness that it would terminate fatally. We have received the intimation of his death so close upon the hour at which we go to press that we reserve a fuller notice of the deceased gentleman's connection with India till our next issue. Mr. Forbes was buried at Poona on Friday evening.—Bombay Gazette, Sept. 8.

BOMBAY ITEMS.—An amended scheme for the amalgamation of a number of the new Banks in Bombay has been decided on.—A new Bill has been introduced into the Legislative Council to regulate and restrict the sale of poisons in the Bombay Presidency, in assimilation of the English Acts.—Sir Bartle Frere is expected in Bombay from Poona to receive the Hon. Mr. Maine, who is expected to arrive from Europe by the in-coming mail steamer.—A new Club has been started at Poona, to be called the Club of Western India.

ENSIGN CONOLLY, 72ND HIGHLANDERS.—A letter has been addressed, by order of Sir William Mansfield, the Commander-in-Chief, to Sir C. T. Van-Straubenzee, K.C.B., commander of the forces in Bombay, desiring him to convey his Excellency's best thanks to Ensign Conolly, 72nd Highlanders, for the intelligence and decision displayed by him under the difficult circumstances in which he was placed, owing to the outbreak of cholera in the ranks of a detachment of British troops proceeding under his command from Asseergur to Poona, in April last.

COURSE OF EVENTS IN AFGHANISTAN.—The Ameer of Cabul is reported to have imprisoned Mahomed Raffee Khan and another Sirdar on account of their being suspected of having been concerned in sowing the late dissensions in the family. It is also stated that Sheik Allee Khan is dead. A Persian letter has been received confirming the report of the occupation of Samarkand by a Russian army, and that a Russian and Persian envoy have had a conference with the Ameer Sher Allee Khan at Candahar, and have induced him to return to Cabul instead of proceeding to Herat.

INSURRECTION IN BHAWULPOOR.—The disturbances at Bhawalpoor resulted in a battle between the insurgents, under Beyram Khan, and the Nawab's forces, commanded by Goolam Mahomed, near Chokee Abra, which lasted from eight in the morning till eight at night; there were about 100 men killed and wounded altogether, all of whom, with the exception of thirteen, belonged to the insurgents. The leaders escaped and put their women to the sword to prevent their falling into the hands of the victors.

RAIN IN BOMBAY.—Bombay this season has had a very abundant monsoon, the rainfall being 73.44 inches; eight inches beyond the average fall, and about twenty-two beyond that of last year. As the rain has been pretty general throughout the country, the crops are in consequence looking well.

No. 814.—In continuation of G.O. No. 734 of 1864, publishing rules in supersession of existings regs. on the subject of exam. in the native languages, H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct that the selection from the prose of the Prem Saugor, laid down in that order as one of the tests for the second standard, shall, until further notice, consist of the first half of the Prem Saugor, that is, to the conclusion of the 54th chap., page 122.

CORPS OF SAPPERS AND MINERS.

No. 816.—With the sanction of the Right Hon. the Sec. of State, the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to lay down the following estab. for the Bengal corps of sappers and miners:—

The officers of the corps are to be officers of the royal engrs., and will consist of one comdnt., who will receive Rs. 700 a month staff salary, with the full pay and allowances of his regtl. rank. This appt. will be considered permanent.

One adjutant.

One interpreter and qmr.

One supt. of instruction.

Supt. of park and field train.

These officers will retain their appointments for four years, being graded on the public works dept. list, and transferable to the public works dept. without loss of grade.

The staff salary of these officers will commence at that of asst. engr., 1st grade, in the public works dept., viz., Rs. 250 a month, and subject to regulation* by the position of their contemporaries employed in the public works dept. in the presidency of Bengal, rising to exec. engr., 3rd grade, on Rs. 400 within the four years, the intermediate step of exec.

* This will be calculated by comparison with the average position held by those officers of the royal engineers who entered the public works department at the same time as the officers serving with the sappers and miners joined the corps.

enr., 4th grade, to take place after a service in India of four years.

The senior of these four officers, if a captain regimentally, will receive also an additional allowance of Rs. 100 a month as second in command.

He will be permitted to retain his appointment beyond the term of four years, until the next senior may be promoted to the rank of captain.

The adjutant and quartermaster will draw respectively an office allowance of Rs. 80 and Rs. 50 monthly, to cover all charges.

All these officers will be required to be mounted, but will not receive any horse allowance in addition to the salaries already sanctioned.

To carry on the duties of the corps, four more officers will be attached to it, with the staff allowance of an assistant field engineer—viz., Rs. 112 a month. After two years' duty this allowance will be increased to Rs. 200. After three years, the officers will become available either to fill any vacancies which may occur in the staff of the corps, or for transfer to the public works department.

These officers will be in addition to any junior officers temporarily serving with the corps, who will receive the allowance of Rs. 60 which has been hitherto granted.

The usual company contingent and command allowance will continue to be paid to officers in charge as heretofore.

The establishment of the corps will be increased by raising the strength of the present ten companies from 80 to 100 privates, each company having one subadar, one jemadar, four havildars, and eight naicks.

In consideration of the necessity for securing a high standard of recruits for this important arm of the service, it has been decided that the pay of all the non-commissioned officers and of the privates who have served in the corps for two years, and who have gone through their course of training as sappers to the satisfaction of the commanding officer, shall be increased by the addition of one rupee a month.

Two native instructors, who will work under the orders of the superintendent of instruction, will be appointed on salaries of Rs. 50 and 30 respectively; and whenever duly-qualified men are obtainable, one non-effective Havildar instructor, on a staff salary of Rs. 5 will be appointed to each company.

H.E. the C. in C. is requested to issue such subsidiary orders, in furtherance of the foregoing, as may be necessary.

The provisions of this order will come into effect, so far as may be feasible, on Oct. 1.

No. 817.—The underment. officers are admitted to the Bengal staff corps, with effect from the dates specified to their respective names, subject to the confirmation of the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India:—

Capt. F. P. Luard, H.M.'s 104th fus., offic. 2nd in command, 1st regt. Central India horse, from July 1, 1864.

Lieut. (now Capt.) A. H. Bramley, late 44th regt. N.I., district supt. of police, 4th grade, Mozuffnugger, from Feb. 18, 1864.

Lieut. A. Bloomfield, H.M.'s 1st foot, offic. asst. comr., Central Provinces, from April 11, 1864.

Lieut. E. E. Gibson, H.M.'s 103rd royal fusiliers, doing duty officer, 1st regt. Central India horse, from Aug. 4, 1864.

No. 818.—Lieut. A. W. C. Read, H.M.'s 51st light inf., wing officer of the 5th Punjab inf., being no longer a candidate for the staff corps, will cease to belong to the latter corps, and will rejoin the 51st regt. without delay.

No. 819.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to make the following appts.:—

Punjab Irregular Force.

6th Infantry.

Asst. surg. F. G. Constant, M.D., att. to the 2nd cav., to the med. charge, in room of Asst. surg. Castello, apptd. to the 5th cav., v. Asst. surg. R. T. Lyons, whose appt., as announced in Punjab Govt. notification No. 100, dated April 22, has not taken place. This cancels that part of G.O. No. 345 of 1865, placing Asst. surg. Lyons at the disposal of the Punjab Govt.

2nd Cavalry.

Asst. surg. H. Cayley, in joint med. charge of Simla, to the med. charge, v. Asst. surg. Constant, M.D.

Addendum.—To G.O. of Feb. 22 last, confirming Delhi garrison order, dated Dec. 15 last, directing Asst. surg. J. Kelly to assume med. charge of No. 1 battery, 25th brig. R.A., proceeding to Saugor, prefix the word "staff" to asst. surg.

Leave of absence:—

Royal Artillery.—Lieut. F. A. Stubbs (17th brig.), from June 1 to Aug. 31, to Calcutta, on m.c.; Lieut. R. H. Grant (G. battery, 11th brig.), from July 15 to Oct. 15, in extension.

DISCIPLINE—MARCHING OF TROOPS.

Head Quarters, Simla, Aug. 1.—The C. in C. regrets to observe that the G.O. by which the attempt made to insure harmony between the troops on the line of march and the people of the country through which they pass have not always been fully appreciated.

2. Thus, it having been laid down that a civil officer is to attend each corps, it would appear in some instances that commdg. officers have thought that their responsibility for the preservation of good order amongst the men had somehow or other been weakened; in short, that the civil officers, whether British or native, were to answer for the peace rather than themselves.

3. It is impossible to commit a greater mistake than what has been just described.

4. In the circumstances of the line of march the commanding officer's responsibility for the discipline of his men, for the protection of the people and the villagers from exaction or outrage, is simple and absolute.

5. The civil officer is appointed for the purpose of adjudicating on the spot on disputes occurring between the soldiery and the people, on the claims of Ghariwans, or others temporarily attached to the troops by civil authority, for discharge from their engagements, and due satisfaction of their wages.

6. Whilst, therefore, obtaining such information as he can from the civil officer, the commanding officer of a regiment or detachment is bound to take due military precaution for the purposes above-mentioned.

7. He should daily see the civil officer, whether British or native, and personally ascertain whether complaints had been made the day previously of outrage on the line of march, or if any claim or dispute remains unadjusted.

8. On the occasion of the discharge of the carriage or portion of it, or of an exchange of carriage, he should require the certificate of the quartermaster that every Ghariwan, or Surwan, or Cooly had been duly paid up in full.

9. This certificate should then at once be communicated to the civil officer, who should be requested to verify its correctness by appeal to the parties paid, and then to append his countersignature as a voucher. Such certificates should be in duplicate, one copy being retained by the regiment and the other being forwarded to the collector of the district concerned.

10. In a detachment which has no quartermaster, the commanding officer should himself perform the duty of having the Ghariwans and others paid in his presence, the certificates being signed by himself and witnessed by an officer or non-commissioned officer. In the case of a small detachment when a civil officer might not be present, the precaution might be taken of causing the Commissariat Gomashta to be present at the payment, and sign the certificate accordingly.

11. It will be understood from the foregoing rules that the civil officer is attached to the force in the capacity of magistrate. He must be protected in the execution of his duty, and any complaint or representation made by him should be considered at once and treated with the greatest respect.

12. In the case of outrage it may be well to have recourse at once to court-martial, to test the truth of the representation when possible on oath. This suggestion applies equally to European and to native troops.

13. Provost sergeants and others, who may be appointed by commanding officers to preserve order on the line of march amongst followers or stragglers, should be instructed to give assistance to the civil officer for the arrest of offenders, and to do the like without appeal from him; failing which they should be liable to trial when neglect or non-compliance can be proved against them.

It is to be distinctly understood that the concession shown in the reduced charge on account of regimental dogs, thus made by the railway authorities, is only applicable to soldiers, and does not include officers' dogs, on which full tariff rates will be charged.

Capt. A. E. Osborn, late 45th N.I., is appd. to act as fort adjt. at Chunar, and directed to join.

Lieut. H. W. Shoubridge, gen. list, inf., attached to the 97th foot, is appd. to do duty with the 5th lancers, and directed to join.

Lieut. A. F. Taylor, gen. list, inf., attached to the 37th, is transf. to the 33rd N.I., at Lucknow, and directed to join.

The following orders are, with the sanction of Govt., confirmed:—

Benares div. order, dated June 22 last, directing Surg. maj. J. Sutherland, 16th N.I., to proceed and officiate as dep. inspec. gen. of hospitals of the Barrackpore circle, in the room of Surg. F. Anderson, m.d., proceeding to Europe on m.c.

ERRATUM.—In G.O.C.C. of March 16, granting leave to Lieut. T. N. Baker, late 31st N.I., for "Lieutenant" read "Captain."

The following Presidency division orders are confirmed:—

Dated June 30.—Directing Hospital apprentice J. Alexander, recently admitted into the service, to do duty at the General Hospital.

Dated 5th ult.—Directing Offic. Assist. Apothecary W. Hart, consequent on the disbandment of the Lahore light horse, to proceed and report himself for duty to the medical officer in charge of the Presy. General Hospital.

ENSIGN B. R. CONOLLY, & C.

No. 5162e.

Adjutant general's Office, Head Quarters,

Simla, Aug. 1.

To Major general Sir C. T. Van Straubenzie, K.C.B. Commanding the Forces, Bombay.

Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated June 26, 1865, No. 1,119, giving cover to a report from Ens. B. R. Conolly, 72nd highlanders, regarding an outbreak of cholera in the ranks of a detachment of British troops proceeding under his command from Asseerghur to Poona in April last.

By desire of the C. in C. in India, I am to request you will convey to Ensign Conolly H.E.'s best thanks for the intelligence and decision displayed by him under the very difficult circumstances connected with his late march.

A regiment may well be proud when one of its constituents distinguishes himself in the manner which now calls forth the C. in C.'s commendations; and H.E. congratulates Colonel Payne and the 72nd highlanders accordingly.

Sir William Mansfield trusts that it will have been in the power of his commanding officer to promote Corporal Thompson, 72nd highlanders, for the excellent manner in which he supported Ens. Conolly, and the admirable example he set to his comrades on the trying occasion referred to.

The good conduct of Private Whitaker, 18th Royal Irish, and of Gunner Lloyed, R.A., should be respectively brought prominently to the notice of their commanding officers.

H.E. must, however, express his regret that there were other soldiers in the detachment under Ensign Conolly whose conduct was discreditable to them as soldiers and comrades, when required by their officer to assist the sick.

(Signed) D. M. STEWART, Col., Deputy Adjt. gen.

REMOVED TRANSFER OF SCINDE.—It is again rumoured that Scinde is to be transferred shortly to the Punjab Government. The Englishman believes this is not the case, but that, eventually, and after Sir Bartle Frere vacates the office of Governor of Bombay, the transfer will, in all probability, be made.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

TUESDAY, October 10, 1865.

A PANIC IN THE CIVIL SERVICE.

THE judges, magistrates, commissioners, and other members of the Civil Service in India, are just now looking at one another as people do in a crowd at a railway station, when they see a notice on the wall to "Beware of Pickpockets—respectably dressed." Every man is seized with a suspicion of his neighbour, and the less suspicious the neighbour looks the more he is suspected. It is not, however, the pockets, but the prejudices of the Service in India which are being threatened—the alarm having been caused by a report that among its members is a son of Mr. Calcraft, of the Old Bailey, under an assumed name! The story was first introduced to society in an Allahabad paper, and has, of course, made an extensive acquaintance throughout the country, both the friends and enemies of the "Competition-wallahs" being equally interested in giving it circulation. On the one side the intrusion is resented as an insult to an honourable body of gentlemen; on the other it is received with unkind satisfaction as a consequence of the open, or what has been uncomplimentarily called, the "devil take the hindmost" system of conferring Indian appointments.

The questions naturally suggested by the report in question are, 1st, is it true? and 2nd, if it be true—what is to follow? In reference to the matter of fact a correspondent of the Englishman, in reply to doubts expressed on the subject, boldly affirms that he can, "from personal knowledge, state that a Mr. Calcraft, son of the hangman of England, did, just two years ago, actually enter the Civil Service of India, having passed his final examination in Dean's-yard in 1863." Moreover, he adds, "in each of the four years preceding 1863, Mr. Calcraft, senior, sent up a son to the competition; and so carefully had the old gentleman, though burdened with many public duties, attended to his children's education, that four sons, each and all, passed, making a grand total of five, now numbered among the future administrators of our Indian Empire." This declaration, being properly authenticated by a respectable name, would, of course, have a right to acceptance; but unfortunately for his authority, the writer subsequently admits that his "personal knowledge" is derived from the gossip of other competing candidates during their examinations. The writer, in fact, does not pretend to be able to point out the men, which is the only way of arriving at proof in the matter; and in the meantime the story is received with something more than the degree of credit attaching to a mere possibility. It is true that candidates for the service are required to give their real names and those of their parents, as well as the calling and status of the latter, before going up for examination,—a false statement of those particulars exposing them not only to forfeiture of their appointments but prosecution for fraud. But, on the other hand, it has been stated that the name of Calcraft is only assumed for professional purposes, and it is generally understood that its owner has regular pursuits by which he might be unobjectionably described. The question of fact is, therefore, embarrassing, and the gentlemen concerned are not philosophic enough to give themselves the benefit of the doubt. With regard to what would follow if the fact were established, there is a lively discussion among the journals. One of these—the Bombay Gazette—boldly plants itself upon the strictly logical view of the case, declares that if capital punishment be justifiable the hangman should be as respected a functionary as the judge, that even though the calling be infamous it is not for us to visit the degradation of the father upon the children, and that there is no reason why Mr. Calcraft, junior, should not be a valuable acquisition to the service. This kind of argument, being merely logical, is, of course, utterly defective. As regards the status of the hangman, we may answer that, in order to be clean, we must get somebody to do dirty work; but, because cleanliness is a virtue, we do not exalt the scavenger as a respected public functionary, and place his calling on a level with that of the scientific gentleman who organises and directs his operations. For the rest of the argument "ladies' reasons" are quite sufficient. We dislike contact with persons having repulsive employments "because we do," and we prefer not to come into close quarters with their sons, because they involve unpleasant ideas. The Bombay Gazette asks, What is the reason for the prejudice? There is no reason required. Prejudice precludes the idea of reason at all, and is more powerful in most cases than any that can be brought against it. The moral sense, in fact, is as delicate as the physical sense; and nobody asks us why we prefer the Jockey Club Bouquet to the scent of a stable. A hangman's sons may make very efficient members of the Indian service, but their presence in its ranks is not likely to be agreeable to the other members. If one kind of parentage can bring a man credit another kind of parentage must bring a man discredit, or at any rate place him at a disadvantage, which nothing but his own conduct and character can overcome. The sentiment of the indignant Yeoman who tells Lady Clara Vere de Vere—

"Your pride is yet no mate for mine, Too proud to care from whence I came,"

has been applauded as an expression of proper independence; but it is simply a good hit at a haughty beauty who takes a cruel advantage of her rank and charms, and the poet can have written it only as a piece of dramatic propriety—not as a laudable maxim in the abstract. In our imperfect state of existence few of us have arrived at this elevation of pride, and until we have we shall continue to regard the sons of hangmen as unpreferable colleagues and companions.

It is much to be feared that this curious question—on whatever foundation it may be based—has been rendered peculiarly vexatious by the anomalous position of the Civil Service in India, the general body of whose members do not—and there is no use in disguising the fact—take the social standing to which they are entitled by their rank. The old complaint against the "competition-wallahs," made from the first, is made now. They do their duty with more or less efficiency—there is at any rate no special complaint on that score—but they are said to want a certain high spirit that belonged to the old class of civil servants, a spirit that sometimes led them astray, but was always worn with grace, and impressed the natives with the idea that they were governed by gentlemen. It is not necessary, nor even desirable, that a young civilian before he is well out of college, or while learning his future duties as assistant magistrate at some mossful station, should maintain a large establishment, and be noted for his lavish entertainments; keep an immense stud, including racers; bet freely and borrow largely, and when out of funds in the hills play at whist for "Arab points;" and not be considered to have graduated in society until he owes a lakh of rupees. But the advocates of the old school still maintain that even this kind of recklessness, though not defensible in itself, indicated, if it did not generate, a dash and daring calculated to bring out the most vigorous qualities of the mind, and was certainly calculated to gain the respect of the governed—a native of the East having little idea of a gentleman except in connection with profusion and display. All this is now a thing of the past. The wallahs—it must not be said to their discredit, for no man is to blame for exercising common prudence in his own affairs—go out to one of the presidency towns, where, having no family traditions connected with the place, they are simply strangers, they do not “call” and make themselves known, their acquaintance being confined to the other guests at the hotel, or at the boarding-house to which they commonly remove. When they go forth it is frequently in a mere hack conveyance, perhaps even a palankeen, and some are even so forgetful of their dignity as to be seen walking—not only for a “constitutional,” but as an actual mode of progression to office. All this is dreadfully against them; and as society gives them an occasional hint of their failings, they are naturally shy of society; and so it is that the breach gets wider instead of closing up, as it should have done by this time. There are, of course, many men in the service to whom these remarks do not apply; but they will usually tell you that they had quite interest enough to have entered it under the patronage system had that system prevailed in their time. The new class, they will add, are not, as a general rule, such as answer the requirements of the service; and we hear this assertion repeated so often that it is difficult to conceive it quite untrue. The fact that a son or sons of the common hangman may be included in the list of the service is not calculated to raise its reputation, and England cannot afford to trust the administration of her Indian Empire to men who do not command both social influence and political respect.

INNOCENT ENJOYMENTS REPPRESSED. — We learn from the Bhootan frontier that orders have been issued by his Excellency the Commander-in-chief to the military officers attached to the Bhootan Field Force, that all sharp writing, repartee, and sneering must be summarily checked, it being impressed on officers that their official letters are always liable to publication. His Excellency will visit any officer with his gravest displeasure who may not pay the most implicit attention to this order.

EXPANDING SADDLE.GIBSON AND COMPANY

Respectfully invite the attention of MILITARY MEN, EQUESTRIANS, and OWNERS OF HORSES, to their Newly-Invented EXPANDING SADDLE, which admits of ready adjustment to the size of any horse, creating a secure and easy seat without the slightest inconvenience to either horse or rider. The principle of EXPANSION and CONTRACTION comprises a simple arrangement of mechanism within the saddle so perfect, that by merely turning a screw the pad is proportioned to the size and form of the animal, on which it firmly rests with a uniform pressure, and is securely retained in its position by means of an ordinary girth.

This invention has obtained the approval and distinguished patronage of HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, and from the very favourable opinions expressed by competent judges, and all who have had an opportunity of testing its merits, there is no doubt it will come into general use; indeed, its success is already established.

THE NEW THEORY IN RIFLES.—Lieutenant James Forsyth, in his excellent work, "The Sporting Rifle, &c.," first promulgated the startling theory that Rifles could be so constructed as to lessen the elevation by increasing the charge of powder. This theory, which the Advertiser has proven to be correct, alters the whole position of Rifles in favour of the sportsman. Formerly, with a high trajectory, the bullet which would have hit a tiger in a vital part at 100 yards, would pass over his back at 25 or 30 yards. By the new system, as elaborated and perfected in DOUGLASS' LOCKFAST BREECHLOADERS, there is a point-blank range to 150 yards, combined with a velocity and smashing power hitherto unknown.—(See TIMES, 11th October, 1864.) No other Rifle possesses the same advantages.

SARSAPARILLA.
WILKINSON'S (late BRIDGES)
ESSENCE OF FLUID EXTRACT OF RED JAMAICA SALSAPARILLA is appreciated for its Purity, and marked superiority, daily prescribed by the Faculty for Impurities of the Blood, Affections of the Liver, Constitutional Debility, Attenuation of Body, as an Alterative Medicine at the Changes of the Seasons, and for freeing the system from the effects of Mercury.

In India and the Colonies it is extensively used to prevent taking complaints incidental to Tropical Climates, and as a renovator of the system after Sickness invaluable.

"A superior preparation, that may always be relied on."—Sir Astley Cooper.

"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.

"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medical Review.

"Lastly, in consequence of much debility, &c., subsequent to Cholera, I have freely used 'Bridge's Sarsaparilla' myself, with complete benefit and success."—J. Portt, F.R.C.S.

Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints. One pint is equal to eight pints of the ordinary preparations.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against cheap preparations of Sarsaparilla, which, instead of being what they profess, are nothing but a decoction of common herbs, as evidenced with molasses, and flavoured with American Water Green. The genuine has "Thos. Wilkinson (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London," engraved on each bottle.

AGREEABLE SEIDLITZ POWDER in one bottle, protected by a case with measure and spoon included. This preparation is highly recommended, not only as a Mild Aperient, but totally Fever, Thirst, &c.

AROMATIC TINCTURE of QUINIDINE for the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria. No person exposed to the influence of or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for if taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria. Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by Thos. Wilkinson (late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

MRS. JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR TEETH.—This infallible remedy has preserved hundreds of children when thought past recovery from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as effluvia, tending to soothe the teeth with ease, and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery where there are young children; for, if a child waken in the night with pains in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and copying parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bills, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS.
Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price, 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d. JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

CHILDREN'S WORM TABLETS

(KEATING'S).—The recently-discovered unfailing remedy for worm disorders in children and adults has now been concentrated in the form of a purely Vegetable Sweetmeat. The Tablet is eagerly taken by children, and one to three given twice or thrice a-week, will effect a safe and certain cure. Prepared and sold in Tins, 1s. 1d. and 2s. 9d. each, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, &c., 79, St. Paul's Church-yard, London, E.C., and Retail by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Vendors in the World.

Observe the words "KEATING'S WORM TABLETS" are engraved on the Government Stamp of each Tin, without which none are genuine.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—NERVOUS DEBILITY.—Persons who feel weak, low, and nervous, may rest assured some serious ailment is lowering in the distance, against which immediate action should be taken. Holloway's Pills present the ready means of exerting energetic action on the liver, liberating the accumulated bile, and lifting at once a load from the spirits and expelling a poison from the body. This simple and rational method of remedying the first tendency to disease gives present ease and insures future safety. The pallid and all those who are losing flesh should try these Pills, which are especially useful when the digestion and other functions are imperfectly performed and demand immediate correction, or in after years neither mind nor body will be well developed.

ANILINE DYES.—"I shall commence my observations on dyeing, by referring especially to the remarkable and beautiful colours derived from coal tar, the introduction of which into this art may be said to constitute the chief distinction, as far as dyeing is concerned, between the present and the former Exhibition, creating in fact, a new era in the tinctorial art. Coal tar colours deserve attention for their power, as well as for the facility with which they may be applied, for one grain will deeply tint half a gallon of water, and little or no skill is required for their application."—Vide Report by Grace Calvert, Esq., F.R.S., Ph.D., Honorary Professor of Chemistry.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE have received our usual files of papers by the Calcutta mail, with dates from Calcutta to the 8th of September, and Bombay to the 12th of that month—the Bombay papers having reached us by this route for the first time. Also despatches from Madras to the 5th, and Ceylon to the 18th ult.

In Calcutta, the Bhootan question afforded at least one source of satisfaction—that of certainty. The prospects of peace had dissolved into thin air, and the departure of the invading force had become a substantial certainty. Only a few days before the mail left, it seems, the Bhootas had become so impressed with a sense of the responsibility of defying the British power, that even Tounsoo Penlow pretended to have been won over by the peace party. By means of this adherence, real or feigned, he was enabled to take up his old residence with the Deb Rajah at Tassissudon, and thus to bring to bear all his old influence over that chief. The result appears in a declaration—manifestly absurd, and probably invented by Tounsoo Penlow in order to win over the Deb Rajah—that the Chinese are preparing to march a large force to support the Bhootas. On the strength of this anticipated aid the Deb Rajah has, at the eleventh hour, not only rejected our offers, but demanded the evacuation of the Dooars and adherence to the treaty signed by Mr. Eden. He declares, with a sudden accession of dignity which looks rather ridiculous after his former very mild tone, that if we cannot comply with his demands, which are only fair and just, we must prepare for war, which is just what we are doing, and with every prospect of effect. As soon as the rains are over the troops will be concentrated, the right column under Colonel Richardson, and the left under Brigadier Tytler. "General Tytler," says the Hurkaru, "was Havelock's right hand, and was spoken of in the highest terms by the hero of Cawnpore. He is a man of extraordinary energy, guided and directed by a cool, thoughtful head, and is decidedly one of the most promising of our future commanders. He impresses all about him with his earnestness and love of work, and is singularly popular with the force. But besides having seen more actual fighting than any officer in the service, he is, now that Havelock is gone, the best read man on military subjects in the army." Under ordinary circumstances, it is added—"ordinary circumstances," we presume, meaning something in the veni, vidi, vinci way—the column will spend their Christmas at Poonakha.

The trial of Assistant Pilot Vardy, for the loss of the Eagle Speed, has resulted in the dismissal of that officer from the service. But it appears that the marine authorities are also to blame for neglecting precautions such as are necessary in all pilot waters at the head of the Bay of Bengal. The matter has been taken up by Government, and an inquiry into the conduct of the officers and crew of the ill-fated ship is also proceeding. Some further details will be found elsewhere.

The Hurkaru notices that the rent question has reached the pamphlet stage, and that the Zemindars are beginning to see the real drift of affairs between the ryots and those who either own or cultivate the land.

The Calcutta press—and indeed the Calcutta people—are very irate at the Governor-General for his discouragement of private enterprise in irrigation and other public works. It is openly declared that his object is to prevent the financial classes connected with India from increasing their Parliamentary influence, and so interfering with his "civilianising" views of government. The article in the Westminster Review, which impugns so forcibly the accepted version of Sir John Lawrence's conduct at the crisis in 1857, is also being taken up by the journals, who are rapidly coming to the conclusion that their former idol bears a strong family likeness to an impostor.

Money continued abundant in Calcutta. The result of the opium sale had been again highly satisfactory.

There is little or no news from Madras, and not much more from Bombay. The Governor-General was at Simla, where some very promising festivities had been stopped by a telegram bringing news of the illness of his brother, Colonel Alexander Lawrence, now at home. The movements of Sir John are not quite certain. There were still reports of an intended progress through the Upper Provinces, but it was considered most likely that he would proceed to Calcutta, in order to be near at hand during the operations in Bhootan.

The next arrival from India will be the Bombay mail, which arrived at Suez on Thursday, and may be expected in London on Sunday next.

HOWARD V. MULL.—In this case the parties consented, in consequence of its importance, to a motion being made to have it tried before two judges instead of one, and yesterday Mr. Bailey, with whom was Mr. Marriott, for the Times of India, moved the Chief Justice to sanction the arrangement of parties. Mr. Acting Advocate General White, with whom was Mr. Hayllar, consented on behalf of Mr. Howard. The Chief Justice, however, refused to grant the motion. The case, we believe, will appear in Mr. Justice Couch's list to-day or to-morrow.—Bombay Gazette, Oct. 12.

THE PUBLIC WORKS CONGRESS will meet at Poona at the end of the current month. The Revenue Commissioners, Collectors, Superintending Engineers, and other officers have already received intimation to that effect from his Excellency the Governor.

BHOOTAN.

The following is from a letter from the Bhootan frontier, under date the 24th ultimo:—

"The messengers sent to Tassissudon, I am told, went from Buxa to Temshoo, near Gygo-goo, and stopped there for a day, on account of the rain. From Temshoo they went to Sabu, and had heavy rain on the road; from Sabu they went to Maricham, and from Maricham to Bandeegong; from Bandeegong to the bank of the Pughlah river, where they were obliged to stop for five days, in consequence of the bridge being carried off by furious torrents. They are like mad elephants coming from a distance, carrying with them large masses of stones, which is very dangerous for travellers. After five days, when the waves subsided, the bridge was repaired, and they went across to Chukka, when they halted for the night. From Chukka they went to Chopchu, which is a great height, and thence proceeded to Pajab by a good level road fit for the passage of all sorts of beasts of burden. From Pajab they went to Lamloo, and from Lamloo to Wallake. From this latter place Tassissudon is only one day's journey; but they were obliged to stop at Jhasee for want of coolies, and on the next day, that is, on the seventeenth day after leaving Buxa, they reached Tassissudon, which is only nine easy marches from Buxa in the dry season.

"The day the messengers reached Tassissudon they did not deliver the letter sent by the political agent, and, on the next morning, they went to the durbar, and in company with the moonshee, or the interpreter, presented it to the Deb Rajah, who ordered one Debe Jumpey to open it. The Debe Jumpey having opened the letter, took out the handkerchief, which he handed over to the Deb Rajah. The letter was then delivered to the moonshee, who read it over to the Bengalee interpreter, and the latter then made a verbal translation in Bhoota for the Debe Jumpey, who explained it to the Deb Rajah, when the British messengers were dismissed. The messengers stopped at Tassissudon for five days, after which they were summoned to the Deb Rajah's durbar, and his reply to the agent to the Governor-general's letter was handed over to the messengers by a servant, in the presence of Thunpoo Jumpey, Deb Jumpey, Wandepore Jumpey, Poonah Jumpey, Lama Jumpey, Kallen, and Donah. They (the messengers) were then ordered to go down.

"During the messengers' stay at Tassissudon, one day the Deb Rajah sent for the messengers, and questioned them as to why they came to Tassissudon at such a bad season, which, the Deb Rajah thinks, is to see the state of the roads. The Deb Rajah further asked what was the object of the messengers coming in such a large number—one man was sufficient to bring a letter. The object of the present messengers coming to Tassissudon, the Deb Rajah concludes, is nothing but to see the roads, and what the Bhootas are doing. The messengers replied that they were come with no bad intention, but that the Agent to the Governor-General sent them with the aforesaid letter. The messengers also said that they were his subjects. The messengers then explained to the Deb Rajah the four conditions of peace, and, with reference to the annual payment of Rs. 25,000, the Deb Rajah said that it would hardly be sufficient for his necessary expenses. From this small sum what should he give to his amlahs, what should he pay to the Emperor of China, and what should he eat himself? The British Government wishes to give him Rs. 1,000 in place of Rs. 10,000, and Rs. 5 in the place of Rs. 100. This would not do. Respecting the Doors, the Deb Rajah said he could not give them up. If the burra sahib would kindly make them over to him, the Bhootas would consider it an act of great kindness. If he would not give them up the Bhootas were helpless, they could not fight with them. With reference to the release of prisoners, he said it was very difficult to trace them out. It was very unfair that he should call upon the people to release the slaves, whom they have bought at enormous prices; however, had this request been made on friendly terms it would have been possible to effect the release; but, without making proper investigations, the English have made war; how, therefore, can the Bhootas release them now? If the British Government will release his dooars he will release their captives.

"With reference to Mr. Eden's documents, and the insults offered him, he said that when Mr. Eden came to Poonahaka last year he was very well received by his amlah, and was supplied with all sorts of food procurable in Bhootan; but he, on his return, made false reports. The treaty was signed by his full will and consent, and the Deb Rajah is at a loss to know why the English disapprove of its conditions now."—Englishman, Sept. 7.

THE "EAGLE SPEED."—PILOT VARDY FOUND GUILTY.

It required only the weak defence of Pilot Vardy to justify the indignation felt by the public at the coolie shipwreck. He has been sentenced to dismissal from the service, on the unanimous verdict of a jury of two merchants, a captain, and a pilot, for "unskilfulness, ignorance, negligence, or inattention" when in charge of the Eagle Speed, and for "unnecessarily abandoning to their fate" the emigrants after the vessel became a wreck. The professional evidence was dead against him, and the professional jurors, including one of the ablest members of his own service, had no doubt as to the justice of the verdict. He is entitled to the benefit of the plea that he was kept in ignorance of the fact that it was his duty to muster the crew of a coolie ship before sailing. To this the protector of emigrants and the emigration agent should certainly have looked. But the court have decided, and justly, that he left Halliday Island with a crew of whom only six or seven were fit for work, in bad weather, and towed by a steamer unfit for the duty; that to the lesser risk of anchoring, when the rope broke, he preferred the greater of drifting on to the sands; that up to the time she struck he thought she was a mile off the sands, and had not a leadsman in the chains; that even with water in her hold, and pieces of her false keel floating about, he did not act as if she had sustained serious damage; that after five o'clock in the morning the pilot, who should have been the last to leave the ship, did not return to it; that in his absence there was not a man on the wreck who knew the language or the locality, and could encourage the men; that even when on board the steamer, and when his boat was smashed, he made no attempt to launch the steamer's boats, or to save the sinking coolies; and that he did not direct the steamer to go to the light ship, which at one time she was close to, and ask her to save the abandoned emigrants. These are facts, proved after full inquiry, which no plea of overwork, or excessive responsibility, can meet. Had the accused been the driver of a locomotive or in charge of a train, and been guilty of similar conduct, the criminal law would have done justice.

Pilot Vardy, though the most responsible, is not the only or perhaps the greatest culprit. Nothing, we fear, but the action of his employers can affect the captain of the steamer. The jury have, therefore, done well, to express their own and public opinion as to his conduct. It is to be regretted that the only penalty of the Merchant Seamen's Act, under which a court is about to be held on the captain and officers of the Eagle Speed, is, as in the pilot's case, the loss of certificates. We trust the Bengal Government will act on the jury's remarks as to the necessity for an inner light at the mouth of the Mutlah. On the 4th July, after the loss of the P. C. Kinch there, Messrs. Borradaile, Schiller, and Co. urged the Bengal authorities to place a much larger buoy on the north end of the Roy Mutlah sand, and a light on Halliday Island to be visible at a distance of twenty-four miles, or a floating light on the north end of the sand where the Eagle Speed bumped. They recommended the temporary employment of a schooner then anchored at Port Canning for this purpose. The answer was—"the fair way is so clearly marked with buoys that there is no necessity, at least at present, for a light vessel as you propose, on the north-east end of Roy Mutlah." And so, a month after, for want of the light, the chance of saving 265 human beings was thrown away. The necessity, we presume, will now be admitted.—Friend of India.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA AND THE EAST INDIA IRRIGATION COMPANY.

We are about to unfold a history which, whether regard be had to the unblushing duplicity of purpose, the cold contempt of the well-being of the people, or the miserable imbecility it discloses, must ever hold a prominent place among the many great scandals of the administration of Sir John Lawrence. If a complication of accidents helped to conceal the actual part taken by the Viceroy in the still unintelligible proceedings connected with the Soonderbuns Reclamation Scheme, he appears, in this history at least, in his true colours, not only doing his utmost to blight all private enterprise, and stay, in its development, the nascent regeneration of the country, but openly avowing the motives by which he is actuated. There is one thing which the present Government of India wise in its own interests, dreads more than any other, and which, we might have felt assured, as we now positively know, it is prepared, at all hazards, to prevent to the utmost of its power. It dreads, above all things, the introduction into Parliament of an influence with interests antagonistic to its own peculiar policy. The investment, to a large extent, of English capital in India would introduce such an influence into Parliament. The Government of India is, therefore, determined to leave no stone unturned to prevent such investment, either directly, by placing obstacles in its way, or indirectly by pursuing a policy which must render it unprofitable and unsafe. We have no hesitation in saying that Sir John Lawrence never expressed his views more truly, and more candidly, or, perhaps, we may say more shamelessly, than when, at an interview with the agent of a great public company, to whom the Government of India had pledged its support, he stated that, independently of his objection that their scheme would involve bargaining with, and consequent oppression of, the people, he for other reasons viewed the creation of such a company as a positive evil, because it would prove a thorn in the side of the Government; for the shareholders in England, numbering among them Members of both Houses of Parliament, with merchants and manufacturers, of wealth and influence, would not be long in feeling their power, and would be but too ready to use it. These are memorable words, as full of truth, we venture to say, as their utterance was full of folly. They form the key to the whole policy of the present Viceroy, and to that of the Minister who has sent him here to carry it out; and the impartial historian of this administration will hand down these words to posterity, side by side with those Machiavellian pretences about oppression of the native, as evidence of its true motives and the utter worthlessness of its policy. That Sir John Lawrence should hold such views is, as we have shown, most natural; and that, holding them, he should be determined to crush all private enterprise that would tend to create a powerful class with antagonistic interests, is inevitable. The latter part of the administration of Lord Canning, and that of Lord Elgin, had led people to look upon such views as these as relics of the bygone days of the great company. Although it was known that among the old civilians they still survived it was scarcely anticipated that they would be again openly avowed, much less that they would entirely direct the policy of the empire. Unexpected and lamentable, however, as this denouement must be to many, still stranger and more lamentable to us is the profound apathy—with the name of patience we will not dignify it—which has taken possession of the European public in this country at a period which we cannot but regard as a very critical one—one in which we should have expected to see a great struggle, and one in which we believe we shall yet see a great and, perhaps, a final struggle. In Bengal, it may be, we are even now witnessing the commencement of that struggle, though the public, notwithstanding the unprecedented advantage of having the local government in the van, are not bearing their share of the conflict.

The history we are about to unfold, then, is that of the negotiations with the Government of India of the East India Irrigation Company, for works of irrigation and navigation from the River Soane—negotiations entered into by the company at the express invitation of a former Government, and now, we fear, likely soon to be brought to an unfavourable termination, through the perversity and treachery of the present one. Of the importance of this scheme, no one who is acquainted with the scantily-watered districts of South Behar can entertain a doubt. Its accomplishment is, in fact, tantamount to doubling the wealth of the population of the districts to which it is extended. When it is stated that the East India Irrigation Company were prepared to carry out the project so as to extend its benefits to the greatest possible area, upon terms most favourable to both ryots and Government, and under every reasonable restriction which could ensure protection to the people against the bargaining and oppression so much dreaded by Sir John Lawrence, the public will be enabled to form some idea of the loss which the inveterate folly and obstinacy of the Viceroy are about to inflict upon the country. We shall only have time this morning to relate the circumstance which immediately led the company to move in the matter. Their subsequent treatment we reserve as the subject of another article. The Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, then, in January, 1861, recorded a minute, in which, after pointing out the necessity and remunerative nature of irrigation works in Behar, he suggested their consideration to the East India Irrigation Company in the following terms:—"I venture to recommend this enterprising company, in whose success every person connected with India must feel deep interest, to consider Colonel Dickens' scheme of irrigation from the Soane, etc." In consequence of this recommendation, the secretary of the company wrote to the Under-Secretary of State for India in May, 1862, informing him that, after a partial inquiry into the merits of Colonel Dickens' scheme, the directors believed that "an extended plan of works of the same nature would be of great public service, and prove a profitable investment."—Englishman.

THE GANGES CANAL.

The animalversions lately made in England by Sir Arthur Cotton, on the manner in which the Ganges Canal has been constructed, appear to have alarmed the Secretary of State for India, for we find that the suggestions and the remarks in question were forwarded to the Viceroy for careful consideration. They were transferred to that very able and scientific officer, Captain Crofton, together with another proposition which had been made for the purpose of removing the acknowledged defects of the Ganges Canal. The plan proposed was to construct a subsidiary channel instead of remodelling the existing canal. This proposition has been rejected by that officer after much inquiry and reflection. His reasons for so doing are first that, whereas the cost of the works for remodelling the present line would be about 40 lacs, and if to this be added the sums which the Government will have to disburse in the shape of compensation to cultivators who have sunk money in water courses, plus the cost of the two schemes, it will stand at 55 and 85 lacs, so that there will be a saving of 30 lacs of rupees by the adoption of the scheme which aims at the remodelling of the present line. When this has been accomplished, the canal will be what it promised to be, but is not now, an efficient navigable canal, in which the velocity of the water will be so regulated as not to exceed three feet per second, which is but little more than two miles an hour. Short branch canals are to be opened to neighbouring towns for the convenience of the canal traffic, a new feature in the case which we cannot sufficiently admire. It will be worked out when an active traffic has actually come into existence, which at present can hardly be said to be the case. Other improvements are to be effected, which we need not detail here, as they are of a purely scientific character, and not likely, therefore, to interest the large majority of our readers. All these are likely to involve a very large outlay, but his Excellency the Governor-General is of opinion that the credit of the original projector of the canal, Sir Proby Cautley, is not diminished by the necessity which has arisen for making good the defects which experience has brought to light. "The Government may reasonably regret that any error should have been committed, and that the absolute additional expense to be incurred in the case is so large. But while reckoning the cost of the oversight which it is now necessary to remedy, the Governor-General in Council desires to record his high sense of the value of Sir Proby Cautley's accomplished work, which, even in its present state, is one of the greatest and most beneficial gifts that the people of India have yet received from their British rulers." Sir Arthur Cotton's views are shown by Captain Crofton to have been in many instances hastily formed, and that their adoption would not only necessitate an enormous expenditure of money, but would withdraw eighty miles of the present canal from irrigation. Captain Crofton's memorandum, with the Government resolutions thereon, was sent home, and has satisfied Sir Charles Wood that the propositions now submitted for the remodelling of the present line of the canal are based on substantial grounds, whilst those of the great antagonists of Sir Proby were mere assumptions. Sanction has, therefore, been accorded to the proposed expenditure, and a well deserved compliment has been paid to the engineering skill and ability of the author of the memorandum.—Hurkaru.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FRAUDULENT SPECULATION.—The Delhi Gazette, alluding to the case of embezzlement by a bank manager in Calcutta, says:—"We think we have lately heard of a bolder adventurer than Mr. Frazer. The establishment of a bank not a hundred miles from this station, on nil, no prestige, no money, is one of the anomalies of the age, and, if we mistake not, the effort has proved a notable failure. We confess to a great antipathy to exchanging shoes with the infatuated individual of whom we have heard. We may have occasion to refer to this matter again."

CAPTAIN REMINGTON IN THE "HUE-AND-CRY."—A most extraordinary document has reached us, and only that it bears the signature of the Deputy-inspector-general of the Oudh Police, we should have hesitated to believe in its genuineness. It is nothing more nor less than the descriptive roll of Captain Remington, of the late 12th N.I., late of the Oudh Police, and doing general duty at Lucknow, who, it is stated, deserted from Lucknow about three months ago, and whom it is requested every endeavour should now be made to apprehend. The following is the description given of him:—Height, five feet six inches; age, twenty-eight or thirty years; complexion, sallow; colour of eyes, light blue, nearly grey; colour of hair, light brown. General appearance.—Captain Remington stands about five feet six inches high, and has a slight stoop about the shoulders; an aquiline nose, teeth slightly blackened by the use of missy (antimony); wears his hair very long, flowing over the back and shoulders in the native style; has no hair on his face. Captain Remington, it appears, belonged to the police in Burmah, but having got into hot water with the authorities there, he was transferred in the same capacity, that of assistant-district-superintendent, to the Oudh Police about sixteen or eighteen months ago, and posted to Lucknow. He was not long in Oudh, however, before he obtained a year's furlough, and leaving Lucknow, he was for several months afterwards heard of as residing in the bazzars at Benares. He would now appear to have lost his Oude appointment, but to have been in Lucknow so lately as about three months ago. The present inquiry after him is made by order of the Commander-in-Chief, to whom, we understand, some very serious charges have been preferred against him. A friend, who saw Captain Remington in Lucknow during the exhibition week, says that a more perfect picture of European degeneration, or if an Englishman changed into an Asiatic debauche, than that which this unfortunate officer presented, as in a costume between the uniform and that of a Nepaulese general he stood chatting to the natives, to the disgrace of his countrymen, it would not be possible to imagine.—Mofussilite.

MOFUSSIL JOURNALISM.—The Delhi Gazette warns its readers in every number that the Editor is not in any way responsible for what appears in the correspondence, and seems to consider that the announcement is sufficient to justify the insertion of any communication, however offensive. Here is a specimen from one of the latest issues. It evidently alludes to somebody well known in the station:—"A PORTRAIT.—To the Editor of the Delhi Gazette. Sir,—The following portraiture is so true to life, that there is no mistaking the character drawn. THE FOP.—The fop is a complete specimen of an outside philosopher. He is one-third collar, one-sixth patent leather, one-fourth walking-stick, and the rest kid gloves and hair. As to his remote ancestry there is some doubt; but it is now pretty well settled that he is the son of a tailor's goose, ecstatic at the smell of new clothes. He is somewhat nervous, and to dream of tailors' bills gives him the nightmare. By his hair one would judge he had been dipped like Achilles; but it is evident that the goddess must have held him by the head instead of the heels. Nevertheless, such men are useful; if there were no tadpoles there would be no frogs. They are not so entirely to blame for being devoted to externals. Paste diamonds must have a splendid setting to make them sell, only it seems to me a waste of materials to put ten rupees worth of felt on four annas worth of brains."

DYING HINDOOS AND THE GANGES.—The enquiry into the Hindoo practice of carrying the dying to the river side continues. We do not see how Commissioners can answer the questions referred to in the following, which we take from the Englishman:—"We hear that the Commissioners of several districts of the Bengal Presidency have been called on by Government to enquire whether, in their division, the practice of taking the sick Hindoos to the river side prevails, and to what extent; whether there is reason to believe that it is used as a means of getting rid of persons who are obnoxious or troublesome to their relations; whether the dread of exclusion from caste, and belief in the efficacy of a river side death, act as inducements to the destruction of life in the case of those who are taken to the river side to die; and whether the prohibition of the practice would be distasteful to the intelligent portion of the Hindoo population."

THE MOFUSSILITE.—The Meerut correspondent of a Bombay paper says:—"I must not forget to mention that, whereas in Poona they have two or three bad or indifferent journals, in Meerut they have one good one. The Mofussilite is both owned and edited by Mrs. Lang. She is the only lady-editor we have had since the good old days when Mrs. Greenway edited the Meerut Observer. I believe Mrs. Lang is assisted in her editorial labours by a sudden judge at Agra, and a literary gentleman at Cawnpore, and the paper is certainly the best written in these provinces." One part of this statement is evidently inaccurate, as Mrs. Lang happens to be in Italy, and has lived there for some years.

EXPENSE OF THE ARMY IN INDIA.—The following statement of the total annual cost of the several branches of the European and native armies of the three presidencies will be found interesting. It is taken from an official return containing all the details and the deductions for officers on leave; but the table below gives the net cost of each branch to the State. The cost of each regiment and each battery of artillery is considerably less in the Bengal presidency than in the others, with the exception of the infantry of the European army; but in this case the difference is very trifling. The difference in the cost of each regiment in each presidency is owing to the difference of the cost of provisions, forage, native establishment, &c.:—

A MUSEUM FOR AGRA.—The Delhi Gazette says:—"We are gratified in being able to announce that the efforts of those interested in the Agra Museum have been so far successful as to ensure its formation. When once established the utility of the institution will be so obvious that the public will hardly permit it to die from inanition. The Municipal Commissioners, at a full meeting held on the 22nd ultimo, sanctioned a grant of Rs. 10,000 from the municipal funds, half to be paid immediately and the remaining moiety on the 1st of May next. In addition to the grant they have sanctioned an allowance of Rs. 200 per mensem towards the funds necessary for the support of the institution, until such time as the income from other sources shall yield Rs. 300 a month. The public will be all the more inclined to applaud the spirit in which the Agra Commissioners have met the call made upon them when they learn that the Government of the N.W.P., following the example of that of the Punjab, has declined to aid in the scheme by a grant of money from the public funds. Irrespective of the standing plea "the state of the finances," we presume the Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor is influenced in his decision by the principle that in such cases the public should be above asking the aid of the State. The building, as we mentioned on a former occasion when the scheme was originally mooted, will cost Rs. 5,000; an equal sum will be necessary for furniture, for repairs, alterations and additions, and other incidental expenses. The grant by the Municipal Commissioners has secured all that. The monthly expenses are calculated at Rs. 250. That sum may suffice for a beginning, but it will soon be found inadequate. The Commissioners give Rs. 200, as we have said; the remainder must come from the public. Seven thousand rupees in donations have already been promised. Mr. Riddell gives Rs. 3,000; Lalla Joteepershaud Rs. 2,000; and the Local Agricultural Association Rs. 2,000. More we have no doubt will be forthcoming so soon as an appeal to the public is made for the purpose.

THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM COMPANY appear to be at loggerheads with everybody. Calcutta has grumbled, and the other presidencies have taken up the cry, Australia has determined to have nothing more to do with it, and now we find that its connection with the Mauritius has been severed. The Government of that colony had allowed it £12,000 per annum for the carrying of the mails between Suez and Mauritius, but this sum, it appears, was not enough, and the company, accordingly, taking advantage of the monopoly they enjoy, has given notice that they will discontinue their contract with the colony from 19th June of next year. The Chamber of Commerce accordingly called a meeting, at which it was decided to offer the contract to the Messageries Imperiales Company. In the event of its being accepted, it has been proposed to relieve the steamers during the period of their contract, from quay dues and port charges, except light dues and pilotage. But in case no satisfactory arrangements are concluded with this company, tenders are to be called for the conveyance of the Mauritius mails to and from Aden. There are hopes, however, that the company will undertake the duty, and if these hopes be realised, then, considering the numerous advantages of proximity with India and shorter and regular intercourse with Australia, tenders will be called for, for the establishment of a line to Galle, and Cape Colony will be invited to contribute to that line, as it will secure the transport of their mails from India, China and Australia.—Hurkaru.

LIEUT.-COL. CAMPBELL.—By a notification, dated 28th August, the Viceroy, under the authority of the Secretary of State, announces that Lieut.-Col. R. Campbell, of the Bengal Staff Corps, is removed from the service from the date of the publication of the order at the station at which he may be residing. His removal from the service, however, will not affect his pension as Major, to which he is entitled under the regulations. It would have been far more gracious, under the circumstances, to have allowed Col. Campbell to retire on his Major's pension, without making a parade, and confusing punishment and consideration.

COLONEL D. REID, of the Bengal Artillery, has sent in his papers to retire from the service. Colonel Reid's retirement will, we are glad to know, give our much esteemed chief engineer, Colonel William Maxwell, promotion to his full colonelcy.

NOT QUITE FORGIVEN.—The Government, it is said, intends to re-employ Mr. G. C. Fletcher, late Sessions Judge of Bancoorah, but in a lower grade.

A DISAPPOINTED EXPLORER.—The Pioneer says:—The request of Lieut. H. M. Smith, of the 46th N.I., for permission to make an exploring tour in Tibet, has been negatived by the Government. The Chinese authorities are much opposed to British officers becoming familiar with the features of Chinese Tartary, and knowing this, the Indian Government are necessarily unwilling to countenance such attempts; besides that, the venturesome traveller in that unknown region would journey on to certain destruction, and an officers life costs the State money. It is still politically desirable that Chinese Tartary should cease to be a terra incognita, and surely some ambitious developer might nerve himself to the project of making it known. Government would probably neither bar his departure nor mourn over his non-return.

THE OFFICIAL PITCHFORK AT WORK.—We are sorry to learn that Sir John Lawrence has been at work with this weapon at Moorshedabad, the object of the "lift" being a judge who had been removed for inefficiency. The Englishman says:—The Government of Bengal, we understand, had very properly contemplated doing away with the appointment of the agent to the Governor-General at Moorshedabad. When the late Colonel Thompson was ill, the Lieutenant-Governor applied to the Indian Government for the appointment of the commissioner of the division to act as agent to the Governor-General at Moorshedabad in addition to his other duties during the period of Colonel Thompson's leave of absence. On receiving this suggestion, the Viceroy at once appointed Mr. Buckle to the appointment. The Governor-General in Council, on a political view of the matter, is not, we regret to learn, inclined to abolish the appointment and add its duties to those of the Commissioner of the district.

THE SALT WATER LAKE SCHEME.—We hear that a memorandum is in course of signature by the shareholders of the Salt Water Lake Reclamation Company protesting against the continuance of the scheme on the ground that the concessions recommended in the report differ materially from those announced by the promoters in their prospectus. The document has, we learn, already received numerous signatures sufficient, at least, to induce the Government to pause before conceding the lands mentioned in the report, and thus irrevocably involve the unfortunate shareholders in a profitless speculation.—Hurkaru.

THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT.—The Secretary of State continues inexorable in the matter of the seat of Government being at Simla in the hot season. The Hurkaru says:—"It is rumoured in high official quarters that the Governor-General has been once more endeavouring to move the Secretary of State to allow the head-quarters of the Government of India to remain on the Simla Hills during summer as a permanent measure, and to accord his sanction to the building of a Government-house on the Hills, which was once disallowed by the India Council."

NOVEL WITNESSES.—We hear that the preliminary investigations held at Roy Bareilly, in Oudh, in the case of alleged fraud against Mr. Inspector Devine, of the Oudh police, presented such a bungle when the proceedings were laid before the Commissioner, that the whole thing has been ordered to be gone through de novo. Our readers may laugh, but we are assured that the Assistant Commissioner of Roy Bareilly actually included a pair of bullocks, which the inspector is said to have come by in some irregular way, in the list of witnesses for the prosecution.—Mofussilite.

FEROZE SHAH AGAIN.—A report is current in Central India that the rebel leader, Feroze Shah, has again appeared in the Serong Jungles. He was last said to have offered his services to the Khan of Bokhara.

COLONEL ALEXANDER LAWRENCE.—The Delhi Gazette says:—We regret to learn that a telegram to his Excellency the Viceroy conveys the intelligence of the dangerous illness of his brother Colonel Alexander Lawrence, of the Madras service, now in England. Unless more favourable accounts are received all the expected gaieties of Simla will be stayed. There was to have been a bachelors' ball on the 1st, and a ball by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief on the 15th inst.

THE COOLIES SAVED IN THE "EAGLE SPEED."—The Englishman has been informed that sixteen of the one hundred and sixty-nine coolies who were saved from the Eagle Speed by the Lady Elgin have come up to Calcutta, in charge of Dr. Donaldson, and been made over to the emigrant agent's depot. The rest absconded on landing, except three who were sent to the agent by the superintendent of police, and they leave by train to-morrow morning for their respective homes.

TROOPS FOR NATIVE CHIEFS.—We observe that it has been ruled by the Home Government that a limited number of troops may be allowed to the native chiefs, to be retained under their own orders. Ammunition for these forces will be supplied by the Government at the request of the chief, but only so much as shall be sufficient to meet their requirements for a year.

NO SALUTES ON THE SABBATH.—We understand, says the Englishman, that the Governor-General in Council has prohibited the firing of salutes for civil or military officers, or Native Princes, on Sundays; but it is not, we believe, intended that the prohibition should extend to return salutes to the flags of foreign States.

CAPTAIN CUNLIFFE AND THE DEWANGIRI AFFAIR.—The Commander-in-Chief, upon a full consideration of the circumstances which led to the removal of Captain Cunliffe from Staff employment, has come to the conclusion that he should be reinstated, and has so reported to the Government of India.

JUNG BAHADOOR AND BHOOTAN.—The Delhi Gazette says:—We learn that Sir Jung Bahadur has strongly remonstrated with the Bhootan authorities against entertaining the idea of further resisting the British Government. He advises them to submit without delay and sue for peace.

THE CONTROL OF JAILS.—The Government, we understand, contemplates vesting the control of the jails in an officer other than the magistrate. The officers especially selected and appointed by the Government are to be styled superintendents.

THE DEAD ALIVE.—There is a report that Azimoolah, the famous or rather infamous, secretary to the Nana, has been found to be alive. A party, under Major Mowbray Thomson, has gone out to seize the person supposed to be the rebel in question.

THE COOLY CORPS.—Brigadier-general Tytler has selected Lieutenants H. G. Becher and E. Beddy to organise the Cooly Corps, for service with the troops marching on Bhootan, and the Commander-in-Chief has approved the selection.

RAJAH MAGISTRATES.—The rajahs of Nadda and Seeba, in the Kangra district, have been invested with the powers of subordinate magistrate. They have also received authority to hear and determine all civil suits not exceeding 500 rupees in value.

MALARIA FEVER.—We are sorry to hear that malaria fever has again appeared in those parts of the Hooghly, Nuddoa, and Burdwan districts in which it made great ravages for the last two years.

REDUCTION OF EUROPEAN TROOPS.—The Athenæum and Daily News says:—"We understand that, at the suggestion of the Supreme Government, it has been determined to reduce, by one, the number of European regiments serving in this Presidency. The reduction will take place at an early date, immediately on the departure to New Zealand of a Queen's Regiment now in Calcutta, which will be replaced by one from the Madras Presidency. The vacancy caused here will not be filled up."

MANNERS AT MADRAS.—We have heard of a regimental cap being stuck on a single hair, so exquisitely has it been adjusted. Should any of the officers in the division al- luded to possess such taste, the general of which is turning his back on an immemorial custom, though certainly not on a Horse Guards' order of long standing, they will doubtless feel particularly obliged by this order involving the stationary position of their caps. Perhaps the next order will be that they are not to salute ladies at all:—"MARTIAL LAW."—We are informed that Major General Smyth, C.B., commanding the centre division, has prohibited officers from raising their caps when bowing to ladies. The parties most affected by this order, we presume, will be the tailors, as a cap under the present circum- stances will last twice as long as before."—Athenæum and Daily News.

BOMBAY.

OCCUPATION OF SAMARKAND BY A RUSSIAN ARMY.

We have received a short Persian letter confirming the report of the occupation of Samarkand by a Russian army, as also that an advance has been made upon Badaksha, from which place Cabul can be reached by a route offering few obstructions in about twenty-eight days. The Russians have adopted a very con- ciliatory line of policy, which is highly ap- plauded by those who are brought into con- tact with them. Two envoys (Russian and Persian), after a long conference with the Ameer Sher Ali Khan at Candahar have, it is affirmed, induced the Ameer to return to Cabul instead of proceeding to Herat. The writer implies that should certain terms which the Ameer may propose to the British Govern- ment be not accepted, an alliance will be formed with Russia. It is stated that the Tribes in Swat are arming themselves, and that a num- ber of firearms, secretly purchased at Pesh- wur, have been forwarded to Swat. We give the following translation of a part of the letter, as it will doubtless prove interesting to many:—"The Russian army has arrived from Bokhara at Badaksha, but Ameer Sher Ali Khan is still at a distance of some kos from Candahar, and has not yet gone up close to the city with his forces. There is a talk now of a reconciliation between Sher Ali Khan and Mahomed Sharif Khan, provided that the latter releases the brother of the former, Afzul Khan, and al- lows him to retain and exercise his rights of sovereignty as before. Mahomed Azim Khan is ready to give his consent to these terms. Several sirdars have been detected in a new conspiracy, and papers bearing their seal have been discovered. These papers were obtained in the following manner. Shah Murdan Khan, of Jellalabad, arrested some person of whom he had a suspicion, and searched him, and found a paper in his possession to the effect that Sheikh Meer Sirdar, of the army of Ameer Sher Ali Khan and Ruffek Khan, had written that they hoped the British Government would bear in mind the dissensions which they had sown amongst the sons of Dost Mahomed. The man so arrested was sent with the paper found on him to Ameer Sher Ali Khan. It is reported that Sher Ali Khan has been killed by the hand of Mahomed Ameer Khan's son. Other accounts say that his death is due to the grief which he experienced at the murder of his brother and son."—Pioneer.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE.—It is not unlikely that in the first sitting of the new Parliament among the questions that will be set down for consideration and debate will be that of the East India Covenanted and Uncovenanted Services, as Mr. Danby Seymour had previously given notice that he thought the time had come when the two services might be put on the same footing, and certainly when we look at the Uncovenanted Service now and compare it with what it was some fifteen years back he great change that has come over it cannot but be observed by all who have resided that length of time in India. True it is that the rules relating to furlough and leave generally which were promulgated a year or two back are by no means so favourable to the interests of the service as they might have been, but owing to that want of unanimity which would appear to be a striking characteristic of uncovenanted officers, nothing effectual was done, though the complaints at the time the rules were issued here were both loud and deep.—Our Paper.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY AND ASSAULT ON THE ESPLANADE BY DAYLIGHT.—An extraordinary charge of assault and highway robbery was in- vestigated before Mr. Barton, Sept. 11, at the Fort police-court. A parsee named Jamsetjee Hormusjee, described as a cook, was charged at the instance of a Hindoo printer, employed in the Secretariat, named Ramjee Mahdowjee, with committing a violent assault upon and robbing him of a silver watch shortly after five o'clock on Friday evening on the Esplanade, near the site of the new European General Hospital. It appeared that the prisoner and three other parsees, at the time in question, attacked the prosecutor, knocked out one of his teeth, and robbed him of his watch. The case is the more remarkable as the offence was not committed by European loafers, but by Parsees, who are proverbially peaceful and well conducted people.

THE MACDONALD MEDAL.—Referring to the order of Government of the 3rd of May last, the Director of Public Instruction on the 1st inst. requested that Government would be pleased to permit a gold medal, of the value of Rs. 100, to be struck annually at the Mint, free of charge, on account of Major Macdonald's foundation. He found, on inquiry, that about one-half of the sum provided by Major Macdonald would be expended if the medal were to be executed by an engraver. It seemed highly advisable, therefore, that per- mission should be given to have the medal cast at the Mint free of charge. The founder has furnished Mr. Powell with a device for the medal. In conformity with the Director's re- quest, Government has directed that a gold medal, of the value of Rs. 100, which sum will be paid by Major Macdonald, be struck annu- ally at the Mint, at the public charge.

A PECULIAR PHASE OF THE SHOE QUESTION.

—We learn from a correspondent that a very interesting case was disposed of a short time ago by the magistrate of Carwar. It appears that some time ago a Mahomedan resident of Carwar, named Seedee Pochin, presented a petition to a high judicial officer of that station for employment as a peon. The official de- clined to give him the situation on the ground that the petitioner did not bear a good charac- ter. The man presented a second petition in court to the judge, and while his sheristadar was interpreting the purport of the petition, the impudent Mussulman became enraged and took a pair of shoes which were then lying in court and flung them at the judge. He then attempted to run away, but was immediately secured and sent to the magistrate for trial. On being convicted he was sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment.—Times of India.

DR. LIVINGSTONE, the famous African tra- veller, was amongst the passengers which arrived from Europe yesterday by the mail steamer.—Bombay Gazette, Oct. 12.

SEVERE PROPRIETY IN HIGH PLACES.—There are frequent complaints made by correspondents of the journals on the score of the dullness of Government-house parties. Sir John Lawrence, it seems, has most dreadfully dreary and respectable people to his reunions, and his A.D.C.s being all middle-aged, staid men, the light and airy element is almost entirely dispensed with. Sir William Mansfield's tendencies are in a similar direction, and now we find the same complaint made against Sir Charles Straubenzee. Here is an allusion to the fact from a local letter:—"I alluded in my last letter to a communication which had appeared in the Poona Observer, regarding the Commander-in-Chief's hospitality. Strangely enough, this epistle was followed up by another in the Deccan Herald, written with a somewhat similar object, and signed 'Dando.' Next we find a letter in the Herald from 'Bertha Florence' amusingly cutting up the two former, saying, 'If Sir Charles will only do as we want to, he will not think of asking any of the stiff old parsons, doctors, or bilious old officers to his house. We only want those who can sing and dance and be amiable to join our party; and why only such people should not be asked over and over again I am sure I cannot guess.' And it certainly does seem rather hard that a gentleman should not be allowed to choose his own friends. This is probably the first time that his doing so has been made the subject of a somewhat virulent correspondence in the public press."

"TOM CRINGLE."—The Bombay Gazette says:—"The extensively known correspondent of the Times of India, Thomas Cringle, Esq., leaves us, not in search of health this time, but in search of a settlement, where his merits as a public man will be duly appreciated. Tom Cringle was gifted with a ready pen and with a lively and entertaining style. To some of his writings we owe it that improvements were at once made; but Tom Cringle was not an impartial writer. This does, however, not matter much. He generally attacked measures, not men, and as a pleasant writer his letters were eagerly read. The Times of India will have good reason to regret their discontinuance."

COLONEL PLAYFAIR, POLITICAL AGENT AT ZANZIBAR, has arrived at Bombay. He has been ill for some time past, and was obliged to leave very suddenly on that account. The Sultan leaves Zanzibar about the 25th of next month. He will be accompanied by three frigates, and comes to Bombay for the purpose of paying a visit. It was Colonel Playfair's intention to have travelled in company with the Sultan, had his health permitted him to have waited long enough.

CHINA & JAPAN.

The China Overland Mail of Aug. 28 says: "In the way of political news the past fortnight has been unusually barren. Some misapprehension appears to exist as to the death of General San-ko-lin-sin, who was said to have fallen on the field whilst fighting the Nyenfei rebels. It is now reported that he fled on being defeated, took refuge in a peasant's cottage, and was there murdered in cold blood. The matter is now one of very small consequence. Tseng Kwo-fan succeeds to the supreme command of the Northern armies, and the Nyenfei have disappeared westwards, where they can pillage under easier circumstances."

"Sir Harry Parkes has, we hear, commenced diplomatic operations in Japan, with his usual cheerful activity, firmness, and 'pluck.' On arriving in Yokohama he surveyed the state of affairs, and being resolved that all the treaty privileges should be observed, and the interests as well as the dignity of Britain cared for, he soon intimated his intention of re-establishing the English Legation at Yedo, a post which has always proved one of honour, because of danger."

"There was some opposition to granting our Minister an official residence at Yedo; but the thing was insisted upon and carried."

CEYLON.

(From the Colombo Observer, September 18.)

The weather has been all that could be desired for preparing and despatching coffee, but certainly we are as much surprised as any of our readers can be at the enormous return for the past fortnight. No less than 43,000 cwts. of coffee, exported in the first half (less than half of September) is certainly a new feature in our trade. If anticipations are realised the total out-turn of the season will be as follows:—Plantation, 607,000 cwts.; native, 269,000 cwts.; total, 876,000 cwts. Indeed, it is quite possible that the round numbers may be made up as follows:—Plantation, 610,000 cwts.; native, 270,000 cwts.; total, 880,000 cwts. That will be 102,000 in excess of the largest crop previously exported from Ceylon. Counting local consumption and berries lost (always a considerable proportion, in some districts especially), we can have no doubt that the total production of coffee in Ceylon in 1864-65 was up to the full million of cwts.

Since our last the Government Gazette has given to the community a number of Drafts of Ordinances which are to engage the attention of the local Legislature from the 27th inst. and onwards. The Railway and Land Registration Bills are to be amended—the Labour Laws are to be consolidated—Municipalities are to be established—the duties of Masters Attendants are to be defined—and the imitation of Trade Marks is to be rendered penal—the marriage law is to be amended.

The Ceylon League and its object, notwithstanding the sneers and objections of persons who seem dreadfully afraid of progress, are gaining with the public. They have been endorsed by public meetings at Badulla, Jaffna, and, apparently, Dickoya; and a public meeting has just been held at Colombo, the best attended and most enthusiastic we have seen for years, at which the resignation of the unofficial members "as the most significant protest that could have been entered against the course pursued by the Secretary of State for the colonies," was most heartily approved.

CAPTAIN NICOLLS, R.A.—At the request of the president of the Military Commission now sitting, Captain Nicolls, Royal Artillery, late Assistant Military Secretary, will remain in the colony until further orders, for the purpose of giving evidence on the subject under investigation.

RETIREMENT OF CHAPLAINS.

Aug. 31.—No. 1,504.—The following despatch from the Rt. Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 167, dated July 8, is published:—

To H.E. the Rt. Hon. the Governor-General of India in Council.

Sir,—I have considered in Council your ecclesiastical letters dated April 5 and 10, 1865, Nos. 2 and 4, requesting information on certain questions which have arisen in connection with the rules for the retirement of chaplains, laid down in my financial despatch of Feb. 17, 1865, No. 32.

2. In regard to the first point, as to the interpretation to be placed on the words "must resign," in Rule II., her Majesty's Government intended "resignation of the service," and they cannot allow "resignation of the superior allowances" to be regarded as a fulfilment of the condition prescribed in the rule in question.

3. With respect to the second point on which a decision is requested, her Majesty's Government concur with you in thinking that there would be hardship in refusing the increased pension to a senior chaplain on retirement, in the event of the third chaplain on the list electing to accept the promotion in lieu of the increased pension, as provided in Rule III., and will therefore allow the increased pension to be granted on the retirement within the prescribed period of one of the senior chaplains, even although a permanent vacancy may not thereby be caused.—I have, &c., (Signed) C. Wood.

MADRAS ARMY.

Fort St. George, Aug. 29.—No. 312.—The following extract from a military despatch from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India is published:—

Despatch dated May 31, 1865.

No. 67.—1. I observe from your last official army List, that the names of the officers on the general list, who were appt. under the new conditions and have been transferred to the new line regts., have been removed from the list of your Presidency.

2. No authority has been given by me for this course, nor is it in accordance with the instructions contained in my despatch to the Govt. of India, dated June 17 last, No. 194, paragraph 55, which directed the removal of the names of certain officers from the cadres of regts., but did not authorise a similar course with respect to the names of officers on the general list.

3. The removal of these officers' names would give an undue advantage to the officers of the general list in regard to the pro., and cannot therefore be sanctioned.

4. The names of these officers must be re-inserted in italics in their proper places on the list on which their names have been hitherto borne.

In accordance with the foregoing instructions of H. M.'s Govt., the following list, showing the position and dates of rank of the officers concerned, as they should stand in the cavalry and infantry general lists of the Madras army, are published:—

Cavalry General List.

Capt. V. E. Law, v. Fraser, 3rd L.C., July 16, 1864, as at present.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

MONDAY, October 16, 1865.

A NEW PHASE OF THE AMALGAMATION QUESTION.

THERE seems every reason to believe that the case of the Indian officers will not be settled without another appeal to Parliament; and, in order that the question may not be decided too easily or too soon, it now appears that the Royal officers are about to make a demonstration against the Amalgamation Act, under which, it is declared, their position in India has changed considerably for the worse. This is the report current in Calcutta, and has nothing to do with the alleged difference between the Horse Guards and the members of the last—or, perhaps, it would be safer to say latest—Royal Commission; so that between these different elements a very pretty complication may be expected. The Englishman, which has stated the case of the Royal officers in a very forcible manner, declares that not only will their grievances be forced upon the attention of Parliament in the ensuing Session, but the question will be raised as to the expediency of re-constituting a local European force for service in India.

On the part of the Royals it is contended that, whereas the Amalgamation Act was passed with the avowed object of getting rid of a monopoly, and equalising the conditions of service to all troops employed in India, the officers of the line are very far from getting their share of the loaves and fishes. They have Indian pay and allowances, but they have not Indian pensions, nor many advantages possessed by the officers of the Staff Corps, and even those with native regiments. And this notwithstanding that one-third of their number are kept constantly on Indian service, instead of something less than one-fifth, as under the old state of things, and that the cost of living in the country is double what it was. They may, it is true, go into the Staff Corps, but to do so they have not only to pass arduous examinations, but must sacrifice the value of their commissions, and give themselves up entirely to an Indian career—beginning life afresh in fact, which few are disposed to do, at any rate after they have got their captaincies. They may also, on passing certain examinations, get posts on the Staff (if they happen to have in without forfeiting their present positions; but they justly argue that any extensive adoption of such opportunities would be greatly injurious to the efficiency of the service, and conducive to a similar state of things to that which broke up the Native Army. As for the amalgamation measure being a simplification of the old system, the effect has been to substitute for two, no less than five distinct services. Thus we have in India, as the writer in the Englishman points out:—1st, the Royals proper, the Queen's regiments going backwards and forwards as they have always done. 2nd. The new line regiments, which may hereafter become completely assimilated to those of the line, but which, for at least a quarter of a century longer, will retain their peculiar distinctions. 3rd. The Locals proper, the men whose condition is held to be exactly what it was before, though opinions differ upon the subject, and for only about half of whom there is or can be employment. 4th. The officers of the Staff Corps, who serve under conditions quite different from other classes of officers, for doing the same duty. 5th. The officers on the general list, who, as the writer says, "have entered on 'spec,' as it were, for we believe no special condition was made with them other than that they should have no claim to anything which it might be found convenient to withhold from them."

On such terms as these, adds the Englishman, "it would be well if the Indian Government could secure the services of all in its employ; but as this cannot be, it is merely an evil that there should be this general list class, on its own peculiar footing, in addition to four other classes, each of which is distinct from any other. The general list, being the youngest of the whole five, is likely to survive three of them. The ordinary regiments that pass to and fro may, of course, be supplied from England for an indefinite time to come. We trust, then, that the special attention of Parliament will be closely directed to the mode in which the chief defect in the late Company's system has been aggravated by the miserable bungling," &c.—we withhold some uncomplimentary epithets with which the sentence concludes.

Without entering minutely into the case of the Royals, we must at least admit generally that it has justice on its side. And the claims of this class, so far from being opposed to those of the Indian officers, should do their cause good service by arousing the Legislature to a sense of the utter failure of the Amalgamation measure to satisfy any of the parties concerned. Though the Indians have been for the most part Secessionists, the Royals have been generally looked upon as supporters of the Union; but when both classes agree that separation would be for the better, there is an additional chance of the end being gained. Local interests may be neglected, as we have seen, but the question has become one of Imperial policy; and when this fact is fully understood, the Legislature can scarcely do less than act in a decided manner. The Indian officers may therefore be assured of this—that failing a proper adjustment of their claims, there is every probability of the abandonment of amalgamation altogether, and the restoration of the local service to something like its former footing.

INDIAN MAILS.—A WORD WITH MR. REUTER.

THE Barbadians say of themselves that they have only one fault—they are too brave. Perhaps Mr. Reuter is of opinion that the one fault of his telegrams is—that they are too speedy. If so, we can assure him that he is mistaken. We allude particularly to the telegrams announcing the progress of the homeward mails from India. When there are breaks in the line we are prepared for a little delay, and the longer the distance the less certain will the arrival be in point of time. But there is no reason why information of the arrival of the mail at Suez, Alexandria, or Malta, should not be telegraphed until the day after the steamer has left, as is usually the case. For instance, on Saturday evening, the London journals published the first intelligence of the arrival of the mail at Malta, in a despatch dated Thursday, stating that the steamer had left Malta on the previous day. The Sunday papers contained no later news, and it is only on Monday morning that the public are informed, by a telegram dated Saturday, that the mail arrived at Marseilles at 10 A.M. on that day. The mail was then in the Post-office; so that the readers of the morning papers must literally have "got up very early" to have gained the information before the receipt of their letters. It would be far better if, whether from Suez, Alexandria, Malta, or Marseilles, the telegram was despatched on the arrival of the steamer, with an intimation when she was to leave; and it is obvious that in the case of Marseilles, unless particular promptitude be exercised, it is of no use telegraphing at all. In fact, if the Post-office brought the mails from Marseilles in reasonable time, instead of taking from thirty to thirty-six hours for the purpose, they would always outstrip the telegraph, under present arrangements. Of course some of the delay of which we complain is attributable to the Peninsular and Oriental Company's agents; but it is to Mr. Reuter's interest to make them more prompt, and it is to be hoped that he will bestir himself for the purpose.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.—Oct. 10. [Before Mr. Registrar ROCHE.] IN RE LOUIS EMIL RUNTZ REES.

This was a meeting for proof of debts and choice of assignees. The bankrupt described himself as of 45, Commercial Sale Rooms, Mincing-lane, merchant, trading as Emil Rees, lately trading in co-partnership with Edward Wyttenback, of Calcutta, under the style of E. Wyttenback and Co., also in partnership with Julius Sonderman, at Lucknow, under the firm of J. Sonderman and Co., but now of 16, Mincing-lane, merchant's clerk. The failure is attributed to non-receipt of remittances from abroad, depreciation of produce, and the failure of other houses. The preliminary statement, prepared by Messrs. Johnstone, discloses debts to the extent of about £14,000; with assets not yet ascertained, but believed to be of trifling value. Amongst the creditors are the Delhi Banking Corporation, £3,461; Bank of Hindustan, China, and Japan, £710; Mr. T. A. Morgan, 32, Fenchurch-street, merchant, £3,500; and Mr. J. Rohrweger, Fen-court, Fenchurch-street, merchant, £2,120. Mr. J. P. Mugins, of Commercial Sale Rooms, Mincing-lane, merchant, was now chosen creditors' assignee; Messrs. Thomas and Hollams being the solicitors under the proceeding.

THE BANDA AND KIRWEE PRIZE MONEY.

The Court of Admiralty, Dr. Lushington presiding, were engaged on Monday, Oct. 9, with the case of Major-General Sir George Whitlock v. General Eyre, executor of Lord Clyde, and others. There were two motions, referring to the evidence and the closing of the proceedings, before the hearing. One was on the part of Major-General Whitlock, and the other on the part of one of the claimants to share in the booty, which exceeds in amount half a million sterling.

The Queen's Advocate, with whom was Mr. Ayrton, M.P., appeared on the part of Major-General Whitlock and others; Mr. Vernon Lushington for the executor of Lord Clyde; Mr. Pritchard for Major Osborn and others; Mr. Giffard for Colonel Norman; Dr. Tristram for Sir Hugh Rose; Mr. Bayford for General Wheeler; Mr. Cohen for General Roberts; Mr. E. C. Clarkson, Mr. Walker, and Mr. Bush represented other general officers who claimed to share in the fund now waiting to be distributed. The Treasury had, by special order, referred the matter to Dr. Lushington.

The Queen's Advocate moved that all the documents printed and comprised in the six volumes filed, bearing date on or previously to the 7th June, 1858 (the day of the capture), should be received and read, and have the same validity and effect as if they were affidavits in the cause, and that the 31st October instant be the last day for closing the evidence. The parties he had the honour to represent were the actual captors, and the object of the application was to admit all the official documents previously to the 7th June, 1858, when the capture took place, and the other documents bearing date subsequently to the 7th June, 1858, would not be admitted as evidence, but would come under a special category and different consideration to the other documents.

Mr. Vernon Lushington and the other learned counsel opposed the application in the order in which their names appeared. They severally urged that the object of this motion was to exclude evidence, and that justice could not be done unless all the documents printed in the six volumes at the instance of the plaintiffs were received as evidence. Unless the whole of the documents were admitted, evidence would have to be obtained from India at great expense and delay; and Mr. Bayford declared that if all the documents were not received the case could not be closed before October next year. Further, it was urged that, on the part of Major-general Whitlock, certain admissions which were expected had not been made. The object of the application was to exclude a memoranda which Lord Clyde drew up of the campaign, and which showed the position of the several general officers who claimed as constructive captors of the booty. The nine learned gentlemen who appeared opposed the motions on both grounds.

His Lordship, after hearing the Queen's Advocate in reply, who complained of the attack made by the combined forces of his learned friends who mustered in such numbers, gave his opinion on the two motions. He had read through the six volumes, and was now on his second journey through them. He well remembered the Deccan case, which occurred forty-five years since, and in that cause no objection was taken to the admission of evidence. There could be no rule laid down in the present case; he could not be fettered in receiving documents, and unless the objects of the motions was to exclude evidence it was wholly unnecessary. His Lordship decided on admitting all the documents subject to any objection. The parties would bring in all the documents to the 31st instant, and could afterwards apply to admit other evidence.

Order accordingly.

IMPORTATION OF LUNATICS FROM INDIA.

At the meeting of Middlesex magistrates, on Thursday, Mr. Dixon brought under the notice of the Court a communication from Mr. Collins, the clerk to the board of guardians to the Poplar Union, in which it was stated that on the 11th September, eleven persons, all lunatics, natives of India, were landed from the ship Devonshire, arriving in the East India Dock, and belonging to Messrs. Wigram and Sons. They were immediately taken to the Poplar Workhouse, and ten of them were sent off to Hanwell Lunatic Asylum, the other one remaining in the workhouse. It was urged that it was hard upon the ratepayers that these lunatics should be brought from India to become a burden upon the ratepayers of this country, and trusted that application would be made to the India Board to devise some means of ridding them of this serious charge.

Mr. Halswell said that very recently more than 18 Indian lunatics had been landed, and were now wandering about this country, and if they were to be compelled to take into the county lunatic asylums all these wandering lunatics the consequence would be most frightful. One of the lunatics to whom he had referred had been a convict lunatic for 25 years, and two of them had been brought from the distant province of Upper Scinde. This was a new phase in the government of India, for while it was under the control of the East India Company these lunatics were all taken care of by them in India; but since India had been placed under the government these lunatics were brought over to this country. In the present case, to show the system, a cabin and attendants had been appropriated to them on their voyage. He thought this was a matter that ought to be taken up at once.

The Chairman said it was one of the most important questions that had ever come before the Court, and deserved the attention of a special committee to inquire into all the facts, and to report to the India Board or the Secretary of State if they should deem it necessary to do so.

This suggestion was adopted, and a committee was appointed consisting of the chairman of the court, Mr. Henry Pownall; Mr. Kemshead, chairman of accounts; and the chairmen of the committee of visitors of the two lunatic asylums, Mr. Dixon and Mr. Halswell.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ORDER OF THE BATH.—(WAR-OFFICE, Oct. 9.)—The Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of Lieutenant-General Sir John Gaspard Le Marchant, G.C.M.G., late Governor and Commander-in-Chief in and over the Island of Malta and its dependencies, to be an Ordinary Member of the Civil Division of the Second Class, or Knights Commanders of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath.

DESPATCH OF THE BOMBAY MAELS.—(SOUTHAMPTON, Oct. 12.)—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Nyanza, Captain Weeks, sailed this afternoon with the mails for Gibraltar, the Mediterranean, Egypt, Aden, Bombay, and Upper Bengal. She took out 80 first and 60 second-class passengers, and on freight, specie value £104,837, of which amount £15,900 is sovereigns for Alexandria, and the remainder for Bombay, comprising bar gold, £3,200; bar silver, £84,600; and watches, jewellery, &c., £1,137. Amongst the passengers are Captains Coote, Johnson, Haly, Vardon, and Walrond; Colonels Sandwith and Playfair; Staff-surgeons Hector, Spaw, and Spurway; Major-general Atherly; Surg. Sinclair, and Lieutenants Grace, Curtin, and Leggett.

THE BOMBAY AND MAURITIUS MAELS.—(SOUTHAMPTON, Oct. 14.)—The Peninsular and Oriental steamship Syria, Captain Christian, with the heavy portion of the above mails, arrived this evening at 6.45. She brings 129 passengers and eight packages specie, value £1,380. Her cargo includes 2,396 bales of raw silk, valued at £180,000 sterling.

ORIENTAL FINANCIAL CORPORATION.—At a meeting of the above company, held on the 12th inst., at the London Tavern, it was (with one dissentient) resolved, that the amalgamation with the Mediterranean Bank, which is to be united to the Bank of Bombay, be carried out, and that three shareholders of the Oriental Financial Company be united with the directors in superintending the winding-up of that company. It is believed that eventually, of the £10 per share called up, nearly all the surplus beyond the sum credited by the Bank of Bombay, £4 per share, will be realised. We congratulate the shareholders on the improved position of the Oriental Financial Company.

THE NEW THEORY IN RIFLES.—

Lieutenant James Forsyth, in his excellent work, "The Sporting Rifle, &c.," first promulgated the startling theory that Rifles could be so constructed as to lessen the elevation by increasing the charge of powder. This theory, which the Advertiser has proven to be correct, alters the whole position of Rifles in favour of the sportsman. Formerly, with a high trajectory, the bullet which would have hit a tiger in a vital part at 100 yards, would pass over his back at 25 or 50 yards. By the new system, as elaborated and perfected in DOUGALL'S LOCKFAST BREECHLOADERS, there is a point-blank range to 150 yards, combined with a velocity and smothering power hitherto unknown.—(See TIMES, 11th October, 1864.) No other Rifle possesses the same advantages.

PICKLES, SAUCES, JAMS, &c.
MANUFACTURED BY

PURVEYORS TO THE QUEEN,
SOHO-SQUARE, LONDON.

CROSSE and BLACKWELL'S renowned first-class Manufactures are obtainable from every respectable Provision Dealer in the World.

Purchasers desirous of being supplied with C. and B.'s goods, which are all of the best quality, and of a thoroughly wholesome character, should be careful to see that inferior articles are not substituted. Their genuine preparations bear their names and address upon the labels. Their Pickles are all prepared in Pure Malt Vinegar, boiled in Oak Vats, by means of Platinum Steam Coils, thus avoiding all possibility of contact with Copper, or any other injurious metal; and they are precisely similar in quality to those supplied by them for use at HER MAJESTY'S TABLE.

Oxford Sausages, Patent Preserved Hams, Cheese and Bacon, Yorkshire Game and Pork Patés, Fresh Oysters in Tins, Salmon Cutlets, Whitebait, Fillets of Soles, Bologna Sausages, Herrings a la Sardines Soups, Meats, and Vegetables, in Tins, Fruits in Syrups, also in Noyeau and Brandy, Crystallised Fruits, all of which, as well as many other articles too numerous to include in an advertisement, they can strongly recommend. Their Salad Oil is the finest imported.

C. and B. are Agents for Lea and Perrins' Celebrated Worcestershire Sauce, Carstairs' Sir Robert Peel's Sauce, M. Sayer's Sauces, Relish and Aromatic Mustard, Payne's Royal Osborne Sauce, Captain White's Oriental Pickle, Curry Powder and Paste, and Mulligatawny Paste, Grimwade's Sterilised Milk, and for Masson's French Chocolate.

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile.

GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for while the ginger relieves the stomach from distension and flatulency, arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach, and by that means gives it a healthy and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpaired by age or climate, and well adapted for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, Cholera, or those complaints incidental to tropical climates, it is invaluable, as in numerous cases a dose of two has checked and frequently cured most alarming attacks. No family should be without it. Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-eighth pints.

Agreeable Sedlitz Powder, in one bottle, protected by a case, with measure and spoon included. The advantage of this preparation is the perfect combination of the solid ingredients of the Sedlitz Spring in one compound powder. It is very cooling and refreshing, well adapted for exportation, or travellers by land or sea.

Aromatic Tincture of Quinine.—For the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria.

No person exposed to the influence or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for if taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria.—Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by THOS. WILKINSON late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co., 270, Regent-street, London, W.

MRS. JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR TEETH.—This infallible remedy has preserved hundreds of children when thought past recovery from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as efficacious, tending to produce the teeth with ease, and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery where there are young children; for, if a child wakes in the night with pains in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and copying parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bills, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle.

Sold by all chemists and medicine vendors.

Earl RUSSELL sent to the College of Physicians a communication received by him from Manila (where Cholera had been raging fearfully), to the effect, that, of all remedies tried, Chlorodyne was the most effective.—See Brit. Med. J., Dec. 31, 1864.

CHLORODYNE (TOWLE'S). Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Cramp, Ague, Consumption, Asthma, Cough, Colds, Bronchitis, Sea Sickness, &c., immediately relieved by a dose of TOWLE'S CHLORODYNE, which is admitted to be a most wonderful and valuable medicine, and preferred by the profession for its known composition and moderate price.

IMPORTANT TO SHIPPERS AND EMIGRANTS.

Liverpool, Feb. 22nd, 1864. Ship Gertrude.
Mr. TOWLE.—Sir,—Having recently arrived from Bombay and during our stay there myself and crew being violently attacked with dysentery, so general in India, Captain Clements, of the ship Marseilles, lying near us, seeing the condition we were in, kindly sent a bottle of your Chlorodyne, from which myself and crew found immediate relief, and during the voyage home proved a most effective and valuable medicine. Having been instrumental in saving my own life and that of others, we feel it a duty and pleasure to send this statement of facts, to make what use of you think proper, believing that no vessel ought to leave port without a good supply in her medicine chest.

(Signed) GEORGE ALLEN, Chief Officer.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS,

Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 22s, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 6d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Nothing preserves the health so well as an occasional alternative when the temperature is variable, and the nerves are unstrung. These Pills act admirably on the stomach, liver, and kidneys, and so thoroughly purify the blood, that they are most efficient in warding off influenza, fever, diarrhoea, dysentery, and other maladies so rife through our autumns. All who have the natural and laudable desire of maintaining their own and their families' health, cannot do better than trust to Holloway's Pills, which will cool, regulate, and strengthen them. These purifying Pills are suitable for all ages, seasons, climates, and constitutions. They are the maiden's safeguard, the matron's safety, the young man's security, and the old man's comfort.

EXPANDING SADDLE.

GIBSON AND COMPANY

Respectfully invite the attention of MILITARY MEN, EQUESTRIANS, and OWNERS OF HORSES, to their Newly-Invented EXPANDING SADDLE, which admits of ready adjustment to the size of any horse, creating a secure and easy seat without the slightest inconvenience to either horse or rider. The principle of EXPANSION and CONTRACTION comprises a simple arrangement of mechanism within the saddle so perfect, that by merely turning a screw the pad is proportioned to the size and form of the animal, on which it firmly rests with a uniform pressure, and is securely retained in its position by means of an ordinary girth.

This invention has obtained the approval and distinguished patronage of HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, and from the very favourable opinions expressed by competent judges, and all who have had an opportunity of testing its merits, there is no doubt it will come into general use; indeed, its success is already established.

The majority of our Dyes are entirely soluble in boiling water, and will dye without the addition of other ingredients.

ANILINE DYES.—"I shall commence my observations on dyeing, by referring especially to the remarkable and beautiful colours derived from coal tar, the introduction of which into this art may be said to constitute the chief distinction, as far as dyeing is concerned, between the present and the former Exhibition, creating, in fact, a new era in the tinctorial art. Coal tar colours deserve attention for their power, as well as for the facility with which they may be applied, for one grain will deeply tint half a gallon of water, and little or no skill is required for their application."—Vide Report by Grace Calvert, Esq., F.R.S., Ph.D., Honorary Professor of Chemistry.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

We have received our usual files of papers, from Bombay to the 29th of September, and Calcutta to the 22nd of that month.

The Viceroy was still at Simla, but was expected to leave on October 20. It was believed, however, that his Excellency would not go to Calcutta for the season, but would hold the next session of his Council at Agra or Allahabad. It was uncertain whether he would hold the anticipated durbar, but in the event of his doing so Delhi was supposed to be the favoured place. Sir Bartle Frere and Sir William Mansfield were still disporting themselves at Poonah, where the usual courtly gaieties were in full force. The Governor had a distinguished guest in the person of the Hon. Mr. Maine, who had arrived in Bombay a short time before, and was expected to accompany Sir Bartle to the Nagpore Exhibition, which is to be opened on the 24th December next. By that time the Nagpore extension of the Great Indian Peninsular Railway will be a little advanced. Its opening to Badnaira was expected in November next, and to Kowta in the March following; but the whole line to Nagpore will not, it seems, be completed until January 1867.

Another Maharaj scandal case is reported in one of the Vernacular papers. A certain Maharaj has committed a vile outrage on a Hindoo child under ten years of age.

The 23rd Regiment N.I. had been ordered on field service to Kattiawar, to give an account of the Wagheers.

A new club was being formed at Simla—a United Service Club, to be confined to officers of the army and covenanted civil servants. Such an institution will be, doubtless, very acceptable. "The Simla Club" now existing is not a club at all, but an hotel, used more or less indiscriminately by the public, though it has special accommodation for private occasions, such as a large room for balls, theatricals, &c. It was never comparable to the "Himalaya," at Mussoorie, which, by the way, is not a service club, but is open to all comers who can pass the ordeal of the ballot.

There was a rumour that the King of Bokhara has fallen out with the Russians, and has confiscated the property of the Russian merchants there, and that the Russians have done the same with the property of Bokhara and Cabul merchants, and that the King of Bokhara has marched a large body of troops against the Russians.

The above items comprise about all the notable news in Bombay, where even the weather had not proved of its usual service as a topic for talk. The rains had been of a very seasonable character, and the crops and the public health very satisfactory.

From the Bengal side we learn very little that we did not know before. There is "nothing new," we are told, from Bhootan, and the same remark will apply to most other places. The Deb Rajah still held out, and preparations were still proceeding to make him give in. He will have the Dooars and nothing but the Dooars, and declares that £2,500 is inadequate to meet his expenses. It is said, however, that there are still two parties in the Durbar—one in favour of peace.

Sir Barnes Peacock, the Chief Justice, had arrived at Calcutta from his airing at Madras; but he was still very unwell, and unable to attend to his duties. The Madras trip is clearly not enough for him, and it is probable that he will return home.

Honours are plentiful in the City of Palaces, but unfortunately without wearers. It is stated that upwards of 30,000 surplus or unclaimed war medals, stars, crosses, bars, or clasps, are in deposit at the Adjutant-general's office.

A smart shock of an earthquake had been felt in Calcutta on the 9th—the direction of the heave being south-easterly.

The Government have settled an allowance of £778 a month to the members of the family of the ex-King of Delhi, and have also settled a little matter with the ex-King of Oude. The whole of the landed property of the latter has been escheated, with the exception of the tombs of his ancestors, which belong to the category of "things which are of no use to anybody but the owner." Of course, the pension of the ex-King remains as heretofore.

There has been a little doing in stray rebels. The report of the upturning of Feroze Shah and Azimoolah—both believed to be dead—is repeated; and we now learn that Laloo Singh and his band, who murdered the Dya Rajah in the North-Western Provinces, have been discovered by the police, and are awaiting their trial; also that Armudsen, a notorious rebel of 1857, has been found guilty at Cawnpore, and sentenced to imprisonment for life.

The official inquiry into the Eagle Speed affair has been concluded, but no decision has been made known. Three more of the coolies left to perish have been picked up, but there seems no hope of others having been saved.

It is stated that a very serious collision has occurred between the police and the people of Poree with regard to the suppression of hook-swinging. A special report has been submitted to Government on the subject by the Commissioner of Cuttack.

From Madras we learn that the despatch of the Secretary of State for India upon the re-organisation of the local army had been received. We publish the document elsewhere.

It was said that the head quarters of the Madras army was to be removed to Bangalore.

The cattle disease is reported to have broken out in the Neilgherries, and Government was about to institute an inquiry into the nature of the disease—with more success, it is to be hoped, than has attended the attempt in this country.

The next arrival from India will be the Calcutta Mail, which left Alexandria on Friday last at noon, and may be expected in London on Saturday evening.

THE CURRENCY SCHEME IN PRACTICE.

The Board of Revenue have submitted to Government some elaborate tabular statements, showing the circulation of Government currency notes in Lower Bengal. Last year the returns, when submitted, were singularly incomplete; this year, although a little better, they are still imperfect in many essential points of detail, and can only be relied on to give an approximate result of the system. The board, however, hope that, by means of the registers recently prescribed and introduced, the returns next year will be as nearly correct as possible. They attribute the want of correctness in the statements now submitted to the fact that the orders of Government specifying the particular information required were not received till February last, and they very naively remark that the "classification of the receipts and issues for the first nine months has, they suspect, been often made almost at haphazard. In few districts it has not been attempted at all."

A comparison of the results now given, with those of last year, becomes, under these circumstances, absolutely useless. All that we can do therefore is to extract such figures as seem to show the general results of the circulation, and wait until correct returns, based upon carefully and systematically kept registers, shall enable us to form a definite opinion on the merits of the scheme as shown in its actual working. Very few notes have been transmitted from the Bank of Bengal. The figures given show only 9,927 notes, aggregating Rs. 5,34,300, and of these about a half, or 4,532 notes for Rs. 2,91,300, were sent to the Dacca branch of the Bank. The remittances to the Bank have, however, been very considerable, being no less than 37,585 notes, for Rs. 74,05,570, and of this sum Rs. 36,62,130, represented by no less than 28,806 notes, were received at the Bank from the metropolitan districts of Hooghly, Burdwan, Nuddea, and the 24-Pergunnahs. 2,702 notes, for the sum of Rs. 4,68,030, were remitted by the Dacca Branch Bank. This would seem to show that the circulation of notes is, comparatively speaking, restricted, and that the system, except in the neighbourhood of Calcutta, is as little liked by the people as it is little understood.

The excess of stock for the year is 5,45,250 rupees. If to this is added the surplus of remittances to the Bank of Bengal over remittances from the Bank, we find that 74,16,529 rupees of notes have found their way to the Mofussil treasuries, without the intervention of Government or the Bank.—Hurkaru.

A MAHA BARNEE AT HURDWAR.

It has seldom been our lot to read a more masterly account of the great gathering of pilgrims which takes place at Hurdwar, in accordance with time-honoured religious teaching, than that which Messrs. Daniel and Watson have submitted to the Government of the North-Western Provinces connected with the late Mela. It appears that the day was a more than ordinarily holy one, because of the conjunction with it of certain "propitious periods;" and as learned pundits are very scarce in the N.W.P. above Benares, no one in the neighbourhood of Hurdwar was prepared for so enormous a concourse of pilgrims. They came from various parts of the Punjab, Ludianah, Pindce, Pattiala, and Meywar, and from all parts of India. They began to enter the Saharunpore district about the 17th of March, and kept on increasing steadily in number till the 22nd, so that when the magistrate of that station was making his way to Hurdwar, he passed through forty-five miles of pilgrims moving in one long dense column. They took entire possession of the town, covered every yard of available ground, and spread high up the hill sides of the Sewalics. The police, under Captain Watson, had been busy from the 21st constructing bridges to the islands in the sacred stream, and making arrangements for the protection of the people of the town. On the 23rd one bridge was ready, and a vast multitude of bathers passed over to the island, and the second was finished on the 24th, by which time the main roads and passages were so completely choked by them that great numbers who could not get near Hurdwar encamped where they were stopped, and their encampments reached east and south beyond Kunkhul and Jowallapore. Every available man belonging to the police of the district was hastily called to Hurdwar and thrown into the place, for the numbers of pilgrims hourly increased. "On looking round at the surging multitudes it seemed impossible to expect that this great mass of men, women, and children, from the uttermost parts of India would be able to fulfil the intention with which they had come." It is not surprising that serious misgivings were entertained by both the superintendent of police and the magistrate as to how this living mass was to extricate itself, how bathe in the stream, how find its way to its home again. Then, again, there was the grave probability of a collision between the dense line of pilgrims that approached the ghat to bathe, and the equally dense line of those who had performed their ablutions. To obviate this an open road was secured from the ghat, and the pilgrims were obliged to approach it by another. The guards on the bazaar route were strengthened, and certain checks which were believed to be efficient were applied to arrest the onward pressure of the crowd. A constable was placed on the roof of a house immediately over the sacred ghat, whose business it was to telegraph to the police below the state of the ghat, whereupon the approach of the bathers was either accelerated or retarded, so that "a motion of this man's hand influenced the movements of a column of men extending from Hurdwar to Kunkhul." But notwithstanding all these precautions a dreadful tragedy was very nearly enacted. The bathing, says the magistrate, "had been going on freely since the 22nd by day; on the morning of the 25th from three o'clock dense masses began moving towards the ghat; by six o'clock the crowd was intense, and kept increasing rapidly up to nine o'clock. The masses streaming in from all quarters had poured down the Bazaar road to the ghat, and returned by the upper road under the hills, but hundreds had found their way one by one past the lines of police, and had, after several hours' perseverance on the part of each individual, formed themselves into a strong body, and then suddenly found themselves face to face with the steady mass pouring back from the ghat. Had these two parties met, there would have been a horrible catastrophe; the spot where they stopped had been worked up in a few hours from thin light mud into a thick deep quagmire. I happened to be on the spot in time to save a meeting; and, on being shortly after joined by Captain Watson, we were able to lead on the return pilgrims, force back the opposing party to the proper channel, and by a judicious application of the check established by Captain Watson at the ghat and island, in half an hour the crowd was completely under control. It was just at the time when Captain Watson joined me that the front line of return pilgrims was so heavily pressed from behind as not to be able to hold back any longer, and gave way slightly. This caused some dozen or so to be thrown down, and though not half a minute had elapsed before the bodies were extricated from the crowd and mud, four were taken out dead. I consider no amount of foresight could have prevented this loss of life, and that the move which caused this accident went a great way towards saving a very great many lives. About the same time, in the Bazaar road, three people died from suffocation." Besides these casualties there were four girls drowned on the evening of the 24th, in attempting to cross the Ganges to the Bijour side; an old woman was knocked down by a bullock and died; and a man bathing at Mayapore was carried away by the stream and drowned. Some attempts were made to come to a conclusion as to the number of people who were collected, but all calculation was found to be impossible. The Brahmins, however, maintained that there were not less than twenty-five lakhs, or two and a-half millions present. In the course of two days the crowd had wended away, and the magistrate on his return to Seharunpore rode through forty-two miles of pilgrims. Those who had left on the 27th had reached the Jumna, so that the actual cavalcade on one road alone extended in a thick unbroken column over a length of sixty miles! It is painful to reflect that this vast multitude had come from all parts of the country, some from the most distant, with only one object, to bathe in the Ganges and wash away their sins. Delicate women and children had traversed the land, steadily overcoming all obstacles, and patiently bearing every inconvenience, in order to do something to propitiate Heaven. If we say to them, with St. Paul at Athens, "ye are too superstitious," they may well tell us, "we read you, ye Christians, a lesson on earnestness and fixedness of purpose in matters of religion, which you will be the better for taking closely to heart."—Hurkaru.

MOFUSSIL JUSTICE.

On Saturday morning, James Purris De Vine, an inspector in the Oudh police, was placed in the dock before Mr. Justice Macpherson, to take his trial; 1st, for having made a false statement in a certain declaration; 2nd, for having given false evidence in a judicial proceeding; 3rd, for having made an illegal search in the house of one Girdaree Singh, knowing that he was likely to save property from forfeiture to the State; 4th, for criminal breach of trust in misappropriating a part of the property seized during the above search; 5th, for having made an illegal search in the houses of Ramdial, Duttolall and Raberdeem. Here we have crimes enough in all conscience, gross neglect of duty being the lightest, the others being perjury and criminal breach of trust.

De Vine was an inspector in the Oudh police stationed at Roy Bareilly, and as far back as November, 1863, he, under the orders of his official superiors, searched the house of the late notorious rebel Girdaree Singh at Pyramow. Seven months afterwards, having received fresh orders, he, on the 7th May, 1864, searched the house of one Mussamut Rammeah, at Pyramow, for property belonging to Girdaree Singh. From 7th May, 1864, to 24th March, 1865, he continued to do his duty at Roy Bareilly, no one apparently dreaming of bringing any charge against him. Of his conduct at Roy Bareilly we shall let the following extract from the Annual Police Report of that district speak:—

"Inspector 4th Grade, Mr. De Vine, has been a most useful and able assistant to me during the past year, and I have to thank him for the great care and attention he has paid to his work. His accounts, Major Barrow, D. I. General, when here, considered unequalled in the Oudh police. Mr. De Vine's conduct has been unexceptionable, and he has well looked after the police at head quarters, and superintended the office Malkana, &c., to my entire satisfaction. He is a very fair drill, and has brought forward all recruits very quickly. I have much pleasure in thus noticing him to the inspector general. Signed, R. STAINFORTH, Lieutenant, District Superintendent, R. B."

On 21st March, 1865, Inspector De Vine was transferred to Lucknow, and appointed Inspector of the East Division of the City Police, and here, whilst filling a most responsible and onerous post, he gained the following public testimonial to his conduct:—

"Inspector De Vine joined this department as a deputy inspector the latter end of May last, obtained his promotion to the fourth grade of inspector in November; he is an excellent accountant, is rapidly becoming conversant with all police work in office, and is also most useful and energetic out of office. I have a very high opinion of his capabilities, and am confident that he will ere long prove himself a first rate police officer. Signed, E. HILL, Captain, District Superintendent, Lucknow."

The antecedents of the man showed that this attention to his duties was no more than might have been expected of him. He wears on his breast the Crimean medal with three clasps, the Turkish medal, the Indian mutiny medal, and he has been recommended for the Victoria Cross. He has served with distinction and credit as a soldier in the Artillery, in the Turkish Telegraph Department, towards the close of the Crimean war in the Ordnance Department and in the police, and besides being an educated man, he bears, as we have seen, a very high character. Having deserved promotion by his conduct at Bareilly, he was transferred to Lucknow, and here on the 7th June he was arrested and taken to Bareilly to answer to the many and grave charges brought against him. At Bareilly he was committed for trial, and was ordered to be sent immediately to Calcutta, and besides the guard, &c., no less than 37 persons were sent down as witnesses against him. On committal he was ordered to be conveyed to the Presidency in irons, whilst so struck with the heinousness of his offences was the assistant deputy commissioner that he remarked that he would, if he had the power, have passed a sentence of ten years' penal servitude. However, De Vine was to receive some consideration, for on finding security to the extent of 5,000 rupees, he was allowed to travel to Calcutta, in custody, to be sure, but without being ironed. Meanwhile a conviction being regarded, we presume, as inevitable, his property in Oude was seized and sold, and the proceeds confiscated to the State.

We come now to the trial. De Vine was arraigned, but on the case being called on, Mr. Justice Macpherson remarked:—

"That he had examined the preliminary proceedings taken by the committing magistrate and found that the charge was not sustainable, the evidence taken being wholly irrelevant to the case in question, extremely vague, superfluous, and loose. It was the duty of the committing magistrate to have strictly confined himself to the point in question, and not to have overwhelmed the case with such a superabundant mass of useless evidence. He thought the time of the Court and public would be uselessly thrown away in investigating into or trying such a case. He would, therefore, order the prisoner to be discharged at once."

The remarks of the learned judge require no colouring at our hands to show the way in which the committing magistrate did his duty. We shall only remark that according to law De Vine may be again arrested on this charge at any time within the next three years. But in connection with this case there is an episode which, if it were not vouched for authoritatively, we should deem scarcely credible.

Whilst at Lucknow De Vine was living with a Mrs. Brown, who at his request proceeded early in June to Roy Bareilly to look after the property he had left behind on his transfer to the capital of the province. The Roy Bareilly authorities, however, arrested her on the 4th June, and seized everything belonging to her, but the clothes, &c., on her person. She was confined in a room in her bungalow, and allowed to see no one, whilst four sentries were kept in the same room night and day! This arrest, we read, "so frightened her that it brought on sickness, and at 2 A.M. of the 12th of June she died!"

The magistrate in this case was C. R. Crommelin, Esq., Assistant Deputy Commissioner of Roy Bareilly.—Hurkaru.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE MAILS, INDIAN AND OVERLAND.—The Englishman says:—The attention of the Director-General of Post-offices is directed towards the acceleration of the mails, particularly between Bombay and Calcutta. New arrangements are in progress to bring the Bombay mails via Mirzapore to Calcutta, which, it is expected, will be carried out in Nov. next. Much depends on the progress of the railways for the full completion of the postal service via Nagpore and Mirzapore. At one time, it was hoped that the Nagpore branch of the railway would be ready, as far as Wurdah, the frontier of Nagpore, by March, 1866; but now it seems that Nagpore will not be reached until the beginning of 1867. However, in the meantime, the roads are being hurried on and expedited, and arrangements have been made for a mail cart from Wurdah to Mirzapore, from the beginning of November. The advisability of changing the route for the overland mails between Calcutta and Bombay will then be tested. The adoption of the route via Mirzapore and Wurdah will, it is expected, effect a saving of thirteen hours in the time of transit of the mails. Every gain in point of despatch, however small, is to be desired. The slight saving of time that will be thus effected will not, however, do much towards obviating the inconvenience at present resulting from the absurd arrangement, through which we are, during a portion of the year, reduced to a bi-monthly communication with Europe. The simultaneous departure of the overland mail via Bombay, and that from Calcutta, via Galle, renders the latter mail perfectly useless for either general or commercial purposes. Yet the public has still to pay for a means of despatch from which it cannot possibly derive any advantage. Now that Bombay has been brought so near Calcutta, the time has evidently arrived for establishing a weekly mail between Bombay and England, in lieu of the alternate fortnightly mail, via Bombay and via Galle. The present arrangement is a mere waste of the public money, and exposes the folly of long contracts in such matters. The question has long since been taken up by the Chamber of Commerce; the Director-General of Post-offices has urged the course we recommended in these columns six months ago upon the Government of India; and the latter has addressed the Secretary of State to the same effect. It appears, however, that, in some way or other, the convenience of Australia and China would be affected, and, while threatened with an enhanced rate of postage, we are the last considered.

PROPOSED EMBANKMENT OF THE HOOGHLY.—An English company is, we understand, in the course of formation, which proposes the embankment of the whole river frontage of the Hooghly, from Prinsep Ghat to Chitpore Bridge, with landing wharves, steam and hydraulic cranes, and suitable landing sheds and warehouses. The cost of the undertaking is estimated at £3,000,000 sterling, and it has, we hear, the support of men of undoubted wealth and position. The scheme is based upon certain concessions on the part of the Local Government, and has been very favourably received by the Home authorities. If the undertaking be carried out—and there seems very little doubt about it—the trade of Calcutta will receive an immense impetus. The subject is one of great importance to the mercantile community of this city, and well deserving of every support which Government can legitimately give to it.—Englishman.

A NEW P. AND O. STEAMER.—The Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company have sent out a new steamer called the Delhi, of 1,331 tons. She arrived here on Wednesday, having made the voyage from Southampton, touching at Mauritius and Point de Galle, in sixty-two days. She is said to be sister boat to the Golconda, but much the faster of the two.

EXTRA DOING-DUTY OFFICERS OF NATIVE REGIMENTS.—The addition of one doing-duty officer to all the regiments of Native Infantry and Cavalry, and of the Punjab Irregular Force, in the service, raises the authorised number of officers with each regiment to seven, one of whom, however, is the surgeon. In this point of view the measure is, perhaps, of no very great importance. It assumes, however, stronger bearing when we regard it, as we believe we ought, as the expression of the determination of Sir William Mansfield to adhere to what is called the irregular system. The addition of a seventh officer is undeniably an admission that this irregular system has not fulfilled, up to the present moment, the objects of those who introduced it. The Umbeylea campaign, and the little war in Bhootan, showed that, under the smallest pressure it was liable to collapse. So well is this understood at head-quarters, that the regiments ordered to take a part in the ensuing campaign on our Eastern Frontier are, we understand, to be largely supplemented by doing-duty officers drawn from other regiments, not by calling for volunteers, to which Sir William Mansfield, as a precisian, has a constitutional objection,—but by a system of selection which it is to be hoped will be discriminating. It is evident from this, that one, at least, of the radical vices of the irregular system is known at head-quarters, and the great panacea for meeting the evil is the addition of one doing-duty officer to each regiment. We cannot say that this idea gives us a very high opinion of the capacity of Sir William Mansfield as a real reformer: it leaves almost untouched the evil which it is intended to remedy. There are two strong objections to the irregular system. The one is that the officers do not belong to the regiment,—they are simply attached to it. It happens, then, that in the ordinary course of promotion, or by transfer for purposes of discipline, they do not long remain with their corps, often not long enough to become acquainted with their men, to the extent that all officers ought to be. Again, not belonging to the regiment, feeling it quite upon the cards that they might any day be removed to take up another appointment, it is impossible that officers could feel the same interest in a regiment in which they were merely as birds of passage, as in one in which they had entered when young and impressionable, and in which all their experience had been gained. This is bad enough, but it is worse when it comes to compaigning.—Englishman.

CAPTAIN INGRAM'S CASE.—The eccentricities of military judicial procedure have, of late, attracted frequent attention both in India and England, but we have seldom either heard or read of proceedings so remarkable as those which are now being carried out in the case of Captain Ingram, who is about to be brought for trial before a court-martial on a charge of misappropriating public moneys. We can scarcely believe that the able and high-principled officer who now exercises supreme control over her Majesty's army in India can be fully or intimately acquainted with all the circumstances of this most painful case. We cannot believe that Sir William Mansfield would wittingly sanction the open violation of an assurance held out by official superiors to Capt. Ingram, and which, though not amounting to a precise and formal pledge, yet had all the moral force of a promise. We do not think his Excellency, were he apprised of all the facts, would suffer a man, however culpable he might be, to be wheedled by promises into a course of self-crimination, and then suffer the disclosures made, or the admissions recorded, to be used against him to his prejudice and ruin. Yet such are the facts of this distressing case. Captain Ingram, as has been proved before the Court of Inquiry, was induced by promises held out to him by his immediate superior, Captain Browne, to give information which criminated himself. He was induced to bring forward evidence to enable the Government to convict several native offenders, and recover large sums of money which others had misappropriated. He was not even spared the humiliation and pain of giving personal testimony in court against these offenders who have been convicted and sentenced on the information and evidence thus supplied! In all this he acted, was allowed, was encouraged to act, to all intents and purposes as a man admitted as Queen's evidence. His superiors, the Government, and the public have derived benefit from his assistance—assistance fully, freely, and unreservedly rendered, without reference to the effect upon himself. Is it fair or right, judicially or morally, that after having induced him thus to act, having led him on by hopes and promises thus to aid in the conviction of others who had participated in the acts now laid to Captain Ingram's charge, that he should himself be dragged before a court-martial, the evidence thus furnished used against him, and the criminals convicted on his information brought forward to give against him retributory evidence, heightened no doubt by a spirit of revenge? We cannot believe that such a course of procedure will be tolerated when all the facts are known. We hope for the credit of military administration that the Commander-in-Chief will interfere to prevent so great a scandal, and that whatever offences Captain Ingram may have committed he will be allowed to make good the deficit, and escape the ignominy of a public trial of which the discredit will attach as much to others as to himself. It is of little importance either to the discipline of the army or the interests of the public whether a single offender escapes an ordeal which may or may not be merited; but it is of infinite importance that a great principle should not be wantonly violated, and that the good faith and honour of Government should be, under all circumstances, maintained. Sir William Mansfield is not the man to shut his eyes to this distinction. We shall watch the course of proceedings with great interest, and revert to the subject again at a fitting time.—Pioneer.

ESTABLISHMENT OF COURTS OF CIRCUIT.—Whatever doubt there may be about the evils that have resulted from the abolition of the grand jury, it is pretty certain that we have as yet derived from the measure none of those advantages for the sake of it which it carried out. The chief object of Mr. Maine's Bill was the establishment of Courts of Circuit at the principal stations in the Mofussil. Upon no other grounds, we are convinced, would the measure have been permitted to pass with so little opposition. Upon no other grounds, indeed, could its necessity have been even plausibly maintained. As yet, however, we see no indication of the establishment of Courts of Circuit, and the public will soon begin to suspect that it has been deceived as to the real objects of the abolition. Yesterday, Mr. Justice Macpherson, under the new Act, availed himself of the power of cancelling the charge in a case prosecuted by the Crown; and the remarks made by him on the occasion show how greatly Mr. Maine overrated the improved knowledge and discretion of magistrates in India. Had the Court not exhibited greater care in the case of Mr. DeVine than it did in others we have previously noticed, we should have had a repetition of the injustice already thrice inflicted on different prisoners under the new Act. As it is, the ignorance of the committing officer has resulted in sufficient hardship and inconvenience to the parties concerned, the defendant and thirty-five witnesses having been unnecessarily sent down to Calcutta from a distant part of the country, at the cost of endless annoyance and loss of time to them, and great expense to the State. Most of this hardship and expense would have been obviated, had the scheme of Courts of Circuit been carried out. Against many of the consequences of magisterial incompetence, however, nothing, it would seem, can protect us. In unailable cases, for instance, innocent men are continually subjected to all the hardship of imprisonment previous to trial, with but the faintest hopes of relief from the interference of a superior authority. The late notorious case of Mr. Blumhardt is an instance in point; and the defendant De Vine, who was discharged on Saturday by Mr. Justice Macpherson, would, it appears, have been sent down to Calcutta by the Assistant Deputy Commissioner in irons, had he been unable to find bail in the sum of Rs. 5,000.—Englishman, Sept. 22.

RECENT LOSS SUSTAINED BY THE P. AND O. COMPANY.—GALLE, Aug. 15.—Since the memorable Malabar diamond case nothing has created greater sensation than the recent loss sustained by the P. and O. Company of a box of gold bars valued at £5,000. The circumstances of this daring robbery are enveloped in mystery, and though I have tried hard to learn them, I have been only partially successful. The rumoured version is as follows:—It appears that in June last the box was appropriated by some persons employed in transshipping specie and bullion from the Jeddo to the Bombay steamer, the purloiners availing themselves of a mistake committed by the transshipping clerk, who paid off forty-one boxes and unwittingly inserted one less in his boat note. The loss was not ascertained till the steamer reached Bombay. Strenuous efforts are being made to bring the perpetrators of this extensive robbery to justice; fourteen persons have been taken up on suspicion, and the evidence already adduced speaks most damningly against six of them, especially against the tallier who was on duty on board the Bombay steamer, and against his brother-in-law, in whose house the empty box is said to have been discovered. The probability of a speedy detection is not to be despaired of, as evidently more than two must be implicated in the deed.—Ceylon Times.

GAY DOINGS AT SIMLA.—Simla has outdone Calcutta in spirit and energy. As you may suppose, this effort has not been made without immense energy and cost. Most indefatigable has been Captain A. G. Christie, the honorary secretary, and the result is the fact of an entire Italian Opera Company of about sixty members being engaged for four months next year, to give two performances a week, in all thirty-two nights. The price of single tickets will be three hundred rupees for the season—not transferable—four hundred transferable—six hundred for two seats transferable, and five hundred for two seats not transferable. I believe nearly a hundred have already been subscribed for. The weather still rainy—mist, fogs, and drizzly rain every day—giving sneaking colds and the blues to every one. Such out-door gaieties as picnics and croquet, are completely put an end to. A ball and theatricals to-morrow at Kennedy-house, and a bachelors' ball at the club on the 1st. Great preparations are being made to render the coming bal masque worthy of its promoters. It is fully believed it will exceed every thing of the kind ever known—no expense being spared by all and every one, that their "get up" should be perfect.—Mofussilite.

THE BARRACKPORE EJECTMENT CASE.—Judgment was yesterday (Sept. 21) given by Mr. Justice Norman in the famous Barrack-pore ejectment case. The decision of the Court was in favour of the plaintiff, with damages to the amount of Rs. 500.

HOPE FOR THE UNCOVENANTED.—The Home Government have called for a list of the Uncovenanted Civil Service on the Bengal establishment (wherever employed) who are eligible for the office of judge in the High Court.

A NEW ROUTE.—We are happy to find that a proposal has been made to Government for opening a communication with the Chinese provinces east of Assam.

MUTUAL IMPROVEMENT IN MILITARY CIRCLES.

—If Sir William Mansfield does not take care the officers of the army will get a great deal too clever to live. Here is a new scheme of his Excellency's, as noticed by the Englishman:—"We learn that the Commander-in-Chief has suggested a novel plan for encouraging the study of the native languages. He has issued a circular recommending interpreters and others who have passed in the languages to teach officers of their own regiments who have a desire to study. He says the officers who teach may be paid the usual moonshee allowance of thirty rupees a month for doing the work, or whatever sum may be agreed upon, but not to exceed the thirty rupees a month. The Commander-in-Chief thinks great advantages might arise from this friendly mode of tuition, the whole being quite optional on all sides. The beginners would study with their brother officers, and the more advanced would, no doubt, seek the aid of the pundit or moonshee. The gentlemen instructors would improve their own knowledge whilst teaching, and a taste for Oriental literature would be encouraged, as discussions on points of grammar, and Oriental customs or history, would be sure to arise. The idea is curious enough, and betrays the hand of some visitor from Utopia, who must have cast the glamour of his enthusiasm over the practical and clear intellect of Sir W. Mansfield on this subject. Should any officer be bold enough to undertake the work, the discussions of the habits of the Hindoos of the Bytal Puchesse, or the moslems of the Bagho-Behar, will no doubt be interesting and curious enough; but how far they will improve the parties in the Orientals, it is not so easy to say. As the teachers are only to be elementary we do not see, either, how there can be much improvement to either party—certainly not to the interpreter. The circular goes on to say that the more advanced pupils will no doubt go to pundits and moonshees, so the amateur teacher will only deal with alif be and the declensions. The curious idea of paying a brother officer thirty rupees a month for his services does strike us as very ludicrous at first, and in this light it is very generally received in the army." The Englishman does not make the suggestion; nevertheless it is just possible that the mutual improvement might occasionally resolve itself into cheroots and brandy panee.

PRESENT STATE OF LUCKNOW.—We have endeavoured upon several occasions, in the columns of this paper, to draw the attention of the authorities and public to the high price of all the necessaries of life and the consequent destitution in the city of Lucknow, this, be it remembered, in the face of the most promising crops in all parts of the country. People at a distance will be at a loss to reconcile these facts, but to those on the spot, at least to the few who know or care anything about our native fellow subjects, the thing is very simple—the want of means of communication. The roads (if they can be so called), bad at all times, are in many places impassable at this season of the year. The consequence is, supplies sufficient for the want of even the now diminished capital cannot be brought in. Thus the plenty of the Mofussil cannot contribute a portion of their surplus to satisfy the city demand, nor save thousands of the inhabitants from starvation.—Oude Gazette.

PREPARATIONS IN BHOUTAN.—We learn from Bhoutan that Tounsoo Penlow's Dewan has reached Tassissudon with 150 followers. The object of his coming, it is reported, is to consult with the Deb Rajah as to the offensive and defensive posts to be taken by the Booteah chiefs in the ensuing cold weather.—Hurkaru.

A NEW JOURNAL FOR THE PUNJAB.—We hear that Mr. Henry Cope intends starting a new journal, which is to be issued twice a week, having for its birth-place the station of Umrour. The publication is to commence in November next.—Mofussilite.

VERY STRICT.—From a correspondence between Sir Charles Wood and the Lords of the Treasury, we see that the latter have pledged themselves not to empower Chartered Joint Stock Companies to establish agencies or branches in India till they shall have conformed to the existing laws of the country, and to refrain from granting the Asiatic Banking Corporation, or other Banking Companies, permission to establish such agencies without the previous concurrence of the Secretary of State.

CIDER AND SCIENCE.—The ruler of Jummo has entertained several Europeans for the purpose of manufacturing cider, and for the establishment of electric telegraph lines in his dominions.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE GOVERNORSHIP OF MADRAS.—We do not believe that there is the faintest truth in the report which was spread by the Lahore Chronicle, and has been repeated by other papers, that Lord Dufferin will succeed Sir William Denison as Governor of Madras, with a view of qualifying himself for the Vice-regal throne when it becomes vacant. Three years ago Lord Dufferin was offered, and refused, the government of Bombay, subsequently bestowed on Sir Bartle Frere, and it is not likely that he would now accept a government which, in a political and commercial sense, is of far less importance. That Lord Dufferin will succeed to the Vice-regal throne is extremely probable, and he is at the present moment qualifying himself for that post in a far more effectual manner than if he were learning political and commercial wisdom in an office subordinate to Sir John Lawrence. As Under Secretary of State for India Lord Dufferin has infinitely better opportunities for becoming acquainted with the wants and requirements of India than if he were at Madras. We shall be rejoiced if the main part of the rumour turn out to be true, and he be selected to occupy the seat when it becomes vacant. The mistake will never again be committed, we may feel sure, of entrusting this empire to an old Indian. The Governor-General of India ought to be a nobleman, a stranger to the passions and prejudices of Indian politics, formed in that English school which ripens the intellect, without blunting the perceptions and hardening the manners.—Englishman.

DOUBLE MURDER IN THE MADRAS ROADS.

Just as good people on shore were thinking about preparing for church on Sunday morning, a deed of the most foul and inhuman nature was being perpetrated in the Madras roads. The barque Harriet, of 343 tons, M. L. Goularte, commander, which is now lying in the roads, was the scene of a dreadful tragedy, which resulted in the death of two people and in serious injury to two others. The ship is manned by a crew of Malay and Chinese seamen, only the captain and chief mate being Europeans. About half-past nine in the morning, Captain Goularte ordered his men to get up an anchor which had been broken and lost. The Serang, named Raboo, called the men together, and repeated the captain's order. All obeyed but a seaman named Pailay. The captain was near the hatchway, and called out twice to Pailay, but the latter still refused. It appears that the captain then gave the man a slight push, with a view of sending him towards his work, when Pailay immediately drew his knife, turned round, and stabbed the captain five or six times in rapid succession in the bowels, chest, back and neck. The chief mate endeavoured to render the captain assistance, but was attacked in the same savage manner, received a stab in the arm, and only saved himself by taking to the fore rigging. The murderer then attacked the Tindal, who is stated to have been his brother-in-law, and has confessed that he cut this man's throat, and then threw him overboard. Not satisfied with this, the bloodthirsty ruffian then began to climb the rigging in order to get at the mate once more, but the latter avoided him by jumping into the water, and swimming towards the Barham, whose boat was at once pushed off to his rescue. Captain Way, of this ship, accompanied by his third mate and boatswain, went on board the Harriet, where the murderer confronted them with two knives. After disarming him of one of the knives, Captain Way gallantly closed with him, when a fierce struggle ensued. The captain received a wound in the hip, and another blow was aimed at his heart, and was so near to the mark it grazed his side. How the struggle might have ended it is impossible to say, but at this moment the boatswain rendered the Malay powerless by knocking him down with a handspike. The police then came on board, the murderer was strongly bound, and conveyed to the Penitentiary.—Madras Times.

THE MYSORE ADOPTION.—A meeting of the native inhabitants of Madras, very largely and most respectfully attended, has been held at Patcheappah's Hall, to consider an address to be presented to H.H. the Rajah of Mysore, on his adoption of a son. An address of a very congratulatory character on the course adopted by the Rajah, and strongly condemnatory of the British policy in respect to the case, was unanimously agreed to.

THE 16TH LANCERS.—The whole of the 16th Queen's Lancers have arrived at Madras, and gone on to Bangalore. This station, it is said, is to be the future head-quarters of the Madras Army.

BOMBAY.

SCENES IN COURT.

In a suit heard before Mr. Justice Anstey, in the High Court, a native witness, connected with one of the local banks, gave his evidence in such a manner as to call for the animadversion of the Court, his Lordship remarking that the witness had been guilty of "gross prevarication," for which he was fined Rs. 20. His Lordship further said—"These native official witnesses come here and talk like parrots about things—just the way with our judicial system and our educational system—they will say things they have got by heart. I don't believe this man's evidence. If the bank chooses to send to the Court men like him, it must take the consequences." In allowing the action to be withdrawn, his Lordship further expressed his opinion:—"It is certainly a very remarkable fact that these natives in every department, no matter how well instructed, cannot be made to describe things according to their own sterling and intrinsic essence; but they will go on using a stereotyped phrase, and every time they reproduce it in one common form."

"EXHIBITS" AT THE HIGH COURT.—During the hearing of the case of Dadabhoj Nowrojee and Co., v. Jugjeevun Hemjee, before Mr. Justice Anstey, his Lordship stopped Mr. Cooper in the examination of a witness, who referred to a certain document, which was not, at the moment, put in or marked by the Deputy Registrar and remarked—"I wish, and I have directed the Deputy Registrar not to mark in future any documents unless he should be requested to do so by the counsel. Really the indolence and negligence with which these matters are left to the judge is perfectly shocking. The gentlemen who wish to have documents put in must themselves see that they are marked by the Registrar. I cannot allow my notes to be encumbered with mere reference to documents which might not be put in after all."

"WE HAVE NO PUBLIC IN BOMBAY."—In the trial of a case heard yesterday before Mr. Justice Anstey, his Lordship had occasion to condemn the transactions of joint-stock companies that bought their own shares for the purpose of rigging the market, as nothing less than a fraud.

Mr. Taylor said that the expression of his lordship's opinion would be of service to the public, among whom a different view of the matter appeared to be entertained. His lordship thereupon remarked:—"I am very much afraid, Mr. Taylor (and I say it with great sorrow), that we have no public in Bombay, nor anywhere else on this side of Europe."

THE BENCH AND THE BAR.—In the course of the hearing of the case of Pestonjee Jehangir Lamna, at a recent sitting of the Insolvent Debtors' Court, Dr. Reid, who appeared to support the insolvent, was understood to remark, among other things, that his client sincerely regretted the mischief he had done to himself and others by his speculation in shares.

Mr. Justice Anstey, the presiding Commissioner, said Dr. Reid ought never to make such a remark in court. It was quite unusual; and his lordship never heard of such a thing before he came out to this unfortunate country.

Dr. Reid said he did not see he had done anything wrong. There was nothing unusual in the remark.

Mr. Justice Anstey observed he never knew such a thing to be attempted—it would not be tolerated in any English court.

Dr. Reid said he spoke from his instructions what he considered was due to his client.

Mr. Justice Anstey affirmed that he was surprised that any gentleman who had been called to the Bar should make such a statement to a court, and persist in making it after an expression of the court's disapprobation.

Dr. Reid said he merely mentioned what, according to his instructions, the insolvent himself would state when in the witness-box. The learned counsel was not aware that he was at all guilty of any irregularity.

Mr. Justice Anstey affirmed that it was derogatory to the character of a member of the bar to put forward such a remark. If the counsel wished to make it his proper place to do so would be in the witness-box. It was unprofessional.

Dr. Reid said he could not submit to his conduct being called unprofessional. He had done nothing irregular; and the only thing he could do was to protest against his conduct being called unprofessional.

Mr. Justice Anstey: Well, do it.

The matter then dropped.

SUTTA AND VYADA.—On Saturday, in a case before Mr. Justice Anstey, a witness, who described himself as a broker, was being cross-examined by Mr. Taylor as to the nature of certain transactions in a bank's own shares in which he had acted as broker for the directors, was fined Rs. 60 under the following circumstances:—

Mr. Taylor: What transactions were you broker in between the plaintiff and the defendant?—I had large transactions with both firms.

Mr. Taylor: Were those transactions in what are called sutta contract?—I do not know if they were.

Mr. Taylor: What! you can't recollect the nature of the transactions in which you acted as broker? I cannot say.

His lordship: If you do not answer the question I will fine you ten rupees.

Mr. Taylor: Have you acted as broker for either of the parties in any sutta transactions?—I do not know what a sutta transaction is. I have acted in many sutta contracts for opium and cotton and shares for both parties.

His Lordship: You are fined ten rupees.

Mr. Taylor: Were you engaged in any sutta transactions for Tapidass about the 20th Feb. last?—I don't know what you mean by a sutta transaction.

His Lordship: Another ten rupees. You have just said the contrary.

Mr. Taylor then asked the question somewhat differently, and as the witness still gave stupid answers, his Lordship fined him another ten rupees, and then asked: Had the sutta transactions in which you were engaged anything to do with the parties to this suit?

Witness: I have done contracts for them.

His Lordship: I fine you ten rupees more. I shall now stop fining you at this rate, and the next fine will be twenty rupees; the next forty; and after that I shall commit you to gaol if you still persist in giving these evasive answers. It is astonishing how difficult it is to get an answer from you. You had better beware, for this is Saturday, and if I have to send you to gaol you will certainly have to remain there forty-eight hours, as to-morrow will be Sunday, and you cannot get out on that day.

After another question or two, his lordship inflicted the fine of twenty rupees, and the witness only escaped the next Rs. 40 by Mr. Taylor giving up the question he was asking.

In re-examination, the witness explained to Mr. Green that sutta transactions were ryada or time-bargains, and that the one word was sometimes used for the other.

THE INNISKILLINGS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES OF INDIA."

SIR,—On Friday last, the 1st of September, a most violent article appeared in the Deccan Herald, relative to an affair which occurred three months ago in the Inniskilling Dragoons. Round a thread of truth the writer of the article in question has woven such a collection of misstatements that it would be difficult to separate truth from fiction; but it is impossible to allow the article in question to remain uncontradicted. The principal object of the writer, it is plainly seen, is to throw discredit on the commanding officer of the Inniskilling Dragoons, and the violence of his attack is mainly directed against him; but in attacking the commanding officer of a regiment the whole body of officers suffer with him, and, therefore, I consider it my duty to send to your columns this letter, and to inform your readers through it that the article in question is untrue in most particulars, violent, and abusive in all, and written in the worst possible taste throughout. I am not of course able to refer to anything that has occurred in the regiment to which I have the honour to belong; but I trust that you and all other editors of newspapers who have the honour of the English army at heart will refrain from publishing any attacks on a regiment which it should be the duty of all to uphold. It is perfectly right that a newspaper should be an outlet for the expression of public opinion, and a free press is one of an Englishman's dearest privileges; but when the columns of a newspaper are made the medium through which any discontented officer or soldier is able to pour forth bitter words against his commanding officer, it would make one almost lament that such a freedom was allowed. I am quite certain that you will not allow your columns to be the receptacle of such an effusion as the article I allude to, but I would appeal to you, as Editor of one of the most influential papers in India, to show that you do not countenance in any way such a malicious attack as the one I allude to. As we are promised [by the Herald] further statements regarding regimental matters, I hope that this letter will be sufficient contradiction for the remainder of the Mhow correspondent's budget, for I have not the least doubt that the continuation of the attack will prove to be as untrue as the commencement.—Trusting you will find room in your paper for this letter, I remain, yours faithfully,

CHARLES W. THESIGER,

Major, Inniskilling Dragoons.

Mhow, September 4th, 1865.

We willingly find room for Major Thesiger's letter, and are glad to accord to it a prominent place; we are also obliged for Major Thesiger's good opinion, and very much approve the course he takes in allying his name to his letter. He will find on scanning our issue of the 6th that his favourable opinion of us will have to undergo a severe test; but we have confidence in his gentlemanly fairness in asking him to give us a patient hearing, whilst perusing our comments of that day on "something that has occurred in the regiment to which he has the honour to belong." It seems needful to ask Major Thesiger to make a little effort to meet us, on the only terms on which "the privileges of the press" can be maintained, more so because he makes the grand mistake of taking the whole for a part. We demur decidedly to his statement that in criticising the conduct of a "commanding officer of a regiment, the whole body of officers suffer with him." On the contrary, they are far more likely to remain under unjust aspersion if free public criticism is not at liberty to single out offenders from the offended. And as to its being the duty of the press "to uphold a regiment," that service cannot be performed by supporting anything and everything that may occur within a regiment. We trust that so far as we may venture to claim any right to "have the honour of the English army at heart," we shall endeavour to cherish that honour; and not the least efficient means of doing so is, for us to point out distinctly any dereliction of honour and gentlemanly conduct therein. Whilst we would do this unflinchingly, we shall always decline to afford "a medium through which any discontented officer or soldier may pour forth bitter words against his commanding officer," or—what is more to the purpose—against any brother officer. Of course we speak only for ourselves, and are not to be judged by what the Deccan or any other Herald may say or do. With regard to our comments on the transactions at Mhow, which Major Thesiger may have read ere this, he will see that little is said as to the "affair" of three months ago; and with regard to the proceedings before the Court of Inquiry, we had good materials on which to found a judgment. That judgment was come to with a very anxious desire to say the right thing; and, we trust, with as complete an exemption from any malicious feeling as Major Thesiger himself can lay claim to.—Times of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

OPENING OF THE G. I. P. R. TAPEE VIADUCT.—To celebrate the completion of the Taptee Viaduct on the G. I. P. Railway, an excursion to it from Boorhanpoor was made on Thursday last by a few gentlemen connected with contract No. 15, accompanied by some friends. The excursionists left Boorhanpoor about eight in the morning, in a gaily decorated truck, attached to the contractors' train, and on arrival at the Taptee made a brief inspection of the noble bridge, afterwards proceeding to Bhopawul to partake of a cold collation, to which the party had been invited by Mr. W. B. Wright, the representative of Mr. George Wythes, the contractor.—Times of India.

THE "BENARES," which arrived with the English mail of the 18th ult., is reported to have brought 31 lacs in specie, the first considerable amount of bullion that has been imported from Europe since March last.—Bombay Gazette.

THE INSPECTOR OF SCHOOLS, RAWAL PINDEE CIRCLE.—We are glad to learn that Mr. Charles Pearson, B.A., at present officiating as an inspector in the Educational Department at this station, obtains the appointment of Inspector of Schools for the Rawal Pindia Circle. Mr. Pearson is a graduate of St. John's College, Cambridge, and has had great experience in the Educational Department of the North West.—Mofussilite.

THE KHAN OF KHELAT.—A good deal having lately been heard regarding the Khan of Khelat, it might perhaps be interesting to some of our readers to know something of the whereabouts and history of this chieftain. Khelat, though the smallest, is by far the most important province of Beloochistan, as it contains the capital and seat of Government (such Government as it is). Khodabad Khan was born in 1839, and is son of that Melrah Khan who was slain at the capture of his capital by the British on 13th November of the same year. He was thus half-brother to Nusseer Khan, who died in 1857, whom he succeeded on the throne. The death of Nusseer Khan, an able and faithful friend of the English, followed by that of his minister, just at the outbreak of the Indian mutiny—opened the door to disturbance in Khelat, which continued till 1858, when General Jacob succeeded in arranging disputes between the Khan and his nobles. Among these turbulent spirits was the Jam of Bela. He is a petty chief, whose right is hereditary, but who is not considered actual ruler until recognised by the Khan; but, when fully established, he possesses sovereign power, merely furnishing a military contingent when required by his superior. Khodabad Khan does not seem to be a popular prince; and the disaffection of the chiefs burst forth openly in March, 1863, which outbreak ended in the dethronement of this ruler, who remained in exile till July, 1864—when, through the influence of Colonel Green, he was recalled and re-ascended the throne.—Times of India.

RAWUL PINDEE AFFAIRS.—The Horse Artillery and 42nd are to march on the 20th of Oct. I think they will find the carriage in the vocative case. The volunteering from the Horse Artillery to remain in the country has closed. Twenty-four men go to Madras, four to Bengal, and one to Bombay. This is three times the amount that volunteered when the A. and B. Batteries went home. The commanding officer and two lieutenants will also remain. People say the days of miracles are gone by, but if the following be not one, it cannot be far from it. Lieutenant Green, B. Battery, 19th Brigade Royal Artillery, a few nights ago was going the "station rounds." The night was dark; he had visited all the guards, and the native cavalry being the last, he dismissed the Sowar and commenced to gallop off home by a short cut. There was a large well in the road, which he did not see till he came up close to it, when it was too late to attempt to pull his horse up. He tried to leap it, but the horse's fore feet only touched the opposite side; consequently Lieutenant Green and horse were hurled to the bottom, the horse turning over twice during the descent. The well is eight yards wide and twenty-five yards in depth. The horse was killed on the spot, but, strange to say, the rider escaped with merely a severe shaking. Lieutenant Green is undoubtedly one of the finest horsemen in India; he kept on the horse till near the bottom, and threw himself clear. There was only a foot of water in the well. Mr. Green remained sitting on his dead horse from 11 o'clock P.M. till 6 o'clock A.M. the next morning, when he was pulled up by some of the artillery. To make the matter complete, there was a nest of large snakes at the bottom—one was fourteen feet long. Lieutenant Green would not allow them to be killed, as they did not molest him.—Mofussilite.

THE MAHARAJAH OF PUTTEALA.—His Highness the Maharajah of Putteala has obtained the permission of Government to pay a complimentary visit to H.E. the Viceroy at Simla. He will probably go up about the middle of October.—Pioneer.

AS IT SHOULD BE.—We learn that a telegram was lately received by a firm in Bombay in eighteen hours twenty-three minutes after it was despatched from Amsterdam.—Times of India.

THE WAGHEERS.—The Wagheers still remain unsubdued. The last intelligence mentions a brush having taken place between them and Major Richards' force about a fortnight ago, when they were hotly pursued all day, but not overtaken until late in the evening, by which time they had retreated to one of their impregnable strongholds in the Burdahi hills; from this, however, after several shots had been exchanged they retreated, getting away under cover of the darkness. A few days afterwards it was discovered that they had occupied a strong fort some thirty miles off; but on hearing on the approach of Major Richards' force they quitted it for their favourite retreat in the hills. On their way there, they were not far from meeting our troops face to face in the plains, but this was not known until an hour or so after. Lieutenant Russell, the Assistant Political Agent, had a miraculous escape. As he was riding three or four miles ahead of our force, accompanied by a few sowars, he came suddenly on the Wagheers. The meeting was equally unexpected on both sides; they, however, poured in a volley upon him, a ball passing through his horse's body. The poor animal had strength left to carry its master to a village about a mile off, where it dropped dead. Lieutenant Russell escaped to a fort some ten miles off, but one or two of his escort were killed on the spot and cut to pieces, the rest escaping slightly wounded. The Wagheers, finding this part of the country too hot for them, fled to the Okhamandel jungles—another favourite retreat of theirs; but I have no doubt they will meet with an unpleasantly warm reception from the troops stationed there. Notwithstanding they lead this cat-and-dog life, never being allowed to rest many days anywhere, it has produced no change in their habits. This little war is most harassing to the troops engaged in it, particularly at this inclement season. It is, however, not likely soon to be brought to a close until a much larger force is employed in its suppression, and I believe Government is now about to take measures to effect its complete and final check. A great many rich and influential natives have been arrested for secretly instigating the rebellion. The Rana of Porbander, who has lately returned from a pilgrimage to Benares, is said to be deeply implicated; and fresh and glaring discoveries are daily made, confirming the suspicions that have for some time been entertained against him. Should this be considered acceptable for your columns, I shall be happy at another time to inform you of the doings of our troops, as soon as I can learn them, but the official reports on the subject are sometimes difficult to obtain.—Times of India.

BOMBAY MONEY MARKET.—(Bombay, Sept. 28.)—Our money market has been comparatively easy, although since the departure of last mail there has existed a greater demand for accommodation. Business is being resumed with great vigour, and for the remainder of the year remittances to the interior are likely to be heavy, and a rise on the present value of money may therefore be looked for. The latest bank return shows a slight increase in the cash balance, which will probably be further added to within the next week or two by recent remittances being returned from the Mint, so that there is no immediate necessity for an advance in present rates, which are 7 per cent. for loans on Government paper, and 9 and 8 on three and two months mercantile bills. Short dates can be negotiated rather under these rates.

BOMBAY A FRENCH CONSULATE.—The Emperor of France having created Bombay a Consulate of the Empire, his Excellency the Governor-general in Council is pleased to recognise Mr. Chenon as Consul for France at Bombay. Pending Mr. Chenon's arrival, Mr. Otto Muller will exercise the functions of Vice-Consul for France at this Presidency.—Times of India.

THE NEW CHIEF ENGINEER IN SCINDE.—We are glad to learn that Colonel J. G. Fyfe is to be our next chief engineer. Colonel Fyfe's knowledge of hydraulic engineering and the great experience he has had in the construction and conservation of canals peculiarly qualify him for the post to which he stands nominated. Mr. Parkes' plans will doubtless now have fair play in their execution, and the result cannot but be a great improvement in our harbour. All hands in the Public Works Department will hail with delight the return of Colonel Fyfe to Scinde, excepting probably one gentleman, who, however, has sufficient service to enable him to retire on a pension.—Our Paper.

REDUCTION OF SALARY.—We hear the Government of India have reduced the salary of the Under-Secretary to Government in the Legislative Department from Rs. 1,500 to Rs. 1,000 per mensem. Under these altered circumstances the present Secretary, Mr. Birdwood, vacates the appointment in October next.—Bombay Gazette.

A MOVEABLE COLUMN is to be established, to be called the "Meean Meer Moveable Column," and to consist of the following:—F battery 11th Brigade, Royal Artillery. 3 Troops of the 19th Bengal Lancers. 3 Companies of H.M.'s 82nd Regiment. 2 Companies of the 3rd Native Infantry. 2 Companies of the 21st Punjab Native Infantry.

THE PARSEE MATRIMONIAL COURT.—The Parsee Marriage Act comes into operation from to-morrow. Government have appointed twelve delegates from among the Parsee community who will sit in the Matrimonial Court, with a judge of the High Court, to hear and dispose of the cases arising from family feuds.—Bombay Gazette, Sept. 29.

DEATH ON BOARD THE "BENARES" IN THE RED SEA.—Mr. R. Annibal, passenger by the P. and O. Company's S.S. Benares from Southampton to Bombay, died in the Red Sea on the 2nd Sept., of heat apoplexy, and was buried the same evening. He was on his way to join the Bombay Gas Company.—Bombay Gazette.

THE "POWLA."—We have heard from a private source that the Powla will be published under the direction of the Committee of the Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge at the Presidency; and that one of its editors is to be the Rev. C. Kirk.—Scinde Summachar.

THE COMMAND OF THE PESHAWUR DIVISION.—There are rumours abroad that Major-general Sir John Garrook, K.C.B., is likely to resign the command of the Peshawur division, although, in the ordinary routine, his tour of service would not terminate until June, 1868.—Mofussilite.

FREIGHTS.

To Liverpool—Cotton, £1. 2s. 6d. to £1. 7s. 6d., and by one or two favourite iron ships, £1 has been paid. For October, £1 to £1. 2s. 6d., and for November, £1. 5s. to £1. 10s.

EXPORTS.—Bombay, Sept. 28.—We have had an active and hardening market for nearly all descriptions of imports since the departure of the last mail, and dealers generally have shown more confidence in operating than for many months back. The demand for second hands for up country supply has been on a most satisfactory scale, considering the season of the year, and as advices from home are more favourable a stronger feeling has sprung up here. In Manchester grey goods there has been a brisk business in progress, and holders, although most of them look for a further rise in prices, have met the demand freely. The advance in prices may be stated at 2 to 8 ans. on 40 in. shirtings, 4 to 8 ans. on the heavier weights, of 45 in., 5 ans. on printers, 1 to 2 ans. on madapolams, and 2 to 3 ans. on jaconets and mulls. Since the latest advices have been received from England dealers have shown more confidence still, and are anxious to secure parcels of favourite goods expected to arrive up to the end of the year. Holders, however, are not disposed to sell. Bleached goods have been in good inquiry, but prices being still proportionately low with those of grey goods, importers are not offering freely. Prints and dyed cloths have attracted more inquiry without leading to much business. Thread fabrics have been in very active request at an improvement in price. Yarns, both grey and coloured, have been largely dealt in at an advance of $\frac{1}{4}$ an. to 2 ans. per lb. The latter description is asked for freely to arrive. Metals have been dull of sale, but some improvement may be looked for shortly.

EXPORTS.—Bombay, Sept. 28.—Cotton.—Soon after the departure of last mail our market began to show signs of animation, and since then has continued strong, with a large business doing at hardening rates. The arrivals from the up country districts and coast ports have been much less than was looked for, and this has compelled operators to confine their attention to purchases for future delivery, on which terms dealers have been somewhat difficult to deal with. Most European houses hold large orders from home (in very many cases unlimited as to price), and extensive engagements have been entered into under these in Dhollerah for delivery up to the end of November Rs. 310 to Rs. 354, and in Oomrawuttu at Rs. 285 to Rs. 310. A small business has been done in ready branch, and both Compta and Sawginned Bharwar have found ready buyers. The contract made for all descriptions must far exceed the probable receipts during the next two months. Our quotations show an advance of from Rs. 30 to Rs. 50 per candy over those of last mail, and the market closes very strong, with every indication of a further rise, in response to the more favourable advices coming in from your side. Shipments since the 5th amount to 37,657 bales, against 28,654 bales shipped during the previous fortnight.

DESPATCH OF THE INDIA, CHINA, AND AUSTRALIAN MAILS.—(SOUTHAMPTON, Oct. 20.)—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Syria, Captain Roskell, sailed hence to-day, with the mails for Gibraltar, the Mediterranean, Egypt, Aden, Ceylon, India (except Bombay), China, Mauritius, Cape of Good Hope, Australia, and New Zealand. She took out eighty first and fifty second-class passengers, amongst whom were Ensigns Sealey and Justice, Lieutenant Bule, Captain Chase, and the Rev. Mr. Clarke. The Syria took out a general cargo, and on freight sixty-five boxes specie, value £18,759, for the following ports, viz.:—Ceylon—jewellery, £100. Madras—gold coin, £2,215; silver ditto, £1. 4s.; gold thread, &c., £1,565. 7s. Calcutta—silver coin, £25; watches, jewellery, &c., £936. Hong Kong—dollars, £325; jewellery, £100. Shanghai—jewellery, £717. Hobson's Bay, jewellery, &c., £600; and for Sydney, jewellery, &c., £1,865.

THE CALCUTTA, CHINA, AND AUSTRALIAN MAILS.—SOUTHAMPTON, October 22.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Poonah, Captain Field, with the heavy Calcutta, China, and Australian mails, arrived this morning. She brings 89 passengers, amongst whom is the Rev. Mr. Gardner, chaplain to her Majesty's forces, from Gibraltar. Mr. Quaife, purser to the company's steamer Behar, died on board the Poonah on the 18th inst. The Poonah has on freight 8 packages of specie, value £165,000, also 6 packages of valuables, and 2,022 packages of cargo, including 1,755 bales of raw silk, value £150,000 sterling.

LEAVE TO COVENANTED CIVIL SERVANTS.

From E. H. Lushington, Esq., Secy. to the Govt. of India, Financial Dept., to the Acct. gen., N.W.P., (No. 1,772, dated Simla, Aug. 11).

Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of two letters from the late officiating civil paymaster, N.W.P., Nos. 31 and 41, dated respectively June 29 and July 1 last, submitting for consideration the three following questions connected with leave of absence to covenanted civil servants, viz.:—

1. Does section 9 require an interval of six months between two instalments of privilege leave?
2. Does section 8 bar the enjoyment in one calendar year of instalments amounting to more than one calendar month, when leave has been accumulated?
3. Must a service of three months be required after privilege leave, previous to furlough or retirement?

In answering all these questions negatively, I am directed to observe that the meaning of the rules regarding privilege leave will be clear, if rules 6 and 8 were read according to the following arrangement of them, viz:—

The Government may grant leave of absence for one month in each calendar year.

As a general rule, such leave will be in one period, but it shall be discretionary with the Government to sanction leave under this rule in two instalments, not exceeding in the aggregate one month within the calendar year.

No second leave can be granted under this rule, until the completion of eleven months from the expiration of the last leave, if taken at one time; or, until the completion of six months from the expiration of the last instalment of a leave if it has been divided.

An officer not availing himself of leave in any year, may obtain leave for two months after the expiration of twenty-two months from the termination of his last leave; and if two years pass without enjoyment of the privilege, he may obtain leave for three months, after the expiration of thirty-three months from the termination of his last leave.

An officer to whom an accumulation of leave may be thus due, and who may take only a portion of it, may be allowed to take the remainder subsequently.

Ordered that a copy of the foregoing letter be sent to all the accountants general and deputy accountants general for information and guidance.

Madras Volunteer Guards.

No. 330.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to accept the resignation by Ensign W. Fraser, C.E., No. 1 Company, of his commission in the volunteer guards.

Mr. B. C. Dumphy is appd. Taluq overseer in the southern range, presidency, from Sept. 5, 1865, on the condition that he passes the examination prescribed for that grade, within one year of his appt., as authorised in G.O. No. 2,537, of Aug. 31, 1865.

The Reorganisation of the Madras Army. (From the Secretary to the Government of India to the Secretary to Government, Madras.)

It appearing that the time has arrived when the system of organisation now in force in Bengal and Bombay may be fitly introduced into the native army of Madras, I am directed to request you to inform his Excellency the Governor in Council that he has the authority of the Government of India to carry out the change from such date as may be most convenient.

2. The G. O. by the Governor-general, No. 161A, of 29th October, 1863, will show the rates of pay, &c., to be drawn by officers under the new organisation, and a copy of a despatch addressed to the Adjutant-general on the same date will be useful, as it lays down the duties to be allotted to officers, and conveys instructions as to the mode of carrying out the change.

3. Although the Governor-General in Council sanctions the introduction of the new organisation as respects position and duties of both European and Native officers in the cavalry and infantry of the Madras army, his Excellency considers that it will be advisable to defer for the present changing the Madras cavalry into Silladar Horse. I am, therefore, to request no change may be made in respect to the pay of men in the cavalry, or in the system under which they are armed and clothed, or as to the provision and feeding of horses or supply and repair of saddlery. In fact, the only change in this branch at present will be similar to the change made in the infantry, viz., that native officers shall command troops, and European officers take the duties of squadron officers, &c., under the new organisation.

4. The Governor-general in Council, however, considers it desirable to introduce the Silladar system as soon as may be practicable, and, therefore, directs that no recruits may be enlisted in the present four regiments. When a sufficient number of men have been absorbed in these four regiments to meet the cost of the corps of Silladar cavalry, a regiment of that arm may be raised, to which any of the native officers and non-commissioned officers of the old regiments of light cavalry, who may seem well fitted for Silladar Horse, may be transferred, but before this is carried out, reference should be made to the Government of India.

Such arrangements for the repair of saddlery and shoeing of horses under the direction of squadron officers, as may seem efficient and economical can be ordered for these regiments as long as they continue on the footing laid down.

5. Under the new system, officers, commanding squadrons and wings draw an allowance for payment of their men (which includes repair of arms and accoutrements in the Infantry), and a memorandum will be sent to you from the office of this department in Calcutta, to show the mode in which pay is drawn and disbursed in Bengal.

6. In Bengal and Bombay the allowance given to squadron officers is not intended to cover any costs of repair of arms or accoutrements, as these are the property of the men; but under the system ordered for the Madras Cavalry for the present, officers commanding squadrons will have to repair arms and accoutrements, which will still be the property of the Government. Such additional allowances should therefore be given to these officers as will cover charges that they must necessarily incur on this account.

7. The system of interpreters laid down for the armies of Bengal and Bombay in G. O. G. G. No. 755 of Aug. 3, 1865, will come into operation in the Madras army simultaneously with the introduction of the new organisation.

H.E. in Council desires me to remark that in carrying into effect the proposed changes, it is a matter of great importance to consider the status of existing officers, rather than a principle of absolute selection, with a view of obtaining the very best officers in the army for command.

9. The measure is at first one of transition, and consequently commanding officers should not be disturbed unless really unfit. In like manner, seconds in command and wing officers should be taken from a roll made up of the whole army generally, according to minority.

10. Copy of a memorandum showing the principles adopted in the Bombay army in carrying out the change of system forms one of the enclosures in this despatch. The Governor-general in Council concurs in the propriety of the principles therein stated to have been observed in the Bombay Presidency, and H.E. entirely approves of officers not passed in the languages, but otherwise qualified, being allowed to occupy appointments for a time under the new organisation, but without staff pay.

11. Officers on leave in Europe, on medical certificate, might be allowed the benefit of their rank and standing, just as if they were in India, subjected to forfeiture, if their leave is converted into furlough, as would be the case if they proceeded to Europe under the new furlough regulations.

12. Officers who, by change of system, are deprived of the command allowance of troops and companies without obtaining any staff salary, may be allowed compensation for the loss while in the actual performance of duty with regiments.

13. It is to be remarked, and should be made clear to the non-commissioned officers and soldiers, that they are not in any way affected by the change, either as regards present position, pay and allowances, or the regulations to which they are accustomed, and it seems desirable to avoid calling the new system "irregular," it being a misnomer, and calculated to mislead.

14. The position of native officers is raised, but the terms of their service are unaltered, and it is to be remarked that they generally participated in the advantages of increased pay granted last year.

15. It is believed that all essential points connected with the proposed change have been treated of in the foregoing paragraphs; but if any difficulty occurs, I am to request an early reference, which will be at once replied to.

ORDER OF THE MADRAS GOVERNMENT.

Ordered, that the foregoing letter be communicated to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and the controller of military accounts.

The Governor in Council requests that his Excellency will have the goodness to cause a draft G. O. IRRIGATION AND IRRITATION.

WOULD the coquette in Pope's poem really have stewed a child for the sake of a complexion wash? The poet says she would "scarcely" have gone so far, but he evidently considers it within the range of possibility. An ensign who had nothing to say to his partner at a ball is recorded to have expressed a wish that "somebody was dead," in order that he might tell her the news. Would he have privately assassinated a particular friend in order to bring out his own conversational powers? Such cases of conscience are difficult to determine. It may, for instance, be at least open to doubt whether a journalist, however pressed for a topic, would bring about an unnecessary battle, or even a murder under moderately extenuating circumstances, merely for the pleasure of airing his eloquence. Supposing a thousand men were killed, and the writer got a thousand lines out of the transaction—a life a line would surely be a large cost for the cleverest commentary. Still it may be suspected that the best regulated journalist can feel consoled for an occasional calamity by the fact that he is able to say some fine things about it. The Friend of India, the other day, openly avowed its wish for some great question to arise that would convulse the country and divide the press into two great parties; and it can scarcely be supposed that the writer regrets the fulfilment of his desire which promises to take place, albeit the occasion is not one of great satisfaction to the community.

The question to which we refer is—shall irrigation works in India be conducted by private agency or the Government? Lord Canning, influenced doubtless by Colonel Yule, when that officer was at the head of the department of public works, was in favour of private agency, and gave the water supplies of Orissa to the East India Irrigation Company. But Colonel Yule was succeeded by Colonel Strachey, who had entirely opposite ideas on the subject, and Lord Elgin, who, in his turn, probably took his opinions from the department, wrote a minute in favour of Government action, which has left the question an open one until the present time. Sir John Lawrence, and the Governor and members of the councils of the three Presidencies, have in the meanwhile expressed their opinions, and their minutes and memoranda are now made known to the public, with Sir Charles Wood's decision thereon. The result is that the Indian Secretary concurs in the principle laid down by Lord Elgin and Sir John Lawrence, "that the State should undertake directly all the irrigation works it can practically manage, in preference to entrusting them to private companies, and that when the surplus revenues and available balances prove insufficient to supply the requirements of the country, funds by means of loans should be raised." In order to carry out this principle it is proposed to create an Irrigation Department for the prosecution of works all over India, involving an expenditure of twenty-nine millions sterling, of which twenty are to be borrowed in the next ten years.

It is evident from this proposal that the Indian Government intend to take the work seriously in hand, and that the chance of a private association getting a share in the profit is very remote. The East India Irrigation Company, which had accepted the invitation of Lord Canning's Government to construct the canals planned by Colonel Dickens, upon whom the management of public works has devolved, is even now in a difficulty in consequence of the unfavourable terms offered, and there is every probability that the negotiations will be broken off—the commencement of the work, of course, being indefinitely delayed.

The reasons advanced by Sir John Lawrence for the conclusion at which he has arrived amount to these:—That such works as those of irrigation should be undertaken by the State, because the people look to the State for improvements of the kind, and the peculiar interest of the Government in the soil points to such a course as a public duty; that questions in social life, and many more connected with the land, are likely to arise in which the interests of the people and those of a company may come in conflict, and in such cases the State would deal most leniently with private claims; that the retention of a water rent by Government would be a convenient medium of raising additional taxation when necessary, without exciting discontent; the latter advantage, Sir John considering, being preferable to the indirect one caused by the expenditure of private capital, which, by increasing the wealth of the people, would give stability to the revenue and security to the Government. The other opinions differ in some respects, but are generally more or less in favour of the new policy. Mr. Maine declares for it unreservedly, upon Imperial grounds, curiously enough saying not a word about practicabilities. Mr. Harington considers the arguments of the Governor-General unanswerable. Sir William Denison and Sir Robert Napier would employ companies, but only as contractors. Sir Bartle Frere and Sir William Mansfield would combine the State and private companies as in the case of the Bank of Bombay. The only man who takes, to any strong extent, the non-official side, is, of all others, Sir Charles Trevelyan. It would be most unfortunate, says Sir Charles, if, through over-sensitiveness of present or impending evil, we were altogether to reject private enterprise and depend upon Government agency. Even if the Government had nothing else in hand, its utmost powers would be taxed in providing for the irrigation of all India. But how is it to perform the task, when, in addition to its legitimate functions—those of legislation and administration—it has all the roads, bridges, and civil and military buildings of every description to construct and maintain? Even now the Government is overtaken. In roads, which are public works, there are immense requirements, while the railways, which are private enterprises, are the only satisfactory means of transit. Moreover, he reminds us that, whatever may be wrong in the contracts with the Madras Irrigation Company, the works extending across the entire breadth of the Presidency, from Kurnool to Nellore, as well as those which are to rescue Cuttack from periodical devastation, would have no existence but for that association. The Government, he adds, can act only as a great joint-stock company, which must delegate the work to others. Official agency is only a single superintendence, working under many checks and interruptions, whereas private agency may be indefinitely multiplied, and acts with spirit and continuity. The only fund possessed by Government for carrying on such operations, is the produce of taxation in a poor country, the insufficient capital of which yields a high rate of profit; while the fund upon which private interest is based, is limited only by the overflowing wealth of England, the unemployed annual accretion of which would be more than sufficient to make India what she should be. The employment of private agency would be a great benefit if it did no more good than keeping the Government out of the money market; and the plan has the additional advantage of allowing the prosecution of the works, whatever political pressure may arise—as the railways were carried on throughout the mutinies. If the companies lose their money they cannot help benefiting the country, and whatever the ill success of their schemes, they at least ask no aid from Government. What Sir Charles recommends is a combination of private and public agency.

We believe that these views are sound, and that the practically exclusive Government agency which has been proposed would not only be slow and unsatisfactory in operation, but would involve a risk that the State should not take upon itself without the most urgent necessity. Out of doors the proposal is loudly condemned. The mercantile interest in Calcutta is denouncing it in unmeasured terms, and it is certain to be strongly opposed in Parliament. Already the announcement of the determination of Government has added to Sir John Lawrence's growing unpopularity. His object in rejecting private agency is declared to be—to keep British capital as much out of India as possible, so that it may not, by being represented in the House of Commons, create an interest in that assembly which will interfere with his peculiar views of Government. Such an imputation of motives would be justifiable only on the strongest evidence; and this the Englishman professes to supply from the Governor-general's own lips. "At an interview," we are told, "with the agent of a great public company to which the Government had pledged its support, Sir John stated that, independent of his objection that the scheme would involve bargaining with, and consequent oppression of the people, he for other reasons viewed the creation of such a company as a positive evil, because it would prove a thorn in the side of Government; for the shareholders in England, numbering among them members of both Houses of Parliament, with merchants and manufacturers of wealth and influence, would not be long in feeling their power, and would be but too ready to use it."

Such an avowal as this is calculated to touch home sensibilities equally with those of Calcutta, so a very pretty little quarrel may be expected which, we should say, is likely to gratify the Friend of India's love of controversy for some time to come.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for 23,00,000 rupees in bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 18th inst., at the Bank of England. The proportions allotted were:—To Calcutta, 9,82,000 rupees; to Madras, 4,18,000 rupees; and to Bombay, 9,00,000 rupees. The minimum price was as before, 1s. 11½d. on Calcutta and Madras, and 1s. 11¾d. on Bombay. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 11¾d., will receive about 47 per cent., and on Bombay, at 2s., about 19 per cent.; above these prices in full.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The steamer Syria, which sailed on the 20th inst., took out only £12,266 in specie, of which £2,216 is gold, for Madras; £25 silver, for Calcutta; £9,700 silver, for Hong Kong; and £325 silver, for Yokohama.

DEATH OF LIEUTENANT-COLONEL PARKER.

—This distinguished officer expired on Friday last at Edinburgh. Lieutenant-Colonel Parker was present with his regiment (the 71st Highlanders) at the last half yearly inspection by the Commander-in-Chief, in the Queen's Park, Edinburgh, on the 4th inst., at which time he was in the enjoyment of excellent health. On the 13th he felt a little indisposed, and kept his room for some time, thinking the attack would pass away, but the malady rapidly developed into typhoid fever, which eventually carried him off. The deceased officer, who was a son of Sir William Parker, Bart., Admiral of the Fleet, was only forty-three years of age; but, though a young soldier, he had seen a great deal of service. He joined the regiment as Ensign in 1842, and passed through the grades of Lieutenant on the 16th of February, 1844, and Captain on the 26th of December, 1851. He was promoted to the rank of Brevet-Major on the 7th of December, 1858; to that of Major on the 3rd November, 1862; and that of Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel on the 5th August, 1864. He was with his regiment during the Crimean war, including the taking of Kertch and Yenikale, for which he obtained a medal with clasps, 5th Class of the Order of the Medjidie, and the Turkish medal. When the regiment was in Central India, in 1858, he acted as staff officer of the field force, under Sir John Michel, and was present at the actions of Kaghur, Mongrowlee, and Sindwah, in all of which he so distinguished himself that, besides being immediately promoted to a brevet-majorship, he received a medal with clasps. At Goona he commanded the field force from September to December, 1859, with much acceptance. His ability and courage in the Afghan war, during a portion of which he commanded the 71st, attracted the attention of the Commander-in-Chief, who frequently mentioned his gallant conduct in his despatches; and on the conclusion of the war he was promoted to the rank of brevet lieutenant-colonel in the army.

APPOINTMENT.—(Downing-street, Oct. 19.)—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Sir Richard Graves MacDonnell, Knt., and c.b., to be Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Colony of Hong Kong and its dependencies.

ORIENTAL BANK CORPORATION.—At a meeting of the Oriental Bank Corporation, held on Thursday, the 19th inst., Mr. H. G. Gordon, the chairman, stated that the only business was the declaration of an ad interim dividend of £1. 5s. per share for the half-year ending June 30, being at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum. He attributed the fact that the dividend was not so large as on the former occasion to the great fall that took place last year in all articles of Indian produce, to the commercial crisis that ensued, and to the heavy failures, which compelled the bank to restrict business in almost every quarter. Though they were thereby prevented from earning large profits, they had the satisfaction of knowing that they had escaped the heavy loss some rival banks had suffered. A dividend as recommended was declared.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.—At an extraordinary meeting of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, held on Wednesday, the 18th instant, Mr. Mitchell, M.P., presiding, which was held for the purpose of declaring an interim dividend for the half-year ending June 30, it was moved that the dividend be at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, payable on the 25th inst. This was agreed to, and the dividend declared accordingly.

BOKHARA.—The St. Petersburg journals announce that an ambassador from Bokhara, with a numerous train, has crossed the Russian frontier on his way to St. Petersburg. The object of this mission is to announce the accession to the throne of the new Emir Mouza-fareddin and to present an elephant to the Emperor. The reports of the defeat of the Russians at Tashkend have not received any confirmation.

ISSUED BY PERMISSION OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

London: Wm. H. ALLEN and Co., 13, Waterloo-place, S.W., Publishers to the India Office.

BY APPOINTMENT.

THURSTON AND CO.,
BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS
TO HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN AND H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, 14, CATHERINE STREET, STRAND, LONDON.

The great superiority of the Billiard Tables manufactured by this Firm is fully attested by the fact of their Tables having been patronised by Royalty since the reign of George III., during which period they have been honoured also by the patronage of the principal Nobility and Gentry of England, nearly 250 of Her Majesty's and the Native Regiments at home and abroad, and more than one hundred of the principal London, Provincial, and Foreign Clubs.

BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

EXPANDING SADDLE.GIBSON AND COMPANY

Respectfully invite the attention of MILITARY MEN, EQUESTRIANS, and OWNERS OF HORSES, to their Newly-Invented EXPANDING SADDLE, which admits of ready adjustment to the size of any horse, creating a secure and easy seat without the slightest inconvenience to either horse or rider. The principle of EXPANSION and CONTRACTION comprises a simple arrangement of mechanism within the saddle so perfect, that by merely turning a screw the pad is proportioned to the size and form of the animal, on which it firmly rests with a uniform pressure, and is securely retained in its position by means of an ordinary girth.

This invention has obtained the approval and distinguished patronage of HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, and from the very favourable opinions expressed by competent judges, and all who have had an opportunity of testing its merits, there is no doubt it will come into general use; indeed, its success is already established.

THE NEW THEORY IN RIFLES.—Lieutenant James Forsyth, in his excellent work, "The Sporting Rifle, &c.," first promulgated the startling theory that Rifles could be so constructed as to lessen the elevation by increasing the charge of powder. This theory, which the Advertiser has proven to be correct, alters the whole position of Rifles in favour of the sportsman. Formerly, with a high trajectory, the bullet which would have hit a tiger in a vital part at 100 yards, would pass over his back at 25 or 50 yards. By the new system, as elaborated and perfected in DOUGALL'S LO-KFAST BREECHLOADERS, there is a point-blank range to 150 yards, combined with a velocity and smothering power hitherto unknown.—(See Times, 11th October, 1864.) No other Rifle possesses the same advantages.

SARSAPARILLA.
WILKINSON'S (late BRIDGES) ESSENCE OF FLUID EXTRACT OF RED JAMAICA SARSAPARILLA is a preparation for its Purity, and marked superiority, duly prescribed by the Faculty for Impurities of the Blood, Affections of the Liver, Constitutional Debility, Attenuation of Body, as an Alterative Medicine at the Changes of the Seasons, and for freeing the system from the effects of Mercury.
In India and the Colonies it is extensively used to prevent taking complaints incident to Tropical Climates, and as a renovator of the system after Sickness inviolable.
"A superior preparation, that may always be relied on."
Sir Astley Cooper.
"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.
"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medical Review.

"Lately, in consequence of much debility, &c., subsequent to Cholera, I have freely used 'Bridge's Sarsaparilla' myself, with complete benefit and success."—J. Poett, F.R.C.S.
Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints. One pint is equal to eight pints of the ordinary preparations.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against cheap preparations of Sarsaparilla, which, instead of being what they profess to be, are nothing but a decoction of common herbs, sweetened with molasses, and flavoured with American Winter Green. The genuine has "Thos. Wilkinson (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London," engraved on each bottle.

AGREEABLE SEIDLITZ POWDER in one bottle, protected by a case with measure and spoon included. This preparation is highly recommended, not only as a Mild Aperient, but to allay Fever, Thirst, &c.

AROMATIC TINCTURE OF QUINIDINE for the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria. No person exposed to the influence of or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for if taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria. Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by Thos. Wilkinson (late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

MRS. JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR TEETH.—This infallible remedy has preserved hundreds of children when thought past recovery from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as efficacious, tending to produce the teeth with ease; and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery where there are young children; for, if a child wakes in the night with pains in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and copying parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bills, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle.
Sold by all chemists and medicine vendors.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS,
Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 226, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT. ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage 6d.
JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

CHILDREN'S WORM TABLETS (KEATING'S).—The recently-discovered unfailing remedy for worm disorders in children and adults has now been concentrated in the form of a purely Vegetable Sweetmeat. The Tablet is eagerly taken by children, and one to three given twice or three a-week, will effect a safe and certain cure. Prepared and sold in Tins, 1s. 1d. and 2s. 9d. each, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, &c., 79, St. Paul's Church-yard, London, E.C., and Retail by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Vendors in the World.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.
—BILIOUSNESS.—DYSPEPSIA.—There is no organ in the human body so liable to derangement as the liver. Food, fatigue, climate, and anxiety all disorder its action, and render its secretion—the bile—more or less depraved, superabundant, or scanty. The first symptoms should receive attention. A pain in the side or top of the shoulder, a harsh cough and difficulty of breathing are signs of liver disease, which are removed without delay by friction with Holloway's inestimable Ointment. The Pills should also be taken early. For all diseases of this vital organ, the action of these conjoined remedies is a specific, by checking the over supply of bile, regulating its secretion, and giving nervous tone.

Second edition, corrected and revised, post free, 7d.; in cloth, 1s. 1d.

The majority of our Dyes are entirely soluble in boiling water, and will dye without the addition of other ingredients.

ANILINE DYES.—"I shall commence my observations on dyeing, by referring especially to the remarkable and beautiful colours derived from coal tar, the introduction of which into this art may be said to constitute the chief distinction, as far as dyeing is concerned, between the present and the former Exhibition, evincing, in fact, a new era in the tinctorial art. Coal tar colours deserve attention for their power, as well as for the facility with which they may be applied, for one grain will deeply tint half a gallon of water, and little or no skill is required for their application."—Vide Report by Grace Calvert, Esq., F.R.S., Ph.D., Honorary Professor of Chemistry.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

We have received by the Calcutta Mail our usual files of papers from that presidency, to the 22nd of September, which, however, is no later date than those brought via Bombay by the mail of the 29th, the Calcutta and Bombay mails having left the former place on the same day. We have little news, therefore, to add to our former summary.

In Calcutta the Doorgah Poojah holidays were just beginning, and the city preparing for a fortnight of desertion. It is a dreary time in Calcutta for those who are left behind, and the papers, which cannot very well transplant themselves, usually make the discovery in the interval that Government is a great deal too compliant to the prejudices of the natives in allowing a suspension of business to such an extent. But nobody who can get away makes any complaint of the kind, and the feeling of the lament is too evident to make any impression.

The number of tourists this year promised to be unusually great, owing to the increased railway accommodation, and the liberal arrangements of the companies for excursions. Time was when a Calcutta man was a rare bird in the North-West, and a Calcutta lady had only been heard of. In the City of Palaces the "up-country people" were admitted to be very pleasant in their way, and undoubtedly hospitable, but dreadfully rough, and sadly wanting in the kind of manners which "stamp the caste of Vere de Vere." The up-country people, on the other hand, considered the Calcutta people in very much the same light as sailors regard marines—as awful cockneys who knew nothing of the world beyond the ditch, and took delight in nothing within it but quill-driving and bura khanas. Of late years, since intercourse has become more general, the impression on either side has been, to a great extent, removed. The broad distinction between town and country is still recognised in the two classes; but the "man about Calcutta" is no more considered necessarily a prig than the man about the North-West is considered necessarily a boor; and it has even been found that there is not half so much difference as was supposed between the Presidency and the Mofussil ladies, even when put to the test of bonnets. Now that the railway makes intercourse more frequent than ever, whatever prejudice remains on one side or the other cannot fail to wear off. There is one change, however. Neither the Calcutta nor the North-West people are so hospitable as they were. They give one another dinners, as people do everywhere; but there is no putting up at other people's houses as a matter of course. At the Presidency the practice has been long since discontinued; and now we find the provinces following the same example. In another part of our paper will be found a letter from a Mofussilite, making severe reflections upon Calcutta tourists for inflicting themselves upon their country friends, and advising them, these holidays, to go to the hotels. This is sad.

The Friend of India says that the management of the Bhootan war "seems to be attended with the fatality of divided counsels and humiliating delay;" but the Friend never believes that any Government can go right that persists in staying in the Hills instead of remaining within dictation distance of Serampore—to say nothing of considerations of a commercial character connected with the isolation of that place. The road-making may not have begun, General Tytler may be on crutches, and General Bruce may be alone, as the writer says; but we may be certain that the expedition will not be allowed to lose the cold weather, and that even the highest authorities concerned will be found to do their duty rather than otherwise.

The late article in the Westminster Review against Sir John Lawrence continues to engage public attention. The Friend of India has come to the rescue of the Governor-general with considerable force. In Bombay the article seems to be generally condemned as unjust, and dictated by personal hostility.

The Delhi Gazette publishes what professes to be an authentic account of the new scandals among the officers of the anniskilling Dragoons, which will be found among our extracts.

The irrigation question continues to excite discussion, and the general feeling is against the Government.

The Madras papers furnish a few items of news, which will be found elsewhere. The reorganisation of the local army is the principal topic of conversation in the Presidency.

From Ceylon the "heads of intelligence" include the following items: The coffee season has closed with a total of 876,000 cwts.; the Legislative Council has been opened by the Governor, whose opening speech is full of projects calculated to advance colonial prosperity; the revenue prospects are encouraging; the first section of the Ceylon Railway was to be opened on the 2nd of this month; the Ceylon League was carrying on its proceedings with vigour. The obituary includes the name of the Hon. R. T. Pennyfather, the auditor-general of the colony.

The next arrival from India will be the Bombay mail, which is due in London about the 6th November.

OUTWARD BOMBAY MAILS.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Massilia, Captain Almond, sailed from Southampton yesterday (Friday) with the mails for Gibraltar, the Mediterranean, Egypt, Aden, Bombay, and Upper Bengal. She took out 78 first and 39 second class passengers, and in freight a full cargo, including 1,050 boxes specie, value £347,714, of which amount are sovereigns for Alexandria £3,000, and the remainder for Bombay, comprising bar silver, bar gold, gold and silver coin, jewellery, &c.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The exports of bullion by the steamers of the Messageries Impériales from Marseilles on Sept. 29, Oct. 9, and Oct. 19 were as follows:—To Madras, gold, £435; silver, £110,144; to Calcutta, silver, £209,796. The exports per P. and O. Company's steamers from Marseilles on Oct. 12 and Oct. 20 were:—to Bombay, silver, £273,600; to Madras, £1,848.

THE BOMBAY MAILS.—(SOUTHAMPTON, Oct. 28).—The P. and O. Company's steamer Ripon, with the heavy portion of the above mails, has arrived here. She brings 53 passengers, £200 in specie, and a general cargo, including 856 bales of raw silk, value £75,000.

Casualties by Death in the Armies of India reported since last Publication.

H.M.'s Forces.—Lieut.-gen. Sir J. B. Hearsey, K.C.B., commanding H.M.'s 21st Hussars, and late 6th Bengal L.C., at 24, Rue Marguette, Boulogne-sur-Mer, aged 72, Oct. 23.

BENGAL.—Major R. Mayne, Bengal Staff Corps, at Darjeeling, Sept. 18.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CAPTAIN REMINGTON.—A letter from Allahabad in the Indian Daily News says:—I have just heard that Captain A. G. Remington has been safely escorted to Lucknow, where, I suppose, he will have to appear before a court-martial. I have not yet been able to learn the charges which he is likely to be tried upon. From all I can gather, it appears that he is shaken in intellect, although he is not mad. He professes to be a Deist, and does not consider he has done any harm in turning Fakeer. Report says he has made no end of money, and that the natives really look upon him in the light of a very holy man. For his own sake it is a great pity that he did not, previous to becoming a Fakeer, resign the service. Nothing can now restore him to his former position, and disgrace to himself and relatives will now be the upshot of his folly. This step will promote Lieutenant F. D. Harrington, of the 12th Regiment N. I., to his Captaincy.

VOYAGES OF DEATH.—The Hindoo Patriot says:—Well may the voyages of cooly transport ships sailing from India be called "voyages of death." Would it be believed that during the last twelve months about one thousand coolies were drowned in these "voyages of death?" The number is thus detailed by a correspondent of a morning contemporary:—In the Ally there were drowned, 318; Eagle Speed ditto, 262; Clarence there died about 103; Golden South ditto, 120; Fusilier died and drowned, 189; total, 987. What does the above melancholy fact disclose? Is there nobody responsible for the transport of coolies? We do not know the exact number of coolies who annually emigrate to foreign countries from India. The number it is said is steadily increasing; but we may, we think, fairly assume it at ten thousand, and of these ten thousand poor unfortunate beings who, desirous of selling their labour to the best advantage, voluntarily exiled themselves from their mother-country, one thousand met with a watery grave uncarried-for and unlamented. Could anything be more sad or disgraceful to Government, which professes a paternal solicitude for their welfare? It is true that so far as routine and red tape go our Government has done what may be required of it. We have a Cooly Emigration Act providing for the safe transport and protection of the coolies. That law prescribes fully how the coolies are to be looked after before embarkation, how they are to be fed, clothed, and housed, and when sick, to be doctored, what space should be allotted to them in the ship, what ration should be given to them on board, and the like. There is then a protector of emigrants with the necessary establishment to superintend the carrying out of the emigration rules, and the compliance therewith of the emigration agents. But what is the practical result of these paternal arrangements of the Government? Death by drowning of one thousand men in every ten thousand! We would recommend a general commission of inquiry, composed of merchants, civilians, and ship captains, into the present system of coolie emigration, with special reference to the disasters which led to the loss of the lives of one thousand coolies in the course of twelve months.

THE AGE OF CHIVALRY HAS PASSED.—The following broad hint, which does not savour of the old "Anglo-Indian hospitality," at one time proverbial, appears in the Indian Daily News, in a letter from the North-West:—"The approach of the Doorga Poojah holidays and the rush of ditchers to these remote abodes of innocence prompt me to request that you will remind some of our official visitants that we shall, during the holidays, require every inch of space, every morsel of ice, and every drop of beer, for our personal friends, whom we hope to see in great crowds. I am induced to give this gentle hint to our friends in Dalhousie-square, who appear to think that the old days of Mofussil cheer are to last for ever. Fond delusion! During the last two years we have been literally over-run with a swarm of auditors, store-keepers, stock-takers, traffic-clerks, even policemen, and really, were they actually our personal friends, the tax upon our leisure, our larders and our cellars, would be insupportable. These gentry should be aware that when on duty on the line there is always within an hour's ride either an hotel, a refreshment room, or a dak-bungalow, easily accessible. They have the less excuse for sponging on persons with whom they come officially in contact as the old woman in Alderman's-walk makes them one and all very handsome allowances for hotel bills. I could point to more than one highly-paid officer who avoids these hostilities as if they were pest-houses; and lives from one year's end to another upon people who don't desire their company, but for very shame's sake cannot bundle kurro the door and windows against them. These gentlemen draw their pay, draw their allowances, give up their town lodging, and possibly charge their servants as chuprassees. I hope this mild hint will have some effect."

IN ADVANCE OF THE AGE.—A Calcutta letter says:—A young woman of fifteen made an attempt last week of trying the Bloomer costume by donning boy's clothes and a silk hat, but unfortunately for herself she was stopped for furiously driving a pair of horses in a brownberry by a European constable, who innocently told the Court that he pulled her down from her seat, thinking she was a lad; but she proved a match for him, and after tearing off his coat got away on foot, only to be recaptured after doing a little more damage to the policeman's clothes. She was introduced to the Court, after spending a night at the thannah, in her evening's costume as a "swell from Broadway," and, considering her youth, merely fined to the extent of damage she had committed, warned, and discharged.

AZIMOOLLAH TRAPPED.—The Delhi Gazette says:—"The Nana has been secured so often, that we, as a rule, refuse to believe in rumours of the capture of any of the few leading men of the rebellion still at large. But we are inclined to think that Azimoolah, the Nana's astute secretary, who counselled the traitorous destruction of the helpless garrison of Cawnpore, is at length safe on the road to either the gallows or a jagheer. Captain Mowbray Thompson has succeeded in trapping him. Fit captor of the blood-stained monster. We learn that this Azimoolah has been for some time serving the Government in the capacity of a Tehsildar in Churkari. Depend upon it Nana Dhundoo-punt is a chif cunushtubul somewhere,—very likely in the Viceroy's camp."

TIGERS AND THEIR CAPTORS.—The Government are still waging a successful, if somewhat expensive, war against the tigers. We learn that since October, 1863, when an enhanced reward of Rs. 100 per animal was offered for a further period of two years, thirty-five tigers have been shot in the Hill tracts of the Vizagapatam district. The collector, however, reports that the number of deaths caused by these brutes is still very high. For the year past it was no less than forty-one—that is, forty-one deaths were reported; but as we only took up (and that very insufficiently) the Malkagiri taluqs at the close of the year, and as much of Golconda is still without police, it is probable that many deaths curred of which we have no reckoning. He, therefore, earnestly requests that the 10 rupees reward be continued, and declared permanent. It has, he believes, done a great deal of good, and he does not think the standing reward of 35 rupees a sufficient inducement for our Hill men to undertake the achievement. "They reverence the tiger as they reverence every other object of fear, and he who kills a tiger incurs a considerable expenditure in cleansing himself from the crime." The Government have accordingly sanctioned the continuance of a higher rate of reward for killing a tiger in the Vizagapatam district, viz., Rs. 100, until further orders.—Madras Times.

A BLACK AFFAIR.—All the Dhobies in Bangalore are in ecstasies of joy at the report that the manager of the Washing Company is non est inventus. It was supposed at first he had been drowned in the boiler, scalded to death by steam, or titivated off in the crimping machine. Others had it, that during the late high wind whilst in the act of hanging out a lady's skirt to dry he became enveloped in its folds and was carried off as in a balloon. At all events it is a case of slope, of skeddaddling, of mizzling. We don't know exactly how many bars of soap are lost, but there are many rumours afloat.

BARBEROUS.—Our barbers are in despair. The fiat has gone forth, and there is to be no more shaving among the troops. The 10th Foot must not shave as the 10th Hussars did not dance. They have discarded their barbers and rendered disconsolate many poor nappis. Whether the men will still be expected to carry shaving brushes and razors among their kit necessities and be liable to make them good if absent, our barber did not tell us, but he did tell us that the 10th had dispensed with the services of a "shaver," and only kept "a cut hair man." Why the men cannot please themselves as to whether they sport hirsute appendages or not we cannot imagine. Suppose a man cannot raise a beard? that nature has given him a face as smooth as a woman's, what is he to do—cork his upper lip and lower jaws every time he goes on parade?—Our Paper.

THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT have appointed a committee of inquiry into the best mode of remodelling the present system of weights and measures for this Presidency. They are so various, that legislative interference has become necessary, but that fact was known long ago, and the executive has so much information on the subject in its hands, that we should hardly have thought more necessary. Still, it is high time that the matter were brought to an issue, with a fresh investigation or without it. The report of the Municipal Commissioners for the past year has appeared, and is on the whole a favourable one. There was very little cholera, and the total deaths are said to have been fewer by 1,449 than in the former year.

THE RAJAH OF MYSORE.—The natives of Madras have held a meeting, which the Sheriff declined to summon at their request, for the purpose of congratulating his Highness the Rajah of Mysore on his adoption of an heir. It will, of course, have no political effect, but is worth notice as indicative of native feeling, very broadly expressed, on a subject which deeply penetrates the Hindu mind, and may bear the fruit of mistrust and discontent hereafter should Mysore be annexed to the British Indian Empire when the Rajah dies.

THE GOVERNOR OF MADRAS proceeds to the Neilgherries to-morrow, accompanied by Mr. A. J. Arbuthnot, the Chief Secretary. During his absence the business of Government will be conducted in the ordinary way, by the officials on the spot. It is reported that the Army Head-Quarters are to be removed from Madras, either to Bangalore or the Neilgherries, as our present Commander-in-Chief has an aversion to the plains. We see no objection to this as a military point of view. In fact, the change might prove beneficial, since his Excellency has in these parts very few troops to command; but how about his seat in Council, and the emoluments connected therewith? Is he still to enjoy them, and yet not sit at the Council table? We fancied that his presence there was valuable, and consequently highly paid for, but in his absence the money might be better appropriated.

COALS TO NEWCASTLE.—Two granite blocks have arrived out from England as pedestals for the Cubbon statue. One of the greatest drawbacks to the prosperity of Mysore it is well known is the entire absence of granite, the country not possessing a single quarry of the stone! Hence the necessity of sending to England for two pieces whereon to put Sir Mark's effigy. Poor Mysore!—no granite in the country!

COLONEL WILSON.—Some animadversion has justly been caused here by the appointment of Colonel Wilson, the superintendent of the Madras police force, to succeed Mr. Rhode, C.S., as inspector of jails in the presidency. There is no doubt that the nomination should have fallen to a medical officer, the fittest of all persons to hold it, and the preference of a military man naturally suggests the idea of a job very injurious to the medical service, and far from creditable to the Government. We publish with much regret the following extract of a private letter from Trichinopoly dated 19th September, announcing the sudden and melancholy death of Mr. R. C. Fraser, C.E., and his wife. "I got an awful shock yesterday, hearing of the fearfully sudden death of Mr. Fraser and his wife by an accident. They left this, the night before last, to go to some place in the district where his work took him, and on the bridge, about twenty miles from here, the bullocks got restive and backed, bringing the carriage against the parapet of the bridge, which yielded to the force, and carriage, bullocks, driver, and all went over, smash. The bodies were only found last night, and were buried this morning. The driver escaped; having been thrown off; he swam ashore, but the rest went down at once; they (Mr. and Mrs. Fraser) were asleep, it seems, when the bullocks backed and became restive."

THE NEW SCANDALS IN THE INNISKILLINGS.

It is far from being a pleasing task to refer again to recent unpleasant occurrences at Mhow; but strict justice towards those mixed up in the business demands the publication by us of a version of the tale which differs somewhat from that given by the journals on the Bombay side of India. After receiving and commenting upon the one side of the story, we lost no time in procuring the other, which we accept as the more probable of the two, and as such offer it to our readers.

We are informed of the intention of the colonel of the Inniskilling Dragoons to have the matter brought into a court of law, in order that the facts of the case, verified by a competent judge, may be laid before the public. Without at all wishing to interfere with the intentions of Colonel Crawley and his advisers, we cannot avoid expressing our disapproval of the step. Matters are already much more unpleasant than they should be, and we very much doubt that regimental or private misunderstandings, as explained by "gentlemen of the long robe," and viewed by judges on the bench ever satisfy the public so completely as to stay criticism, and allay the irritation of those immediately concerned. Taking the "Burney case" as an example, we are quite justified in thinking that an appeal to the law in such matters tends to inflame rather than subdue passion, and widens the breach it was intended to close. Not that the cases are similar. Brigadier Burney sought to clear himself from a foul stigma on his character; Colonel Crawley has no such necessity. The latter officer may rest assured that, whatever may be the feeling of those who seek only the vilification of his public character as the commander of a British regiment, the general public, at least that intelligent portion of it fully impressed with a sense of moral responsibility, will not be misled by a one-sided statement unless they are forced, by the reticence of those who should take measures to clear themselves of false imputations, to form and express an ex parte judgment. No public man can in this age afford, except under certain circumstances, to pass over in silence the criticisms and imputations of the press; and, at the same time, no honest conductor of a reputable journal would dare with impunity to disregard the appeal of any man for redress, provided it be not couched in language which gives him the option of rejecting it on the score of impudence or disrespect.

In the communications now before us we are told "it is right that the very numerous subscribers to the Delhi Gazette should know the real truth of these much-to-be-regretted occurrences." It is precisely with that object in view that we asked to be furnished with facts by "an impartial observer." The object of those who hastened to the publication of their version of the unpleasant affairs under notice was, we are told, "to abuse and vilify Colonel Crawley and the officers of the Dragoons, and to throw odium on Major-general Green and the court of inquiry on which no officer connected with the regiment sat." With the object in view we have no concern whatever, that can be but a matter of opinion. We confine ourselves strictly to facts, and those facts we believe to have been as we now describe them.

About the end of May last Lieut. Davies, of the 6th Dragoons, refused to return the salute of his superior officer, Capt. Weatherly, a salute given in the way usual between friends when meeting during an evening drive. Now, in the good old days of which we sometimes hear so much, to refuse the courteous salutation of an equal involved consequences very often producing serious results. The happy times when men could, in vindication of their outraged feelings, draw rapiers and set to with a will till one or other of the opponents was pinked, have long since passed away, though the irritability of weak human nature has in no way abated. To relieve that irritability and to seek redress for premeditated insult, the only class of gentlemen who now carry swords have but one resource, an appeal to the gentleman in whom centres the honour and well-being of the corps. This step Captain Weatherly adopted. He reported to his commanding officer the circumstance of his having been treated with marked disrespect in a place of public resort. The erring lieutenant was confronted with his accuser, informed of the charge brought against him, and, in the presence of Majors the Hon. C. W. Thesiger and Wirgman, and Adjutant Luck, asked to explain himself. The only explanation tendered was, as we said on the former occasion when we alluded to the affair, that Mrs. Weatherly had been calling Mrs. Davies "names." Captain Weatherly at this juncture interposed by the remark that his wife had only said that Mrs. Davies was not a lady! This simple interpolation resulted in the rejoinder, "It's an infamous lie!"

Here, then, we have at once, and at the very commencement of the proceedings, the elements of a very neat, comfortable family upheaving. "It's an infamous lie" is not generally a popular phrase among men occupying high positions in the service of the British Crown; it is one happily so unusual that the commanding officer was evidently unprepared to meet the expression as we think he should have done. He simply said he would not permit the further use of such language, and that the orderly-room was not the place in which to use the names of ladies disrespectfully, or in which their little misunderstandings should be discussed; moreover, that he would not countenance "cuttings" amongst his officers, as there had already been dissensions enough amongst them. He continued by saying:—"Mind, Mr. Davies, I do not order you to salute Captain Weatherly, but you omit to do so if you dare."

In that passage we come upon the second instance of want of firmness, and the first of want of tact on the part of Colonel Crawley. A junior officer is told by his commanding officer that he is not "ordered," but he dare not omit to salute the gentleman whose word was immediately before impugned in language rather stronger than that in general use anywhere beyond the purlieus of Billingsgate or Holywell-street. Better if Colonel Crawley had said:—"It is beyond my province to order you to return the salute of your brother officers, in social intercourse, but as your commanding officer I would strongly recommend your attending, as much for your own sake as for that of the harmony of the regiment which I intend to preserve, to the requirements of your position in that respect." As it was Lieutenant Davies replied by saying:—"Have I not always done my duty well? I am sure, Colonel, I never passed you without saluting." Had we not the whole facts before us we would have imagined the Colonel saying—"No, you have never done so, and I require you simply to bear in mind that I wish you to be at all times as courteous to every officer in the gallant regiment I have the honour to command as you have been to me their chief." But not so. The feelings of an angry man were further inflamed (failure in tact No. 2) by the retort—"No; if you had dared to do so I would have made you pass me till you saluted properly. You have got into a wrong groove, Mr. Davies, and I recommend you to get out of it as soon as you can." We are told Colonel Crawley's manner was all that it should have been in firmness and temper. We do not doubt the calmness of his temper on the trying occasion, but we have endeavoured to show that he was, with the best intentions, we believe, wanting in firmness and tact. He will, we trust, take our remarks in good part. In making them we are not unmindful of the fact that since the Smales-cum-Lilly business he has had much to contend against, much to try his equanimity; and that withal he has been very successful in regaining the good will, with only two exceptions, of his officers. For his own sake as much as for the sake of the regiment, we disapproved of his return to it, under the impression that he would do better by an exchange. We are assured that there are but two gentlemen who still nurse their old animosity and give it play whenever opportunity offers. They may, we believe, be gained over by the true appreciation and constant practice of that saviter in modo et fortiter in re which should characterise every man in high command.

The interesting episode we have given above occurred so far back as May last. It formed the gossip of the station for a day or two, perhaps, and then very properly passed into oblivion. A subsequent event of a nature far more unpleasant caused its resuscitation, because the same officers, Captain Weatherly and Lieutenant Davies, were the chief actors in it as well. We think it better to allow one of our correspondents to tell the tale in his own words:—

"Towards the end of July two Court Journals were taken out of the mess-anteroom of the 6th Dragoons, which was against rules. A paper was sent round to all the officers requesting each to say if he had taken them (not with a view to any further notice, but in order that the papers might be returned). This circular came back with an unanimous denial. Some remarks were made by the officers in the mess-house at the time, that all the officers had denied taking the Court Journals, but, as they were gone, there must be a thief about the place. This being overheard by the mess sergeant, in whose immediate charge the papers were, he, entirely on his own responsibility, and to clear his own character and those of the other mess servants, placed one of the latter in the library (which opens by a glass door into the anteroom), with instructions to let him and the mess corporal know if he should see any one bring papers into the anteroom. The following morning the Court Journals were still missing. The boy took up his position. After some time the lieutenant above referred to came into the anteroom, and sat down to read a newspaper; he presently took some others from under his stable jacket, and pushed them under some on the centre table. The boy immediately called the corporal and sergeant, both came in, and the latter, lifting up the papers pointed out by the boy, found the two Court Journals and charged Lieutenant — with bringing them back; Mr. — blustered a little, asked who had ordered a spy to be set for him, but — did nothing more! The Sergeant reported the circumstance to the President of the Mess, a Major in the Regiment, and to the President of the Library Committee, Captain —; both, as in duty bound, reported to the Commanding Officer that Lieutenant — had been seen returning the Court Journals to the Mess, 'No,' with his initials, being opposite his name in the paper circulated the previous day."

The Colonel, who from his position is the guardian of the honour of a regiment, was obliged to investigate the affair, and, having seen the evidence of the three witnesses, sent for Lieutenant —, and asked what he wished to advance. Lieutenant — denied the whole thing. The Colonel said you had better return home and send me a written statement; at this interview the 2nd Lieut.-Colonel, two majors, Captain —, and the adjutant were present. Lieutenant — sent in a statement in which, for the first time, he acknowledged that he had brought two papers to the Mess under his stable jacket, but that one was the Times of India, and the other not a Court Journal. As matters had now become more serious, it was impossible to avoid laying the affair before the Major-general (from that moment the commanding officer of the 6th Dragoons had nothing more to say or do in it), who, after carefully considering both sides of the question, ordered a Court of Inquiry of three field officers unconnected in any way with the 6th Dragoons. This Court sat for several days, and except by the Times of India was considered to have performed its duty, that of taking evidence only, honourably, fairly and patiently. On perusal of the evidence so elicited the Major-general ordered Lieutenant — into arrest, and forwarded the papers to head quarters, Poona.

To the extreme surprise of everyone, the Commander-in-Chief, Bombay, ordered the Major-general to release Lieutenant — from arrest, and at the same time to read to the officers of the 6th Dragoons a wiggling so intemperate and so unjust that every officer of the regiment, except two or so, whose names can be guessed, expressed his disgust, and called upon Colonel Crawley, as the head of the regiment, to repudiate the sentiments, &c., imputed to them by the Commander-in-Chief, Bombay. So that there is a very pretty quarrel.

In the meantime Captain — having discovered the author of the article in the Deccan Herald, in which his wife's name was brought up, paid him a visit at Indore, and, on his refusal to apologise, horsewhipped him in the presence of his clerks. The all but unanimous opinion here is, "sarved him right."

MISCELLANEOUS.

MR. BARTON AND DR. GIRAUD.—Some general remarks made by the acting senior magistrate the other day were supposed by the Government analyser to have a particular reference, and the consequence was a correspondence which has occasioned the following lively remarks from the Deccan Herald:—"The Magistrate and the 'Analytical.'—What will be the ultimate result of this great controversy we have no means of ascertaining. Probably, as Dr. Giraud and Mr. Barton have been acquainted for years, one will ask the other to dinner, and sing—

Let analysing be forgot,
And never brought to min'.
We'll tak' a cup o' kindness yet,
For auld lang syne.

And surely you'll be your pint stoup,
As sure as I'll be mine,
And we'll drain the cup o' kindness yet,
For auld lang syne.

And should you ere come before me,
I will remit the fine,
And take you to the tiffin-room,
For auld lang syne.

In India old friends ought never to fall out. Life is too brief to be disturbed by paltry feuds. Our motto is "Peace on earth, and good will amongst men." Let us never forget that we are living under a Frere-ternal Government, that does its best to tranquillise the ryots, and promote the highest state of felicity amongst husband-men generally."

UNIFORM SYSTEM OF WEIGHTS AND MEASURES FOR BOMBAY.—In December last a committee was appointed by Government to deliberate on the best mode of attaining a uniform system of weights and measures for all India. The members of the committee, after expressing their respective views on the question submitted to them in separate minutes, met for the final harmonising of their opinions. Looking forward to the time—although that may be distant—when the decimal system shall be introduced into England, the committee unanimously expressed their opinion in favour of its introduction into India. They recommend a pound avoirdupois as the unit of weight; and suggest that the English gallon holding 10 lbs. of clear water be introduced into India as the unit of liquid measure, and that the gallon also might be taken as the unit of dry measure. The committee recommend the adoption of the English linear measure of an inch, foot, yard, and mile; and for square or land measure they suggest the adoption of the English acre as a unit decennially divided. The committee urges that, whatever system may be adopted, it should be imperatively enforced over all British India, and that the Native States be also pressed to adopt it.

KING STORK ON THE BOMBAY BENCH.—One of Mr. Anstey's first acts on the Bench was to give a very proper decision in reference to time bargains, concerning which the Bombay Gazette contains the following:—"Mr. Justice Anstey has dealt a death-blow to litigation on time bargain contracts in Bombay, that is to say, if his exposition of the law be confirmed by the higher tribunal before which his decision is likely to be carried. Narrow shall be the way and straight the gate, henceforth, to all who want the judicial enforcement of such contracts, so narrow that few of those engaged in the late transactions of the share market will be able to pass through. Mr. Justice Anstey holds that the mere fact of there having been a printed form of contract in common use for the sale and purchase of shares deliverable on the first of July is of itself suspicious, requiring very powerful testimony to remove the suspicion. These blank printed forms were circulated by thousands during the share mania, and his Lordship judicially asserts that it is much more consistent with probability that everyone of these transactions is a gambling transaction, than that not one is. Apart from a calculation of probabilities it is well known that the first of July contracts were as notoriously and essentially gambling contracts as if the result depended upon the turn of a dice box, instead of the turn of the market, and the postponed date was agreed upon among other reasons that the uncertainty might be complete on both sides. Shares are not like a cotton-crop, which there may be the most legitimate commercial reasons for purchasing before it is grown, with delivery at a distant date; they can be obtained in the market at any time, on a day or an hour's notice; it may be, at an enhanced price; but it may also be at a diminished one. Mr. Justice Anstey means therefore to insist in all future case that the bona fides of every share transaction for future delivery must be clearly made out, and he seems to require that the plaintiff, if he is the seller, must prove that he had a stock of shares in hand of the kind sold, sufficient to cover all his time-bargain transactions in that class of shares, and that he kept these in his possession during all the interval from the date of entering into the contract to the date of delivery. It does not appear to be enough that the seller can prove that he held as many shares as would cover the individual transaction regarding which he sues; he must be able to cover all his transactions. Again, Mr. Justice Anstey holds that the contract is rescinded by the sale of the shares, certainly, in every case, (and the cases were numerous,) where instructions were given by the holder of the shares to an auctioneer on the 1st July, the time for the completion of the contract not having then fully expired; and he leans, at least, to the opinion, if he has not expressed it, that the sale of the shares at any later period also rescinds the contract. Mr. Anstey has since carried consternation among fraudulent insolvents, by sentencing one to two years, and another to a year's imprisonment, by virtue of this power under the Penal Code. The former delinquent is a relative of Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy.

A RUFFIANLY ENGLISHMAN.—A native journal (Guizerat Mitra) thus comments on recent indecent assaults committed by a European at a railway station:—"A railway station on the Baroda line was lately the scene of a shocking and unparalleled outrage practised upon female passengers by a base European. It was dark when the train arrived, when the cries and shrieks of women were heard. A tiger had entered the fold and was committing devastations in the flock of sheep. The European was the all-powerful, furious brute. He had stolen into a carriage and stripped several native ladies of their clothes, and misbehaved towards them. It was shuddering to discover them in that plight. They wept, and they were deeply ashamed of themselves; for is there anything worse under heaven than what befel them? The heartless fiend was dragged out; he pleaded he was drunk. Yet he found his way into a carriage where there were females, and was for some time deliberately engaged in committing his villainy. Surely a more heartless and a more painful case than this we have never noticed. The public will be anxious to learn what has been done with the vile offender. There was a Government officer in the carriage, who was a witness of the scene, and we fervently hope the case has not been suppressed. Such criminal behaviour towards a number of innocent and defenceless creatures, whether it be the consequence of drunkenness or not matters little, should be severely punished.

CHARGE OF ATTEMPT TO POISON.—A correspondent writes:—"There is rather a serious criminal case up at Jubbulpore just now, in which Mr. Charles Uppham, an inspector of the E.I. Railway, has charged three of his servants with poisoning him. Mr. Uppham says that he saw, at a distance of ten paces, his servants pounding the dhatura fruit, which one of them had got from a tree close by his house, and squeezing the juice through a towel into his stew. He called for the stew as if to partake of it, but after a little while he told his kit that he was not hungry, and to keep the stew on the table for breakfast next morning, resolving himself to make it over to the railway doctor. Next morning he called for 'chota hazree,' partook of tea and handcakes, and then mounted his horse and rode towards the doctor's. He was obliged to halt at a bungalow on the line, as he felt his head affected. Mr. Augier, the occupant of the bungalow, took him in, called in another person, but neither could make out what was the matter with Mr. Uppham, for he reeled to and fro like a drunken man. The doctor ultimately came to the conclusion that dhatura had been administered to Mr. Uppham. Before the magistrate, who committed the prisoners to the Sessions, one confessed to having brought the fruit from the tree alluded to by Mr. Uppham, another confessed to its being pounded and made over to the kit, but he (the kit) says he did not give it to his master, but took it for ear-ache himself. The kit's own brother, who is Mr. Uppham's chuprassee, deposes that he never saw him using dhatura for ear-ache. The prisoners say that Mr. Uppham was drunk the night before he left for the doctor's place, and that he was firing a revolver at night in the house. Mr. Uppham says he was sober enough to know that his servants intended to rob or injure him; that he had proof of it, inasmuch as they came to him after he had written a letter to the doctor, and resisted on being told for whom it was, and what were the contents, and that his object in firing off his revolver was to clean it out, and box it up, so as to keep a dangerous weapon from the servants' hands in case they attacked him."

"JEAMES" IN INDIA.—There is, we understand from a prospectus sent to us, a club of the most exclusive nature in course of formation at a certain celebrated hill station. Some of the proposed rules of this forthcoming institution are characterised by such a manly disregard for mere adventitious circumstances of rank and positions, such an entire absence of "flunkeyism," that (as other clubs are elsewhere in course of formation) we deem it a sacred duty to give them wide publicity. Be it noted, then, first, that an invitation to join this club is to be forwarded to "commanding officers and covenanted civil servants" only. No barrister, no uncovenanted civilian, no member of that scurrilous Fourth Estate, is to be enrolled in the libro d'oro of this Phoenix Club; covenanted civilians and commanding officers are to be balloted for, but members of the Supreme Council are to be eligible without ballot. Glorious distinction! Honourable concession to real merit! No flunkeyism in this at any rate! Further, his Excellency the Viceroy is to be solicited to become ex-officio patron, and his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to be ex-officio president, and divers other lengthy titled personages are to be ex-officio vices and managers. There is a perfume of official dignity, a refrain of official harmony about these pleasing arrangements, that arrest the attention and delight the contemplation of mere humble outsiders. What a lesson have we here to those members of another club who not long since evinced so far less dutiful a spirit towards a former Commander-in-Chief. Spirit of Kowtow, all hail! How might a man attain an entrance into this thy sanctuary? How may one paint the extatic bliss of those favoured beings, the members of the Supreme Council of India, who are to be admitted into this thy favoured abode without being balloted for,—on the payment of the absurdly small sum of Rs. 150? Conceive how delightfully the time would pass with the Viceroy at the head and the Commander-in-Chief at the foot of the table, and nothing but "covenanted civil servants and commanding officers" above, below, around. What genial humour, what sparkling wit, what flashes of genius, what fire of eloquence might we not there enjoy with all these great, good, and clever men to teach and enliven us. "Alas! alas!" will say the excluded, "What then have we done that we Peri-like are ever to mourn at the gates of this terrestrial paradise; never, never to cross its blessed portals? For us there is, alas! no hope; no hope!" "But stay," some are able to exclaim, "we have sons! Great thought! We have sons; and, though we be not of the British Hangman's illustrious family, our sons, even our sons, may become covenanted civilians, may cross the charmed threshold, and may, delightful hope! one day become members, real living members, of the Phoenix Club of S——. Delhi Gazette.

EDUCATION IN THE BOMBAY PRESIDENCY.—Mr. E. I. Howard, the late director of public instruction in the presidency of Bombay, has published a review of the progress of education in the presidency during the nine years he held office. The results, which are highly satisfactory, show that ten years ago the number of schools and quasi-colleges, under the charge of the department of Public Instruction was 353, and that now they number 954. The number of scholars also has increased from 21,677 to 66,000. But beyond the jurisdiction, so to speak, of the educational department, there are many indigenous schools and institutions presided over by men who have received their own education in the schools of the department, and these indigenous schools and institutions, it is estimated, educate nearly as many children as are educated in the department's schools. The cost of the State schools during the ten years has been about £200,000, and the people have spontaneously supplemented this grant by a payment of £212,000 from their own means. Before the mutinies the State spent only £21,000 on the schools of the Presidency, and in 1858-59 that sum dwindled to £14,400. While the area of education has been thus widening, the quality has been also improving. The standard is dragged up and maintained by inspection and university tests and examinations, and while, on the one hand, the knowledge of English is extending, and the ability to read and write the vernacular is becoming honourable and more general, these vernaculars, on the other hand, are becoming enriched with translations of some English standard works, and with books treating more or less of English influence.

REPORT OF THE "MILDEW COMMITTEE."—Mildew in piece goods has, for three or four years, been one of the most crying evils that the merchants of Bombay have had to deal with in the ordinary course of their trade operations, and in March last it formed the subject of several discussions in the Chamber of Commerce, terminating in the appointment of a committee, which has amassed a large and useful body of information on the subject. They elicited the written opinions of the members of the Chamber of Commerce, and it appears from the report that there is an "entire unanimity" among the merchants here that mildew has mainly been experienced by importers since the supply of American cotton to the English markets was shut off, and that it is caused by an undue proportion of size in the cloth or by bad sizing. The committee very evenly distributes the blame between the manufacturers and the buyers, alleging that the high price of cotton since 1861, the difficulty of disposing of goods at an advanced price, and the necessity of keeping the mills open have operated as so many temptations to the former, and admitting that competition has induced carelessness and want of selection among the latter. The committee recommend no action in the matter beyond the transmission of certain of the answers to their queries to the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, in what, we fear, is the vain hope that "the mere calling attention to the subject will be attended with most useful results."

RATIONS.

Aug. 9.—The subject of the establishment of regimental bakeries in British regiments in India having been brought to the notice of the C. in C., his Excellency, although being aware that there are good reasons, connected with the climate and the duties required from European soldiers when campaigning or on the line of march in this country, why the old system of native bakers for the supply of ration bread should not be discontinued, would suggest to commanding officers that the art of baking may be advantageously cultivated in a department of the regimental workshops.

2. It is understood that this is done with great success in two or three corps, stations being supplied with fancy bread, &c., in this manner, the bakers performing their duties and parades like other artisans in the regimental workshops.

3. Besides the profit to the men concerned, the art of baking would always be preserved in regiments to meet extraordinary contingencies of service, and for the more effective supervision of the native bakers if necessary.

The foll. officer is assigned local rank from the date specified, subject to H.M.'s approval:—

To be Captain.—Lieut. R. G. Macdonald, of the 97th foot, from July 26.

The C. in C. in India accepts the retirement from the service, by the sale of his commission, to Ena. G. Campbell, of the 79th foot, subject to approval by H.M., dated Aug. 8.

Second Doing-Duty Officers.

Sept. 8.—In continuation of para. 1 of G.G.O. No. 531 of 1864, and with reference to para. 12 of the Secretary of State's despatch No. 44 of Feb. 9, 1864, published in G.G.O. No. 530 of 1864, the Right Hon. the Gov. Gen. in Council is pleased to sanction the appointment of a second doing-duty officer to each regiment of native cavalry and infantry in the armies of the three Presidencies and of the Punjab irregular force, so as to provide a reserve for the staff corps, and for the various departments in which military officers are employed in India.

2. Officers will be nominated to this post on probation; and, if belonging to regiments of the British army, must be candidates for the staff corps. They must have passed in the native languages by the second standard, or by the P.H. examination, and must have fulfilled all the conditions required by paras. 18, 19, and 20 of Sir C. Wood's despatch No. 44 of 1864.

3. They will receive the scale of pay and staff salary laid down in G.G.O., No. 161a, of the 29th of October, 1863, for doing duty officers of cavalry and infantry respectively, and will be required to pass the tests laid down in G.G.O., No. 531 of 1864, for the branch of the service to which they are attached within one year from the date of appointment as doing duty officers.

4. Upon so passing officers will be confirmed as second doing duty officers, and will continue to be borne as such until they receive advancement or obtain employment in some other branch of the public service. They will be transferred to the Staff Corps if they belong to British regiments, or if they belong to the Indian Army, and are candidates for the Staff Corps, with effect from date of appointment on probation.

5. An officer who fails to pass the tests within the year allowed for probation will cease to be borne as 2nd doing duty officer, and if belonging to a British regt., will rejoin his corps. If an officer of the Indian army, he will be employed as his Excellency the C. in C. may be pleased to direct.

6. With two doing duty officers per regt., it is not considered necessary to appt. any other officer to a corps, consequent upon the employment of a doing duty officer tempy. in another situation, or during his absence on leave.

Note.—The 2nd doing duty officer in cavalry will not be entitled to the allowance of Rs. 30 per mensem granted to the present doing duty officer for writer and stationery, for performing the duties of quartermaster.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SATURDAY, October 28, 1865.

MR. CALCRAFT AND THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

We have received, from authority which we may best characterise by saying that it could not be better, some information concerning the family of the public executioner, disposing of a question lately discussed in these columns.

The functionary in question, we are informed, has two sons, the youngest of whom is now about forty years of age. They have both been sailors, but have left the sea, and have been employed in this country for some years, one as a cooper, and the other as a labourer, in a large vinegar manufactory. They are both married men, with young children. They have one sister, also married, and these constitute the entire family. It is, therefore, impossible that any member of this interesting household can be in the Indian Civil Service, even if the pecuniary circumstances of the father—whose sole regular stipend is a guinea a week from the Corporation of London, with the addition of an extra guinea for each execution—would admit of his giving them the necessary training.

In reference to a pert remark made by the Spectator upon ourselves in connection with the subject, we may here observe that we never declared our belief that the son or sons of the hangman were in the Indian Civil Service, nor, in the event of their belonging to that body, wished to remove them from it. We said just what the Spectator said after us, that such an event must be accepted as a logical consequence of the competition system, but we added that it was not likely to be satisfactory to the members of the service on that account, and that a little prejudice upon the subject might be considered excusable.

KING STORK ON THE BOMBAY BENCH.

When John Wilkes was asked by a celebrated French lady how far it was possible to go in England in reviling the Sovereign, he answered, "That is exactly what I am trying to find out." The Times of India seems bent upon making the same experiment in reference to a judge. Mr. Chisholm Anstey, since his appearance on the bench, has, to be sure, invited opposition. It is not in the nature of the ex-M.P. in England, ex-Attorney-general at Hong Kong, and ex-leader of the Bombay bar, to say less than he means, and, like most very earnest persons, he frequently says a little more. In our last number we published, from his particular enemy in the local press, a lively selection from his recent ebullitions against witnesses, attorneys, barristers, and others, for more or less grave departures from an irreproachable course of conduct. Were we disposed to devote about the entire of our extract columns to the purpose, we might quote in return the savage comments which Mr. Anstey's outspokenness has drawn down upon him from the editor of the journal alluded to and his little band of correspondents. A list even of the epithets employed by these writers, as ingeniously collected by a correspondent of the Bombay Gazette, occupies the greater part of a column. Without venturing to quote the entire collection, we may remark that it is made up of such matter as this:—Mr. Anstey's appointment was incongruous; he has audacity; he has brow-beaten witnesses, and vituperated his brethren of the Bar; he vents diatribes, and has volcanic bursts of temper; he exhibits injudicious severity; he imposes inevitable fines; he scoffs at and reviles the natives; he will never learn to respect the British law; he is detested by all who know him best; he is a thorn in the side; he wants good breeding; he is guilty of rudeness; he is a public nuisance; he has a captious propensity; he is unfit for a post of honour; he is eccentric; he is like a mad bull; he disregards judicial dignity; he has a revolting trait of character; he is a bully; he has animus; he has an overbearing and ferocious temper; he delays the administration of justice; he has vile taste, freely indulged; he indulges feelings of envy; he has malicious spitefulness; he has execrably bad taste; his name is mentioned with abhorrence; he is guilty of snobbism on the Bench; he has been impatient to insult the Jainsetjee family; he sneers; he acts the part of a snob on the bench; he exhibits himself; he proves how little his own birth has done for him; he has outbursts of temper; he does not repent; he is famed for his peculiar amenities from China to Chancery-lane; he has gained unenviable notoriety; he has a truculent bearing; he has lowered the traditional dignity of the bench; he is not at all fit for the bench; he has discredited himself and the bench as well, &c. Among the remarks quoted, the compiler observes there are at least four which might entail prosecution under the Penal Code.

All this would be very wrong, even if it were based on an appearance of fact; for grave imputations against a judge, affecting his honour and fair administration of the law, may surely not be properly made at hazard, and merely as a matter of opinion, not only by the editor, but by chance correspondents of a newspaper. But the curious part of the present case is, as the Bombay Gazette points out, that Mr. Anstey, except as to the mode in which he administers his reproofs or penalties, is not really considered to be in the wrong. On the contrary, he has, as the Gazette says, while giving offence to individuals, conferred an inestimable service upon the public. "His relentless severity to shameless and fraudulent insolvents [he has sentenced one to a year's, and another to two years' imprisonment] has raised by many degrees the standard of commercial morality in a city in which men were beginning to act generally on the belief that any kind of roguery might be practised here with impunity. His stern administration of justice is already purifying Bombay society." In fact he reproves attorneys and their clerks, and even counsel, if they do not attend to their duties; he threatens and fines prevaricating witnesses; but he always acts in the interest of the suitors and the strict administration of justice.

For a man who takes so Quixotic a view of his duties as this, professional popularity is impossible; and certain classes of the public against whose failings he is always running full tilt, are also naturally numbered among his enemies. Witnesses with a turn for perjury for instance—that is to say nine native witnesses out of ten—must cordially detest him, and fraudulent bankrupts whom he sends to jail are not likely to be on the list of his particular friends; but by the respectable portion of the public Mr. Anstey is both respected and trusted, and his strict integrity and unflinching zeal in the interests of his clients have never been denied by his bitterest opponents. The estimation in which he is held, indeed, is sufficiently shown by the fact that, before his elevation to the bench—which, for the present, however, is only in an officiating capacity—he had by far the largest practice at the Bombay bar. That Mr. Anstey is often injudicious is not to be denied; but his injudiciousness is principally confined to telling the truth at the wrong time or place; and it is rather too much that for this failing he should be assailed as we have seen, by a clique who seem determined to bring down upon themselves the penalties of the law of libel.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE LATE MAJOR ROBERT MAYNE.—We regret to have to record the death at Darjeeling, on the 18th September, of Major Robert Graham Mayne, of the Bengal Staff Corps. He had seen much service as a Lieut. in the 59th N.I. He went through the whole of the first Punjab campaign, and was especially distinguished at the battle of Sohraon, where he commanded a company. During the late mutiny he did good service in command of the 3rd Madras Cavalry (a great portion of which Regiment remained faithful) in the Saur district. He went through the whole Bhootan campaign in command of the 30th Regiment of Punjab Native Infantry, and never entirely recovered from the effects of his exposure to that deadly climate. He was the youngest son of the late Rev. Robert Mayne, of Limpfield, Surrey, great nephew to the late William Mayne, Lord Newhaven, and brother of that highly distinguished officer the late Colonel William Mayne, Aide-de-Camp to the Queen. He was forty-five years of age, and leaves a widow and seven young children.

MEMORIAL TO THE LATE LORD CLYDE.—A handsome memorial stone of polished Aberdeen granite is now in the course of erection, by Mr. T. Gaffin, the sculptor, of the Quadrant, Regent-street, in Westminster Abbey, in memory of the late Lord Clyde. The stone bears the following inscription: "Beneath this stone rest the remains of Colin Campbell, Lord Clyde, who by his own deserts, through fifty years of arduous service, from the earliest battles in the Peninsular war to the pacification of India in 1858, rose to the rank of Field Marshal and the Peerage. He died lamented by the Queen, the army, and the people, Aug. 14, 1863, in the 71st year of his age."

MONUMENT TO THE LATE VISCOUNT COMBERMERE.—The ceremony of unveiling a statue erected at Chester to the memory of the late General Combermere took place on Wednesday last. The memorial is situate opposite Chester Castle Gate, contiguous to the monument of Matthew Henry, the Great Commentator, and in full view of the Chester Race-course. The pedestal on which the statue rests is composed of massive blocks of granite, from quarries near Falmouth Harbour, Cornwall, the height of the column being 12 feet, that of the statue being about the same, making the total height from the ground to the top, 24 feet. His lordship is represented as sitting upon his favourite charger, in military uniform, facing towards Wales, the likeness of the Viscount being pronounced by all competent judges a most excellent one. The inscription on the front of the pedestal is simply as follows:—"Erected in honour of Stapleton Cotton, Viscount Combermere, Field Marshal. Born 1773. Died 1865." On the reverse side are inscribed the following names of places associated with the distinguished achievements of the deceased: Flanders, Cape of Good Hope, Malavelly, Seringapatam, the Douro, Talavera, Torres Vedras, Busaco, Villa Gracia, Castrajon, Fuentes d'Onor, Salamanca, Ciudad Rodrigo, El Bodon, the Pyrenees, Orthes, Toulouse, West Indies, Bhurtpore. A procession was formed of the memorial committee, with the civic and local dignitaries and gentry, who proceeded to the monument, around which were drawn up the Chester Rifle Volunteers and Artillery Volunteers. At the behest of Earl Grosvenor, M.P., Lieut.-General the Hon. Sir Edward Cust delivered an address. Afterwards the procession moved on to the site of the New Town Hall, of which the Mayor laid the foundation-stone with due ceremony.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.—The report to be read at the half-yearly meeting to be held at the London Tavern on Tuesday includes the following items:—No further portion of the railway was opened for traffic during the half-year. The number of miles worked over was 588 as compared with 553 in the corresponding half of the previous year. The receipts of the half-year show a highly satisfactory increase upon the receipts of the corresponding period in last year; the total amount having been for the half-year to the 30th June, 1865, £557,121. 4s. 1d., or £947. 9s. 8d. per mile, against £325,007. 12s. 1d., or £587. 14s. 4d. per mile, in the half-year to the 30th June, 1864; being an increase of £232,113. 12s., or £359. 15s. 4d. per mile. This proves that the anticipations formed of the traffic to be obtained upon the opening of the railway across the Ghats were well founded, and it shows that the facilities of transit thereby created are being rapidly taken advantage of by the natives and others in India. The expenditure of the half-year amounted to £326,209. 2s. 5d., or 58.55 per cent. of the receipts, leaving a balance of £230,912. 1s. 8d. to be carried to the credit of the company's interest account with the Government, the balance in the half-year to 30th June, 1864, having been £94,506. 8s. 3d. The net profit of the half-year is equal to six per cent. per annum upon the amount returned from India, as the outlay to the present time, upon the railway opened for traffic. The continuation of the Nagpur branch from Shegaum to Budnaira (70½ miles), which is the next portion to be completed, is, however, in a very forward state, and will shortly be ready for opening. Upon the line to Jubbulpore the Taptee viaduct has been finished, and a train of the contractors has passed over it, along the line as far as the fifty-seventh mile from Bhosawul. The site for the passenger terminus in Bombay has at length been settled, that of Moodie Bay having been finally sanctioned by the Government. Under an arrangement with the Government, the company are to execute the necessary reclamation works, and the Government will repay the cost of the works up to one foot above high water level.

THURSTON AND CO.,BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS

14, CATHERINE STREET, STRAND, LONDON.

The great superiority of the Billiard Tables manufactured by this Firm is fully attested by the fact of their Tables having been patronised by Royalty since the reign of George III., during which period they have been honoured also by the patronage of the principal Nobility and Gentry of England, nearly 250 of Her Majesty's and the Native Regiments at home and abroad, and more than one hundred of the principal London, Provincial, and Foreign Clubs.

BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

EXPANDING SADDLE.GIBSON AND COMPANY

Respectfully invite the attention of MILITARY MEN, EQUESTRIANS, and OWNERS OF HORSES, to their Newly-Invented EXPANDING SADDLE, which admits of ready adjustment to the size of any horse, creating a secure and easy seat without the slightest inconvenience to either horse or rider. The principle of EXPANSION and CONTRACTION comprises a simple arrangement of mechanism within the saddle so perfect, that by merely turning a screw the pad is proportioned to the size and form of the animal, on which it firmly rests with a uniform pressure, and is securely retained in its position by means of an ordinary girth.

This invention has obtained the approval and distinguished patronage of HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, and from the very favourable opinions expressed by competent judges, and all who have had an opportunity of testing its merits, there is no doubt it will come into general use; indeed, its success is already established.

REMOVED TO ABOVE ADDRESS FROM
210, REGENT-STREET, W.THE NEW THEORY IN RIFLES.—

Lieutenant James Forsyth, in his excellent work, "The Sporting Rifle, &c.," first promulgated the startling theory that Rifles could be so constructed as to lessen the elevation by increasing the charge of powder. This theory, which the Advertiser has proven to be correct, alters the whole position of Rifles in favour of the sportsman. Formerly, with a high trajectory, the bullet which would have hit a tiger in a vital part at 100 yards, would pass over his back at 25 or 60 yards. By the new system, as elaborated and perfected in DOUGALL'S LOCKFAST BREECHLOADERS, there is a point-blank range to 150 yards, combined with a velocity and smothering power hitherto unknown.—(See Times, 11th October, 1864.) No other Rifle possesses the same advantages.

J. D. DOUGALL, Inventor and Patentee, 59, St. James's-street, Piccadilly, London.

IMPORTANT TO OFFICERS.—Have all your BOTTLED ALES, WINES, &c., PACKED IN SEYMOUR'S REFRIGERANT STRAW ENVELOPES, which entirely prevent heating, fermentation, and breakage; will use repeatedly as Wine Coolers, prevent all litter on board ship or in quarters, and save 20 per cent. in space and freight.

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile.
GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for ginger relieves the stomach from distension and arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach, and by that means gives and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpaired by age or climate, and for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, and other complaints incidental to tropical climates, it is as numerous cases a dose or two has checked the most alarming attacks. No family should be without it.
Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-eighth pints.

Agreeable to the influence or predisposing cause of Fevers should be taken without it, for it taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria.
The above articles prepared only by THOS. WILKINSON late Wilkinsons, Bridge, & Co., 270, Regent-street, London, W.

MRS. JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR TEETH.—This valuable remedy has preserved hundreds of children from the night past recovery from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as efficacious, tending to produce the teeth with ease; and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery where there are young children; for, if a child wakes in the night with pains in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of America's Soothing Syrup, and copying parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bill, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle.
Sold by all chemists and medicine vendors.

Earl Russell sent to the College of Physicians a communication received by him from Manila (where Cholera had been raging fearfully), to the effect, that, of all remedies tried, Chlorodyne was the most effective.—See Brit. Med. J., Dec. 31, 1864.

CHLORODYNE (TOWLE'S). Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Cramp, Ague, Consumption, Asthma, Cough, Colds, Bronchitis, Sea Sickness, &c., immediately relieved by a dose of TOWLE'S CHLORODYNE, which is admitted to be a most wonderful and valuable medicine, and preferred by the profession for its known composition and moderate price.

IMPORTANT TO SHIPPERS AND EMIGRANTS.
Liverpool, Feb. 22nd, 1864. Ship Gertrude.
Mr. TOWLE.—Sir,—Having recently arrived from Bombay and during our stay there myself and crew being violently attacked with dysentery, so general in India, Captain Clements, of the ship Marseilles, lying near us, seeing the condition we were in, kindly sent a bottle of your Chlorodyne, from which myself and crew found immediate relief; and during the voyage home proved a most effective and valuable medicine. Having been instrumental in saving my own life and that of others, we feel it a duty and pleasure to send this statement of facts, to make what use of you think proper, believing that no vessel ought to leave port without a good supply in her medicine chest.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS,
Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided: a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,
&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Spasms, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price, 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

CHILDREN'S WORM TABLETS

Prepared and sold in Tins, 1s. 1 1/2d. and 2s. 9d. each, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, &c., 79, St. Paul's Church-yard, London, E.C., and Retail by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Vendors in the World.

On every the words "KEATING'S WORM TABLETS" are engraved on the Government Stamp of each Tin, without which none are genuine.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are the most gentle, yet most effective purgatives, and, therefore, better calculated for a family medicine than any other drug. They always act the stomach right, rouse the liver, stimulate the kidneys, and thoroughly cleanse the whole system. Holloway's Pills are most useful in chronic weakness of the stomach, induced by luxurious living, sedentary habits, or other causes. They have restored the emaciated to health, after every other means had failed. While they are purifying they are strengthening, while regulating they are increasing nervous and muscular power. These Pills do not excite any violent action in the body, hence they are especially suited to the young and feeble, whose constitutions may be irretrievably injured by more powerful medicines.

ANILINE DYES.—"I shall commence my observations on dyeing, by referring especially to the remarkable and beautiful colours derived from coal tar, the introduction of which into this art may be said to constitute the chief distinction, as far as dyeing is concerned, between the present and the former Exhibition, creating, in fact, a new era in the tinctorial art. Coal tar colours deserve attention for their power, as well as for the facility with which they may be applied, for one grain will deeply tint half a gallon of water, and little or no skill is required for their application."—Vide Report by

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE have received our usual files of papers, from Bombay to the 13th of October, and Calcutta to the 7th of that month.

In Calcutta the Doorgah Poojah holidays had set in, and commerce was in a state of suspension; the temperature was higher than the Englishman remembers during any previous October, and rain, which was much wanted, was not apparently forthcoming. Calcutta of course was "empty;" but its emptiness, like that of London in the autumn, would not be noticed by a stranger; and after all, however empty a town may be, it is always fuller than the country. The absentees, too, had left behind them a little to talk about, in the expected return of the Governor-general, who was to leave Simla on 25th of October, and arrive at Calcutta about the first of this month, to conduct an unusually busy legislative session. The announcement of this change in Sir John's arrangements was made in the official Gazette, and its publication has excited no little indignation. known, as it was, to be dictated from home. "Yesterday," says the Englishman, "a scrap of paper was circulated all over India, intimating that the Viceroy of this great country was not permitted to spend the cold weather at the place which he had selected as his winter residence, but that he had been ordered down to Calcutta." The first feeling, the writer adds, upon reading the announcement would be one of indignation. This, however, "would be speedily succeeded by an impression of the want of tact and judgment which should have caused such a degradation—which should have inflicted upon the Viceroy this painful and public rebuff." At the same time the writer thinks Sir Charles Wood quite right in desiring the Governor-General's presence at the Presidency, and Sir John Lawrence principally wrong for not having ascertained the wishes of the Secretary of State on the subject, instead of pretending to have a will of his own. The opinion of the Friend of India we publish elsewhere.

There was no change in Bhootan politics, except that the Chinese were seriously supposed to be bent on assisting the enemy. The preparations continued unabated, but the campaign was not to commence before the end of December.

In Bombay the Governor's reception of the Sultan of Zanzibar, and the Great Durbar held in his honour, were the official events of the week. Another distinguished stranger—Dr. Livingstone—was also a visitor at the Presidency, and had delivered a lecture upon African Discovery before the Asiatic Society.

A great social improvement has been made in Bombay. The city has been lighted with gas, to the immense astonishment of the natives. It is expected that this means of illumination will supersede oil in all well-to-do houses.

The trial of three fraudulent directors of one of the financial associations brought into existence by the late monetary mania, has attracted a great deal of public attention. When these speculations came to be wound up, one of the most common features in connection with them was, as the Bombay Gazette remarks, the liberality with which the directors had helped themselves to the money of the shareholders in the name of loans. Another feature also, which revealed the rottenness of the great majority of these schemes, was the prevalent habit of each company investing largely in its own shares, with the view of running them up to a high fictitious premium. In the case which has just been tried before the Criminal Sessions the directors of a company, or the greater number of them, entered into an arrangement in their personal and non-official capacities when premiums were high, and the prospects golden, for the extensive purchase of shares. The market collapsed suddenly, and left them with their worthless paper. Tempted to shift the loss upon the shareholders, four of the directors, who had become the guiding spirits in the company, caused fabricated minutes, which pretended to authorise the purchase, and fabricated entries of the transactions to be made in the books, by which the unfortunate shareholders would have been made to bear the whole loss, and by which their own original outlay would have been refunded. One of the parties, however, divulged the villany, and it formed the subject of lengthened preliminary inquiry some weeks ago before the police court. The three directors have since stood their trial before the Criminal Sessions, and two of them have been sentenced to transportation for life, with the confiscation of all their movable and immovable property to the Crown; and the third, who came later into the plot, has been sentenced to four years' rigorous imprisonment. The prisoners all belong to the Hindoo community, and were possessed of considerable wealth. The sentences have caused great astonishment and no little indignation among the native community, whose sympathy with the delinquents is not concealed; and poor Mr. Anstey—still the best abused man in Bombay—is roundly accused of excessive and unjust severity. The Times of India, however, is comparatively letting the learned gentleman alone, and the journals elsewhere generally endorse the opinion of the Bombay Gazette, that he is just the man wanted for the occasion—the kind of doctor who will deal most effectually with the disease.

Colonel Stanley has, after all, been deprived of the command of the 15th Regiment of Native Infantry. He is the officer, it may be remembered, who so bullied Captain Bushe, of his regiment, and assaulted one of his own sepoys with his sword while on parade. Local leniency gave him nothing more than a reprimand at the time; but the Supreme Government has now stepped in to the vindication of discipline and decency, and Colonel Stanley knows his regiment no more.

It is stated that the Bokhara troops have been defeated by a small division of Russian troops recently, near Tashakund. The latter have since advanced within six marches of Bokhara.

From Cabul we learn that the troops of the Ameer are in a very discontented mood, large arrears of pay being due to them. The Sirdar Ubdoolrahman Khan, son of Ufzul Khan, has written a letter to the Ameer upbraiding him for the treatment to which his father is subjected, and also accusing the Ameer Sahib with having poisoned Sirdar Mahomed Oosman Khan, winding up by declaring that he will kill him should his father die in his hands.

A loan is about to be raised by the Municipal Commissioner for public purposes; it is not yet decided whether the loan would be negotiated in Bombay or in England.

The public health continued to improve, notwithstanding the setting in of the hot weather; the latest weekly returns gave the total number of deaths during that period at 322.

The money market was tightening, and there was every prospect of a revival of speculation consequent on the steady rise of cotton. The Bombay Bank had raised its rates one per cent.

The next arrival from India will be the Calcutta Mail, which may be expected in London on Saturday next.

PROGRESS IN BOMBAY.—In the Bombay Presidency there are thirteen spinning and weaving mills, nine of which are situated within the city of Bombay, one at Coorla, two at Surat, and the other at Ahmedabad. There are also nine mills for ginning and pressing cotton, at all of which steam power is used, besides sixteen factories connected with railways and other establishments. In the spinning and weaving mills alone there are nearly 8,000 hands employed; in the other mills, cotton presses, &c., there are about 2,000 hands employed.

PUBLIC SWIMMING BATHS.—We understand that Mr. Hastings, C.E., has received from Mr. Crawford, the municipal commissioner, an official intimation, to the effect that the Vehar water will be granted, free of charge, for his proposed public swimming baths on the Esplanade, on condition that the water afterwards be made available for road purposes. The absence of any kind of public baths in Bombay has ever been matter of astonishment to every one, and should Mr. Hastings be able to complete his undertaking, as there is a good prospect of his doing, these baths will be a great boon to the city. We believe salt water baths will also be added if the first plan meet with encouragement from the public.—Times of India.

BENGAL.

BHOOTAN.

The following arrangements as regards the distribution of the force for the ensuing campaign in Bhootan and its equipment have received the sanction of the Supreme Government.

The force will be composed of the following number of regiments and batteries:—Two Batteries of Artillery; two Companies of Sappers and Miners; two Wings British Infantry; six Regiments Native Infantry; 1,000 coolies, formed into a Coolie Corps of two wings, 500 men each.

Mules, or yaboo, will be allowed for regiments and batteries, each corps and battery having its separate train of animals; the load for each animal to be two maunds, more or less, with reference to the nature of the ground to be traversed. These animals will, where circumstances permit, be procured by the commandants; but as some of the corps intended for the service may be in places where they have not the opportunity of purchasing mules or yaboo, the Commander-in-Chief will indicate those for which his Excellency would desire the Commissariat to supply carriage. In either case, whether purchased by the commandants or supplied by the Commissariat, the cattle attached to regiments and batteries will be entirely under the control of the commanding officers, who will be responsible for the animals, as they would be for cavalry horses—the drivers being on the footing of followers under their orders. The Commissariat train will also include carriage for spare ammunition, viz., 100 rounds per gun, and 100 rounds per man, for the engineer park, and for one month's supply of dry provisions and rum, with 100 mules for hospital and caecoles for each column, and will be under the direction of the Commissariat officer in charge of the expedition.

It is recommended that, for the purposes of carriage, it will be better to depend more on cattle than coolies, but a coolie corps composed of 1,000 men will be formed, divided into two wings, one of which will be attached to each column—not in substitution of, but in addition to the mule and bullock carriage sanctioned—for employment in such manner as the officers commanding may direct. Elephants will generally be used in supplying the bases of operations at the entrance to the hills, and for pushing on supplies as the roads are improved, after the first advance of the troops has taken place.

The following calculations for carriage of a force for hill service have received the sanction of Government:—Allowance to officers, 80lbs.; to officers' mess, one mule to five officers; to British soldiers, 30lbs., to include carriage of two blankets and a great coat; to native officers, 30lbs.; to native soldiers, 12lbs., to include two blankets. No tents to be taken with the force, but every man to be provided with an extra blanket. For hospital, one native paul to be supplied for every two hundred combatants, European or native. Hospital stores to be allowed at the rate of 80lbs. for every one hundred Europeans, and 20lbs. for every one hundred native soldiers. Hill dandies to be supplied to the troops, at the rate of ten per cent. for Europeans, and two per cent. for natives, with six men per dandy. Sixty rounds of ammunition to be carried in pouch, and one hundred and forty rounds on animals with the regiment. One hundred rounds per man to be in reserve at nearest depot. Two days' dry provisions are to be carried by the troops, and eight days' on animals with the regiments. Live stock to be driven. The Commissariat Department to have fifteen days' supply with the force, one month's in nearest issue depot, and five months' at the bases of operations. The following are to be the only followers allowed to accompany the troops:—

One servant to every officer, and two syces for the whole of the mounted officers of a regiment or detachment. Seven per cent. with the troops, to include cooks and blesties; a small hospital establishment; one Lascar for every hospital paul; one driver for every two animals, battery equipment excepted.

The following is the strength of a Mountain Train Battery of six guns or howitzers, with 100 rounds of ammunition per gun, and rations for eight days for soldiers, mules, and followers:—Four European officers, including a medical officer; 106 non-commissioned officers and men; 108 battery mules, and drivers, at one to each animal. 111 followers, as per following detail—viz., Five officers' servants; eight troop servants, at 7 per cent.; sixty dooly bearers (six men each for ten doolies); one Lascar for the hospital paul; eight servants for the hospital; and twenty-nine mule drivers, at one for every two animals.—Englishman.

The Hulkarn says:—"We hear from Bhootan that a rumour is abroad in the interior to the effect that the Chinese have certainly promised their assistance in the impending war with the British in the ensuing cold weather, and that the Chinese authorities beyond the mountains have instructed the Dhurm Rajah to make provision for the Chinese troops about to leave for Bhootan."

THE GOVERNOR GENERAL AND THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA.

The refusal of the Secretary of State to permit the Viceroy to spend the cold as well as the hot season away from the capital, following close upon his veto of the export duties and proposed loan, once more raises the question which is at the foundation of the good Government of India—the relation of the Council of Calcutta to that of Westminster. That question was first started in 1860 by the grant of more than half a million sterling to the family of Tippoo, in opposition to the advice of Lord Canning, and in spite of the indignation of the whole Indian public, Native and English. Lord Canning so bitterly resented that act, that Sir C. Wood wrote an apologetic defence much more humble than that in which Lord Stanley excused the tone of his very proper protest against the confiscation of Oudh. In those days the aggression of the Secretary of State on the powers and dignity of the Governor-General was so new, so rude, and so unjustifiable in its objects, that the public rather too indiscriminately condemned interference from home of every kind. This feeling was intensified by the subservience of Lord Elgin. In spite of somewhat distinguished services to the Crown in Jamaica, Canada, China, and Japan, that nobleman had seen his college companions, Dalhousie and Canning, preferred to himself in being appointed to the great object of his ambition in India. Up to the last it was doubtful if he would be selected, and before the prize was fairly within his grasp, Sir C. Wood well understood that the new Viceroy would prove an humble agent instead of an equal (in some respects a superior) power. When Sir John Lawrence landed at Calcutta in the middle of January, 1864, it was believed that his stern nature, his obstinate resolution, would virtually restore to the office of Governor-General that power which belonged to it from Wellesley to Dalhousie, if not that dignity which took the place of the power in the case of Lord Canning, after the legislative changes during his tenure of office.

These changes at once seriously contracted the power of the Governor-General, while they clothed him with the external honours of a Viceroy. In the days of the East India Company the relation of the Governor-General to the Court of Directors was very vague. His ability to do what he liked, and to dictate a great policy instead of accepting one which was humiliating, lay in the fact that he had two masters—the Board of Control and the Court of Directors. The former selected him, the latter could only recall him, as in Lord Ellenborough's case. The Governor-General must have been more than ordinarily weak who could not get his way between them, for they rarely agreed. Except, for instance, when he differed with his Council about the annexation of Oudh, Lord Dalhousie never consulted either authority about his great conquests, until he had laid the train and the match was ready to fire it. What his predecessors wanted in force of character they made up by taking advantage of the geographical argument of distance. Lord Wellesley, who had that force of character, knowing that the Court would grudge him the money, did not inform it of his intention to build the Government houses in Calcutta and Barrackpore till the foundation stone of the former had been laid. Fifteen months after, when the refusal came, the Calcutta Palace was a fact, and the Barrackpore House alone suffered till Lord Hastings completed the great Marquis's plans. The fall of Delhi, which resulted in the obliteration of the Great Mogul dynasty, and the abolition of the Company, changed all this. Sir Barnes Peacock sounded the first note, declaring that every grant of land or money by Lord Canning in his splendid durbars to loyal chiefs, without the consent of the Secretary of State in Council, was illegal. We shall never forget how the announcement, suddenly, and perhaps incautiously, made from the Vice-President's chair by the law adviser of the Council, fell like a thunderbolt on his colleagues. Sir Bartle Frere in his reply became almost inarticulate with excitement, charging the law member with rashness and neglect of duty in not first communicating his opinion to the Executive Council. But the opinion was correct, and a clause in a subsequent Act of Parliament was required to legalise these grants. Parliament, in 1858, took direct charge of a dependency whose revenues amounted to forty millions sterling, and it was a constitutional necessity that the expenditure of that money should be supervised by itself, or by such a body as the Council to whom it delegated the duty. The legislation of 1861 followed, completing that of 1858 by restricting the legislative powers, also, of the Governor-General. Then came those orders, expressed in the curtest, and, some would say, most impertinent language, forbidding the Governor-General to create a new appointment, to sanction an increase of salary, or to reward extra duty without permission. In one case, of which we shall probably hear more, Sir C. Wood, a few weeks ago, went so far as to order the return of a petty sum which had been spontaneously granted by the Government of India as an acknowledgment of a special work ably performed by a public servant.

When, therefore, we contrast the subservience of the present Governor-General to the Secretary of State, with the dignity of Lord Canning and the kingly power of Lord Dalhousie, we must remember the legal difference between their respective positions. But, making every allowance for this, it is our duty to warn Sir John Lawrence that the English public declare his submission to be excessive, and the native public consider it to be humiliating. The unfortunate thing is that, in the two instances of the export duties and his continued absence from Calcutta, Sir C. Wood's interference must be pronounced to be for the good of the Empire, and has been accepted with satisfaction by those who, like ourselves, consider the mere fact of interference at all dangerous to the stability of our power. There should be no medium between upholding every act of the Viceroy and recalling him. The wise words of Mr. J. S. Mill should never be forgotten—"It cannot be too often repeated, that in a country like India everything depends on the personal qualities and capacities of the agents of Government. This truth is the cardinal principle of Indian administration." Against the legal difficulties put in the way of the independence of the Viceroy by Acts of Parliament must be set the constitutional action of personal character. Since the Indian has, too rashly, been absorbed into the Imperial system of civil and military administration, the Imperial system of check and counter-check must be brought into play. Parliament never meant that her Majesty's Viceroy should be the mere subordinate of the Secretary of State, any more than that the War Office should always yield to the Horse Guards, or the Premier to the pressure of the Crown, as in the days of George III. In plain words, the Indian public wish to see the Viceroy resist the Secretary of State—they think Sir John Lawrence's proper position is that of antagonism to Sir C. Wood. At present it is that of complete subservience. Squabbles and quarrels will not necessarily arise, but, if they do, the result will be a compromise only less beneficial to the empire than the unchecked will of great rulers like some of Sir John's predecessors. A Lord Ellenborough with his vagaries and subject only to recall, will do less evil than a ruler who, with more judgment but less governing instinct, allows submissively and without public protest a Secretary of State eight thousand miles off to dictate the policy of a war like that in Bhootan, which has disgraced us throughout Asia, and will yet cost as much as the subjugation of a fertile kingdom.

It is unfortunate for Sir John Lawrence that he is a Bengal civilian, although of the Punjab stamp, and, above all, that for some years he was the almost unresisting colleague of Sir C. Wood in the Westminster Council of old Indians. Mr. J. S. Mill, himself an old India-house official, and a hater of pure English influence in India, remarks:—"There are good reasons why the Viceroy should not be a member of the regular service. All services have, more or less, their class prejudices, from which the supreme ruler ought to be exempt. Neither are men, however able and experienced, who have passed their lives in Asia so likely to possess the most advanced European ideas in general statesmanship, which the chief ruler should carry out with him, and blend with the results of Indian experience." Sir John Lawrence can prove the incorrectness of this in his own case only by so acting that the Secretary of State's veto will not be justified by public opinion, as it has been in two recent instances, and by manifesting such resoluteness, dignity, and pride that Sir C. Wood's interference will be of no avail. What the Chief Commissioner of the Punjab did in 1857, when the wire was cut, the Viceroy of India must henceforth in spirit do, in spite of the Indo-European Telegraph, his old civilian associations, and his former subordination to Sir C. Wood, if he is to maintain, or add to, his past reputation.—Friend of India.

DEATH IN THE GANGES.

Next to the festivities of the Doorga Pooja, the subject which at present is most occupying the native mind is, perhaps, the late Minute of the Bengal Government on the custom of taking the dying to the banks of the Ganges. A portion of the native press themselves were the first to suggest the propriety of interference with a rite which they admitted, even when not abused, to be both horrible and pernicious, and, when abused, a cloak for murder. The Lieutenant-Governor has recorded his opinion that, since the natives themselves have begun to express their disapproval of the custom, the time has arrived for the Government to interfere for the purpose of suppressing it. In other words, it is thought that a serious crime may be very well prohibited by the State among a certain class of its subjects, when a portion of that class themselves have begun to see the impropriety of perpetrating it. The religious aspect of the question is, however, so grave that the Government of Bengal has very properly abstained from moving in the matter without the consent of the Viceroy in Council. There can be no doubt that, if there is any one rite of paramount importance to a strict Hindoo, next to the offering up of the pinda for the souls of the departed, it is this. Setting aside, however, the religious objection to interference, the question involves a difficulty which cannot easily be overcome. The Government would certainly be exceeding its province if it were to forbid sick persons being simply taken to the banks of the Ganges; for in that act, looked at by itself, there is nothing either repulsive or necessarily pernicious. It is other acts, commonly accompanying this, which are horrible, pernicious, and criminal. If a man prefers to die by the banks of the Ganges, it certainly seems hard for the State to interpose and compel him to die in his own house; but the State can legitimately interfere, and is, indeed, bound to interfere, to prevent a man being wilfully drowned or choked to death, either at his own desire or that of his friends; and, much more, to put a stop to a compulsory submission to these disagreeable and fatal operations. Now, the question is, would it be possible to stop the one effectually, without stopping the other? Can the drowning be prevented, without interdicting the banks of the Ganges in toto? Can, in fact, the abuse of the rite, and the objectionable features of it be stopped, except by stopping, also, that part of it which is harmless and unobjectionable? The Dacca Prokash, in speaking of this subject, quotes the following passage of the Kaurna Purana:—"The man who dies consciously in the Ganges obtains salvation (mukti), but he who dies unconsciously goes to the Brahmalok," which, says the Dacca Prokash, "is a department of heaven from which he is liable to relapse into another birth, by way of punishment for sin; but mukti is a state of final deliverance from sin and its consequences." The writer goes on to say:—"From this precept, it is clear that mukti is obtained only by the man who dies consciously. But one does not see that people are conscious when the death-rattle has set in; hence, conscious Hindoos are immersed before the death-rattle sets in, and in that position await death; otherwise they have no chance of obtaining mukti (salvation)." From this we see, at the same time, how great a temptation the immediate proximity of the sacred stream, not to speak of less pure motives, must always be to the attendants to hasten the death of their relative by immersing him while still fully conscious; and yet how great a hardship it would be entirely to prohibit the rite. "Half a loaf is better than no bread;" mukti is, no doubt, the most desirable to every believing Hindoo; but if he cannot obtain mukti, he would rather have Brahmalok than be entirely shut out of heaven. Yet it certainly does not seem to us that Government can ever hope to stop Ganges murder without prohibiting the rite altogether; unless, indeed, every funeral is accompanied by the police, and even they, if natives, as, of course, in the majority of cases, they must be, would connive at the murder for a few rupees. One of the native papers has remarked that it is superfluous for Government to interfere to prevent a practice which, it is admitted, is dying out of itself. This we cannot admit. The practice has, it is true, begun to die out; but it may take a long time in dying. It is well known that it is dying out only among a certain section of the Hindoo community; and though, perhaps, that section is a continually increasing one, there is very little doubt that the staunch Hindoo party will continue to exist, and, if not prevented, to perpetrate Ganges murder for many a long day yet.—Englishman.

NEW RULES FOR THE REGULATION OF INCREASES AND PROMOTIONS.

The following rules have been framed by Government, in accordance with the instructions of the Secretary of State, for the regulation of increases and promotions to Government officers:—

1. No increases to salaries sanctioned by the Government of India, except those due to promotions under existing regulations, or to periodic increases, according to scales already sanctioned, or to any revisions of such scales which do not involve additional expense, can take effect till the commencement of the ensuing financial year, when they will be provided for by a suitable entry in that year's Budget. This rule applies to salaries which, when increased, shall not exceed Rs. 5,000 per annum. No increases of this sort, therefore, can take effect in any year, if the sanction of the Government of India is not obtained to it before the issue of the orders on the year's Budget estimate.
2. When the salary which it is proposed to increase would, with the increase, exceed Rs. 5,000 per annum, the addition must be approved by the Secretary of State before it can be passed in the Budget estimate. If any such increase, therefore, is contemplated by any local government or administration, it must be borne in mind that no action can be taken until the receipt of a reply from the Secretary of State, pending which Budget provision for the increase cannot be passed by the Government of India.
3. The Budget estimates of all local governments and administrations must be accompanied by a schedule of all increases requiring the sanction of the Secretary of State, or the Government of India, under Rules I. and II., for which provision is made in the Budget.
4. Under these orders all special increases of salaries will, as a rule, take effect from the 1st of April; the first payment will then fall in the following year—i.e., in May. Exceptions will only be admitted under very peculiar circumstances.
5. No new appointments will be created by the Government of India carrying a salary of more than Rs. 3,000 per annum, except in cases of real and bona fide emergency, and then it must be always distinctly understood, and the person appointed is to be given to understand also, that the appointment is made provisionally, subject to the confirmation of her Majesty's Government. All notifications appointing persons to such posts, so long as they remain unsanctioned by the Secretary of State, may conveniently declare that the appointment is "subject to the approval by her Majesty's Government of the creation of the post."
6. Applications for the creation of new appointments carrying salaries of not more than Rs. 3,000 per annum will be dealt with as heretofore.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIR WILLIAM MANSFIELD'S MUTUAL INSTRUCTION SCHEME.—No little amusement has been excited in the Bengal Army by the publication of an extraordinary circular respecting the instruction of military officers in native languages. The idea is, that interpreters or other officers might be invited to instruct their brother officers, at a remuneration not exceeding thirty rupees per mensem, the amount which is at present paid to a native moonshee. The circular says:—"It is probable that the elementary student would go to the English instructor, and the more advanced to the pundit, or moonshee." This, we also think, is very probable; the elementary student would learn his alphabet from the English instructor, and his grammar from the native moonshee; and the happy consequences of this arrangement are thus indicated:—"His Excellency observes that other advantages besides elementary instruction would flow from such a course. Thus, the instructor himself would become a much better linguist from having to teach others. The habit of discussing points of grammar and subjects connected with Oriental literature would insensibly grow up amongst gentlemen engaged in a common study, in which one portion of them was helping the other." A more charming picture of an ideal military life has never yet flashed before the eyes of the most enthusiastic young lady of the present age. It reminds us of the ideal household of the Sabbatarian member of Parliament, in which, if the footman was more serious than the cook, he was expected to improve the cook, but if the cook was more serious than the footman, she was expected to improve the footman. But what a pretty glimpse we obtain of the Arcadian simplicity which exists in barracks! The old dames' school, held every morning by the interpreter, for the purpose of teaching the native alphabet to his brother officers; the punishment of those truants who might prefer a morning ride or round of calls to the acquisition of philological knowledge; the realisation of that mad dream of boyhood, of being allowed to smoke during school hours; the total change in the conversation from horsedogs and ladies to the intricacies of grammar, or the chaste morality of "Bagh-o-Bahar" and "Betul Puchesi;" and all these grand social and educational advantages to be obtained by giving the pay to the interpreter, which erewhile went to the Moonshee, and which, alas, goes to the Moonshee again, directly the pupil knows as much as his English instructor, a climax which, in the case of ardent students, would be attained in about a fortnight, or thereabouts. Perchance, however, the stimulus of thirty rupees per mensem may induce the interpreter to go ahead, and keep one day's lesson in advance of his pupils for an indefinite period, artfully suggesting beer during school hours, when a pupil is going on too fast for his master, and demanding cheroots as an appropriate punishment whenever a pupil is going too slow. Perchance, also, the discussions upon grammar and Oriental literature may occasionally lead to differences of opinion, and to heavy bets on points of syntax and literary history; but, in such cases, the Moonshee ought always to be on the spot, that any approach to unseemly disorders or personal hostilities may be avoided by a prompt decision from the highest and best authority.—Englishman's Saturday Evening Journal.

CAPTAIN REMINGTON.—The following is from the Mofussilite:—"Captain Remington, whose eccentricities we commented on in a late issue, has been captured in Benares. He passed through Cawnpore on the 17th inst. in charge of a police officer, dressed in a mauve dhotee and with gold bangles on his legs and arms. The natives everywhere prostrated themselves before him and addressed him as Goosain Ji; looking on him, no doubt, as a saint of great celebrity. He evidently thinks himself a much injured individual; for he was heard to say: "Why is the Commander-in-Chief persecuting me? I have only abstracted my thoughts from worldly affairs and fixed them in contemplation on the Deity." He is now a prisoner in Lucknow. We understand his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief will not bring this officer to trial by court martial, as was anticipated, but that his case will be submitted to a Commission of Lunacy, with a view to his being sent to England.

PROBABLE VACANCIES IN THE BENGAL C.S.—We understand that the following gentlemen will retire from the Civil Service next year: The Hon. Mr. Steer, in February; and the Hon. Mr. Trevor, in May. The seats of these gentlemen in the High Court will not, it is said, be filled up. Mr. R. P. Harrison will probably retire in April, and be succeeded by Mr. H. Sandeman.—Englishman.

THE HON. THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR of these provinces will be in Allahabad early in October. It will be necessary for his Honour to be present at his capital when the Viceroy passes through.—Delhi Gazette.

CAPT. FOSBERY.—Government has granted 5,000 rupees to Capt. G. V. Fosbery, in acknowledgment of his exertions to perfect a rifled shell.

COURT MARTIAL AT BENARES.—BENARES, Sept. 18.—The general court martial which assembled here on the 11th instant still sits daily in the mess-house of the 58th Foot; President, Colonel Cormick, 20th Foot. The prisoner, Surgeon Phillip Henry Eustace Cross, of H.M.'s 58th Foot, is on his trial on three distinct charges:—1st. Neglect of duty in not making proper arrangements for the admission into hospital of certain men of the 58th Regiment reported sick and unfit for duty, on four several instances. 2nd. Neglect of duty in not personally inspecting the throats of men of the 58th Regiment reported sick and unfit for duty, in two instances he having deputed that duty to the regimental apothecary. 3rd. Insulting and provoking language to Deputy Inspector-General of Hospitals Dunbar, in the hospital of the 58th Regiment at Benares, on the 6th June 1865, in saying, "I thought your province was with the chamber-pots and that sort of thing," or words to that effect. The last seems the most serious charge, and I believe the evidence in support of it is most clear. As for the second charge, it is generally understood that the medical subordinates in a military hospital are to take an active, and not merely a passive part in the interior economy and practice of these establishments. However, the opinion of the Court on this particular point will settle the question one way or the other. The prosecution closed yesterday, and the prisoner enters upon his examination of witnesses for the defence to-day; the termination of the proceedings of course is uncertain, but it is thought will be this week. There are six officers from Dinapore, one from Hazareebagh, four from Allahabad, one from Cawnpore, and one from Lucknow.—Pioneer.—Sept. 29.—The court-martial on Surgeon Cross, H.M.'s 58th Foot, closed to-day, allowing two days for the defence. Colonel Cormick, the President, is very ill with dysentery, and will have to leave for Europe on medical certificate. His place has been taken by Lieut.-col. Thomas, 27th Foot. The court has daily been sitting from 10 A.M. to 4 P.M. since 11th inst. In my opinion it will be found that a few have burned their fingers over this trial; for should the court convict Surgeon Cross on the two first charges, they will then be able to do the same for every British medical officer in India, for it is a well known fact, also laid down in Bengal medical regulations, that the medical officer is to visit the sick in hospital, morning and evening, the apothecary and his subordinates doing the work in the interval, otherwise why would the Government allow to each regiment in the country one apothecary, one assistant apothecary, one steward, and three apprentices? The third charge is—but you shall judge for yourself, and many will be sorry that the prisoner was not removed without a trial. Many of the apothecaries are diplomaed men. I could point out more men than you would like to insert in your paper that hold independent charges, and nearly all that Surgeon Cross brought up to his trial had medical charge of either white or black troops.—Indian Daily News.

FIRE AT SEA.—(SINGAPORE, Sept. 28.)—The Lightning, steamer, left the roads early this morning for Hong Kong, heavily laden with opium, cotton, saltpetre, tin, &c. After proceeding a few miles the cargo in the after hold was found to be on fire, and she immediately steamed back to the anchorage and was run into shallow water. Every communication between the sea and the vessel was then opened to admit the water, and after discharging several chests of opium and getting down about two tiers below the lower decks the fire was discovered, evidently caused by spontaneous combustion of the cotton, many bales of which were on fire. The ends of several opium chests were burnt out, and streams of melted tin were running about over the bales of cotton. By 9.30 A.M. the water in the after hold was within three feet of the lower deck, and the fire was considerably checked by 10 A.M. She is now discharging her damaged cargo, and is able to pump the water out with her own engines.

THE "EAGLE SPEED" INQUIRY.—We think that it is now time that the public should learn what further action is to be taken by the Government in the matter of the Eagle Speed. Pilot Vardy has been dismissed the service, and public opinion has approved of the sentence; but though one of those most culpable, he is certainly not the only one deserving of punishment. Captain Brinsden, of the Eagle Speed, has been allowed to leave Calcutta, without any expression from the Court or the Government regarding his conduct. The captain of the Lady Elgin has been suspended, "pending," we are told, "the orders of Government." There are some doubts as to the power of Government to issue any orders at all affecting him; but whether these doubts have any good foundation or not, it behoves the Government, we think, to lose no further time in giving expression to its intentions regarding this officer—the most blameworthy, in our opinion, where all were deserving of blame.—Englishman.

COURT OF INQUIRY AT ALLAHABAD.—ALLAHABAD, Sept. 30.—A Court of Inquiry assembled this morning to inquire "into such matters as may be laid before it." The president is Major F. J. Nelson, Captain H. L. Jones and Captain R. E. Anderson are members, and Captain H. R. B. Worsely is interpreter. The matter is "scandal." I may tell you so much that an officer appears to have enticed some sergeant's wife away, and this court is to inquire into all the circumstances attending the same. I hope there may be no foundation for the report, as the said officer is an old soldier, and a universal favourite. Alas! what troubles women get us into. A commission, five hundred a year, and a respectable position, constitute a large stake for a liaison with a sergeant's wife. But we must wait till we hear more.

MILITARY ITEMS.—We (Englishman) learn that it is in contemplation to substitute cloth for serge in the dress regulations of the army. —We may state, for those interested in the question, that the service of officers of the Staff Corps counts towards promotion under all circumstances, except during absence on leave, or loss of employment from misconduct. —It has been recommended by the Commander-in-Chief, that warrant officers in India, holding the departmental ranks of Deputy, Assistant, and Deputy-Assistant Commissioners, receive honorary commissions.—An order has been received from the Horse Guards, that, from the 1st of January next, an officer, before being appointed on the personal Staff of a General, must pass the examination laid down in pp. 78-79 of the Queen's Regulations, 1859.

MAJOR ELDERTON.—We regret to state that Major Elderton, divisional paymaster, Meerut, has been suspended from his duties.—Hurkaru.

HORSE-WHIIPPING AN EDITOR.

The Bangalore Herald of Oct. 4 says:—On Thursday last we were brutally assaulted in our office by an officer of the name of Watkins, of the 18th Hussars. The case came on for hearing on Monday last, and was yesterday committed for trial to the High Court. Mr. Gordon conducted the case for the prosecution, and Mr. Ruddle that for the defence. The court was crowded both days, and the closing remarks of the magistrate, Captain Hill, appeared to cause considerable excitement, more especially when he said that it was his duty to take such steps as would afford the public protection against "Military tyranny," and that the conduct of the prisoner was "brutal, ferocious, and cowardly." Time will not admit of our giving more than the grounds of commitment at present. The case having been committed to the Sessions, we for obvious reasons refrain from commenting on it.

Captain Hill, before the officers who were present left the court, said, with reference to the words "military tyranny":

"I, as a military officer myself, beg to apologise for this unguarded expression, and so far to qualify it as to give my true meaning, i.e., that it was necessary for the liberty of the subject and the interests of the community that the public should be guarded from anything approaching to tyranny over them by the combined action of military men."

In the course of his remarks upon the case Captain Hill said:—"The assault appears to have been an act premeditated by the defendant. He comes to the office in a carriage accompanied by two or three officers. None of these officers accompany him into the office, which is strange, if we are to believe the defendant's statement, that he came merely for an apology. Next, though coming in a coach he brought his whip with him, and took the whip with him into the editor's room. His subsequent conduct shows for what purpose the whip was taken. Mr. Shallard says, in his evidence, that the defendant, after calling him "a damned blackguard," caught his eye, and made a movement towards the door, and that he moved simultaneously to the door to open it for him to show him the door. Even admitting that the defendant's version of the facts, as put forward by his counsel, to be true, that the defendant demanded an apology, which was refused, and that the prosecutor pushed against the defendant as he advanced to the door, and that the blow in the face might have been given in retaliation, yet the evidence before the court, viz., that of Mr. Shallard and the third witness, Casavool Naiker, shows that Mr. Watkins first shut the door (the inference from this act is self-apparent, showing the defendant's object; the prosecutor could not have done so, having no object in view). He then gives him (Mr. Shallard), unprepared as he was to meet the attack, a knock-down blow in the face, and while the prosecutor is staggering from its effects he administers to him a severe castigation with his whip. It was no ordinary castigation—the marks on Mr. Shallard's person testify to the severity of the blows: some of them having cut deep into the flesh, even through the coat causing blood to flow; the whip must consequently have been a much heavier one than that before the Court. Mr. Taylor, the first witness, hearing the scuffle in the inner room, now pushes the door open, sees the prosecutor lying prostrate on the ground, with the defendant standing over flogging him. He receives a cut across the forehead himself with the whip. They move into the printing-office; the assault is renewed again, evidently on no provocation, and the prisoner then leaves in the coach with his friends. Considering the sudden nature of the attack, the respective position of the parties, the great disparity between them in respect to strength and physique, and the severity of the blows given, I can characterise the assault only as brutal, ferocious, and cowardly.

The cause of the assault was some remarks made by the editor of the Bangalore Herald upon the following police report:—"Coronet Watkins, of H.M.'s 18th Hussars, was charged by one Chenniah with kicking him. The prosecutor, a waiter employed by the mess butler, stated that on Thursday last Mr. Watkins gave orders that dinner should be ready for three persons at 6 o'clock P.M. When it was served and the gentlemen had sat down the defendant ordered him to call the butler. He accordingly went and brought the butler, on which the defendant asked, 'What did I say to you?' He replied that he had called the butler as he had been desired. The defendant then got up, swore at him, and gave him a kick on the back and threw a roll of bread at him. After that he said, 'Why do you stare at me so?' and then gave him a push, two or three kicks, and a blow on his side. As for himself, under this accumulated weight of ill-usage, he spoke not a word. The defendant pleaded guilty to having kicked the prisoner, but on provocation. The magistrate remarked that an act of stupidity or negligence on the part of a servant, whether European or native, can under no circumstances justify the commission of a breach of the peace. Fined Rs. 20. No portion of it to be awarded to complainant, on account of his impertinent conduct after receiving the kick."

A NEAT THING IN EXAMINATIONS.—A letter from Madras says:—I shall close my letter narrating a little incident that occurred in a certain office within a hundred miles of the fort, and within the last three months. It is the current joke of the department. A mechanical engineer presented himself in the authorised quarter for a certificate of qualification. He was duly introduced to the examiner, when the following edifying dialogue ensued:—Examiner: (After a few professional questions of no particular consequence)—Can you define a hollow cylinder? Candidate: (Who had evidently been sharpening his wits with old cognac). A hollow cylinder, Sir, is an old tin pot, hic—with the bottom banged out of it. Examiner: (Looking at his man over his spectacles) Ah!—not very professional certainly—but correct. And now, pray, what is a solid cylinder? Candidate: (On the spur of the moment)—Hic—A pile of Rupees. Examiner: That will do. There's your certificate. It is said that the candidate was soon afterwards discovered celebrating his success in a liquid which he imbibed from a hollow cylinder which had not the bottom banged out of it.

A LEGITIMATE SUBJECT FOR INQUIRY.—To the Editor of the Madras Times.—Sir,—Can any of your military readers authenticate, by names, dates, and instances, the truth (if it be truth) of the following startling passage in the last Calcutta Review, No. 81 page 101? The critique is on "Kaye's Sepoy War," and the reviewer is speaking of European officers:—"For years before the mutiny, Government had done everything to diminish the influence of the officers by lessening their authority, depriving them of the power of promotion, and even at one time, on the Madras side, by receiving reports from the native spy in each regiment regarding the officers."—Yours truly, HISTORICUS.

NARROW ESCAPE.—The steamer Madras had a very narrow escape of being wrecked in the Madras roads on the 29th ult. She took the ground on that night on a shoal some twenty miles off the Godavery point, when it was found expedient to throw the cargo overboard; this having been effected, she floated at one P.M. on the following day.

CHARGE OF FORGERY, &c., AGAINST THE DIRECTORS OF THE COMMERCIAL FINANCE AND STOCK EXCHANGE CORPORATION.

At the High Court, on the 29th September, Dyal Jayras, Khuttow Ludha, and Cullianjee Ludha (No. 36 of the Calendar), were respectively arraigned at the bar for forgery, abetment of forgery, and abetment of criminal breach of trust. The evidence having been gone through, the jury retired for about twenty minutes, and returned with a verdict of guilty against the prisoners on all counts of the indictment. The prisoner Cullianjee Ludha was recommended to mercy.

His Lordship (Mr. Justice Anstey) sentenced Dyal Jayras and Khuttow Ludha to transportation for life; and that their moveable and immoveable property be forfeited to the Crown. Cullianjee Ludha, who was recommended to mercy, was sentenced to four years' rigorous imprisonment.

The trial, says the Bombay Gazette, created so much interest among the native community that there were about five hundred spectators in Court on Saturday, the 30th ult., to hear the result of this most interesting case. No sooner had the presiding judge passed the sentence of transportation for life upon the prisoners Dyal Jayras and Khuttow Ludha than a deal of noise was created in Court. His Lordship immediately ordered the sheriff's officers to bring before him those who thus interrupted the Court from its business. The deputy-sheriff and other officers tried their utmost to find out the parties who created such a disturbance, but were unsuccessful in their search. His Lordship regretted that the sheriff's officers were unable to keep the crowd quiet, and asked what was the use of these officers in Court when they were unable to discharge their duty satisfactorily.

Another incident of the trial is related by the same journal:—Mr. Luckmildass Khimjee, a native merchant, and one of her Majesty's Justices of the Peace of the town and island of Bombay, was severely reprimanded by Mr. Justice Anstey at the Criminal Sessions on the 30th ult., for the unsatisfactory way and the hesitating manner in which he gave his evidence in the case of the Queen against the three directors of the Commercial Finance and Stock Exchange Corporation. It appears from the evidence of this man, before the court, that he was aware of the plot which was to be made against Cullianjee Ludha, one of the prisoners, but he neglected to lay an information at the proper quarter against the parties who contrived to ruin the accused. He, the witness, it further appears, attended before the acting senior magistrate of police to stand as security for the prisoner Cullianjee, but he never said a word to the magistrate about this plot. His Lordship remarked from the Bench as follows:—"You ought to be struck off immediately from the commission of the peace for not going and giving information before the magistrate about the plot. Go down, sir—you are a disgrace to the commission of the peace. Leave the Court, sir—or box, rather. I shall cause proper communication to be made in the proper quarter about you."

DURBAR AT THE TOWN-HALL.

His Excellency the Governor held a full dress durbar in the Town-hall on Wednesday afternoon (11th Sept.), for the reception of his Highness Sooltan Seyed Majid, the Sultan of Zanzibar, who is at present paying a brief visit to the Presidency of Bombay. The hour fixed for the occasion was five o'clock, but considerably before that time the large and spacious hall—which was suitably fitted up—began to receive the company who desired to pay their respects to the Sultan. A guddee was placed between two columns on the east side of the building, and facing the grand entrance, and on either side there were several rows of seats, all of which were filled, and even standing room had to be drawn upon. About a quarter to five o'clock a detachment of 150 men of the 45th Regiment of Foot arrived, with their band, in front of the hall; and a guard of honour—consisting, as usual, of 100 men—was formed, facing the entrance, while the remaining number lined the interior of the building and the flight of steps in front. The 4th Native Rifles and the Marine Battalion formed a "street" from the entrance of Church Gate-street to the hall. There was, as might be expected, a large crowd of natives assembled in the Elphinstone Circle, presenting to the eye a motley mass of puggeries and gaudy costumes. His Excellency the Governor arrived shortly before five o'clock, and entered the building by the southern entrance, remaining in an ante-room till the approach of the Sultan was intimated. He then entered the hall, and the large assemblage which had gathered rose to receive him. Having saluted the company with frequent bows he passed to the front and descended to the foot of the steps, accompanied by his aides-de-camp, his military and private secretaries, Sir Charles van Straubenzee, Brigadier Tapp, Captain Barker, Sir Alexander Grant, and others. After the lapse of a few minutes the carriage of the Sultan, containing his Highness, Colonel Taylor, and two of the Sultan's private suits, drove up, while two or three carriages which followed immediately after brought numerous others of his retinue. On the arrival of his Highness the guard of honour presented arms, and a salute of twenty-one guns was fired from the battery. On alighting, his Highness shook hands cordially with Sir Bartle, who introduced him severally to the gentlemen around him. They then entered the hall, the whole of the company rising, and stepped up to the guddee, where the Governor gave his distinguished visitor the seat of honour on his right hand. The personal appearance of the Sultan was, of course, the object of some interest, and the remarks that passed about him were in every way complimentary. His features are of a superior Arab caste, handsome in themselves, and disclosing both intelligence and good nature. His costume was remarkable by an entire absence of ostentation, and his sandalled soles showed him to be a true son of the desert. The front seats on either side of the Sultan and the Governor were occupied by prominent military and official gentlemen present, among them being the following: Hon. Mr. Maine, Dr. David Livingstone, Sir Charles van Straubenzee, Col. Taylor, Sir Alex. Grant, Mr. Justice Couch, Mr. Justice Tucker, Mr. Justice Anstey, Mr. Justice Janardhan Wassokw, Hon. Mr. White, Hon. Mr. Fogg, Hon. Rastomjee Jamsetjee, Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, Brigadier Tapp, Captain Barker, A. C. Gunpert, Esq., Dr. Sinclair, &c. The back seats, as already hinted, were quite filled—a considerable number of ladies being present, and a sprinkling of Parsees, Hindoos, and other natives. To the gentlemen on the front seats the Sultan was introduced by Sir Bartle, by the Sultan. In this way about twenty minutes were occupied, and the proceedings of the durbar were then brought to a close. His Highness was conducted by the Governor back to his carriage, and on leaving was saluted from the battery and by the guard of honour in the same way as on his arrival. Shortly afterwards Sir Bartle also left, and the rest of the company gradually dispersed.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT ON THE EGYPTIAN RAILWAY.

We (Times of India) have been requested to publish the following letter, addressed to the directors of the P. and O. Company by the passengers per steamer Malta, with a request that the disgraceful management of the Suez line be brought under the notice of his Highness the Pasha:—

"Alexandria, Aug. 27, 1865.

"To the Directors of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, London.

"Gentlemen,—We, the undersigned passengers ex S. S. Malta from Bombay, beg that you will bring to the notice of his Highness the Pasha, in the strongest manner possible, the negligent and disgraceful manner in which the railway line from Suez to this place is conducted.

"We left Suez on Saturday evening at seven o'clock (the 26th inst.), and, at station No. 8, our train had hardly come to a stop when a luggage train ran into us with much violence, causing very much alarm to all, and injuries to many of us. Our engine and tender were off the line, and we could find no one who seemed capable of doing anything to assist us in our great difficulties. For upwards of an hour ladies and children had to remain in the open air while our train had to be put to rights, not by any officials, but mainly by ourselves. The drivers of the two trains were most decidedly unfit to have been entrusted with the charge of a train, being very far from sober. At Cairo the wounded were attended to by a medical gentleman; but no official expressed the least concern at the miraculous escape we had from what might have been a most fearful catastrophe. This morning, at a station near a bridge across the Nile, it was discovered that the axle of one of our baggage carriages was in a very bad and heated state, and yet again there seemed to be no one in charge to suggest a remedy, remove the carriage, or do anything to ensure our safety; and it was only by the majority of the passengers getting out of the train, and refusing to proceed, that we at last got the damaged wagon removed to the end of the train; and at the station beyond, the axle was so bad that we telegraphed to Alexandria for a pilot engine to come for it, and we left the wagon on the line. Had we not been determined, and had not the wagon been removed, there can be no doubt that a most serious accident would have taken place.

"While bringing these serious matters before his Highness, we would also suggest that the railway officials at the several stations should supply water to the passengers without demanding such extortionate fees as a shilling a glass. The whole conduct of the line is most disgraceful, and we hope that this remonstrance may have the effect of making things at least a little better.—We are, gentlemen, yours obediently, E. Tremeneere, Colonel, R.E.; G. Sealy, Colonel, R.A.; A. H. White, Captain; C. R. Evans, C.S.; F. L. Brown, L. P. Greig; C. E. Mitchell, H. Hodgson, Major; W. G. La Touche, Lieut.; C. Schmidt, Lieut.; R. N. Wylie, R. F. Young, T. O. Ramsden, C. H. Reynolds, J. Greaves."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES OF INDIA."

SIR,—Before the "fatal march from Mhow" becomes shrouded in oblivion, the following cognate facts should be made public:—

In the early part of April, 1864, the following detail of the 106th Foot left Nusseerabad en route for Khandalla:—Privates Steel, Byrne, McFarlane, O'Callaghan, Monk, Robertson, and (lance-corporal in charge) Green.

All had won medals, and Monk and Byrne had also good conduct medals. Steel had upwards of ten years' service, and all the other men had upwards of twenty-one years' service. Good conduct badges they all had.

These war-and-good-conduct-decorated veterans were, with the exception of Steel, all entitled to pension, and the whole were on their way to England to be discharged. They had, moreover, only arrived at Nusseerabad from Mhow two months before. The distance between Nusseerabad and Khandalla is over 740 miles, 450 of which they were to have marched behind the camels that carried their kits, viz., to Nargaum, the nearest railway station—over the same ground as the "fatal march." None of the party, however, reached Nargaum in 1864. Private Monk was left behind at Nee-much, in an almost hopeless condition; Privates McFarlane and Steel died on the way; four only reached Mhow, where a veto was put on their further progress for that season: heat, exposure, and fatigue, acting on debilitated constitutions, had done their work.

All the world knows that no class of men stands so much in need of control as the old soldier, whose life has been spent in acquiring that perfection of military virtue in the ranks, unreflecting dependence on the will and judgment of others. And here were seven men, types of their class, unleashed from the trammels of twenty years' restraint, started, at the beginning of the deadly hot season, to perform a journey of nearly five hundred miles through the jungle-paths of India. Two of them lie down and die by the way-side, without medical assistance or help other than may be rendered by one ignorant man to another in his mortal extremity, and are put into a hole by the roadside by their comrades, while another owes his life to his proximity to a camp at the time of being struck down.

The friends of the deceased have been making inquiries respecting them, and may possibly appeal to the friends of the unrepresented in the next Parliament.

It has been stated in England in relation to the "fatal march from Mhow," that such mismanagement never occurred during the raj of the Honourable Company; it would be much safer to say that such mismanagement was never made public. AN OBSERVER.

LIGHTING OF BOMBAY WITH GAS.—On Saturday night, the 7th Oct., a portion of the town of Bombay was for the first time lighted with gas. When, in May last, the Bombay Gas Works were publicly inaugurated, it was expected that ere many weeks had elapsed the whole of the city would be lighted, but difficulties arose that thwarted the company's plans and deferred the completion of their works. It was not until Saturday, therefore, that it was possible to have a portion of the city lighted; and although that portion is necessarily circumscribed, yet ere long there is little doubt that Bombay will be as well lighted as any English town. On Saturday night the lamps in the Bhendy Bazaar, on the Esplanade, and in Church-street were lighted; and these alone were sufficiently numerous to excite the greatest wonder amongst large numbers of the natives. The lamps were lighted during the afternoon, and as the lamplighters went from lamp to lamp they were followed by crowds of inquisitive natives who gazed in mute astonishment at the new Western innovation.

THE CHOLERA.—It is with extreme regret we learn that cholera of a frightfully virulent type has broken out amongst the wing of H.M.'s 45th Regiment at Nee-much. Out of forty admissions into hospital, no less than thirty have proved fatal: seventy-five per cent. of deaths to admissions look to us more like a plague than a common or even extraordinary outburst of epidemic cholera. This dreadful ratio of deaths to attacks has so depressed the men's spirit, and thereby predisposed them to fall victims to the disease, that we believe a wing of the 33rd (the Duke of Wellington's) Regiment will immediately be ordered to march from Poona to relieve the wing of the 45th Regiment at Nee-much, which wing will come to Poona as early as possible next month. Strange that all the troops in Nee-much should be comparatively healthy, only two or three cases of sporadic cholera having occurred amongst them, while the more dangerous type of the disease has proved so fatal to the doomed wing of the 45th.—Poona Observer.—We learn by a letter dated the 1st October that cholera had again made its appearance in the lines of her Majesty's 106th Regiment at Nusseerabad. The whole regiment had moved out of the station and under canvas at five A.M. of that day. From Neemuch we learn that "the disease appears to have made great havoc among the troops; the regiment has been out under canvas during the month of September." And from Ajmere that "cholera has made its appearance. A few men of the European detachment were attacked with it."

—Delhi Gazette.

THE PREVARICATING WITNESSES.—The three witnesses who gave false evidence on Oct. 9 in a case at the sessions have been committed for trial; but as the sessions terminated before the indictments could be prepared, the case has been traversed to the next sessions. Mr. Macculloch was instructed to apply for bail on behalf of one of the prisoners; and Mr. Justice Anstey, in granting bail to the amount of Rs. 4,000 for each prisoner and two sureties in Rs. 2,000 each, said he could not lose sight of the fact that the bail of a Parsee prisoner, charged with the self-same offence, had just been estreated, as the prisoner had fled. The sympathy with crime which had been brought to light among the wealthy portion of the native community during the sessions was something awful to contemplate; indeed, it might, he feared, be said of the native inhabitants of Bombay at the present day, as it was of the English during the reign of Charles the First, that they broke their fasts and their oaths with the same peace of mind.

—Bombay Gazette.

THE FRAUDULENT BROKER.—The case of Cursetjee Dossabhoj, the broker charged with criminal breach of trust and cheating, in respect to the sale of twenty-three shares in the Albert Spinning and Weaving Company, was tried on Saturday, and resulted in a conviction followed by the severe sentence of ten years' transportation. From the prisoner's long standing as a broker, and his previous character, the trial excited great interest, and there were in the court at least twenty gentlemen connected with banks, besides most of the European brokers. The offence with which he was charged has been such a common one, but, at the same time, owing to the loose method of conducting share transactions, one so difficult of detection, that it is well an example has been made; at the same time, the general feeling with regard to Cursetjee's case is, that the sentence was unnecessarily severe, and, it is said, that a memorial to H. E. the Governor, praying for its revision, is being prepared.

—Times of India.

THE WAGHEER EXPEDITION.—The Times of India of Oct. 13, says:—This day the left wing of her Majesty's 23rd Native Light Infantry are embarking for service in Kattiawar. The right wing will shortly embark from Kurra- chee. The two Lieutenant-Colonels who are commandant and second in command will, it is said, remain at Dwarka, while the left wing, officered by such a "scratch pack" of officers as we alluded to some time ago—men good and true, no doubt, but utterly unknown to the men as the men are to them—will take the field under the military command (it is whispered) of Major Keating, v.c., Political Agent of the Province. If this heterogeneous body does not meet with signal disaster, his Highness the Guikowar's revolted subjects and their Mekkani allies will have sadly derogated from the wild valour which even Colonel Honner found it so difficult to tame. Are these Wagheers the Poles of Western India? They are not wild beasts; there must be some better way of settling this chronic difficulty than anything that can be done by the mixed multitude who are thus being sent to do what is the Guikowar's proper work.

VISITORS TO CASHMERE.—The following order has been issued from Simla, dated Sept. 20:—"The Government of India having determined to restrict the number of visitors to Cashmere to two hundred (200) annually, officers serving under the orders of the Commander-in-Chief, who may be desirous of travelling in the territories of the Maharajah of Jumbou, are recommended to intimate their wishes to the Secretary, Punjab Government, after the 1st January, as permission to visit Cashmere will be granted strictly according to priority of applications. In the event of an officer's leave being subsequently refused by the Commander-in-Chief, intimation will at once be made to the Punjab Government in order that the necessary permit may be issued to the next applicant on the registered list. It is to be understood that officers intending to proceed to Cashmere on privilege leave must previously obtain the requisite sanction from the Punjab Government.

REPORT UPON PUBLIC WORKS.—A report by the Accountant-General, Public Works Department of India, on the Public Works Budget-Estimate for 1865-66 has been published. The total estimated outlay on public works in India is stated at eleven millions sterling, being also the annual expenditure for the preceding three years, so that the total expenditure estimated to be spent on public works in four years is 44 millions of pounds sterling. Of the sum of 11 millions for 1865-66 £5,363,841 is set aside for public works, excluding enterprises "guaranteed" and "aided," and that sum is in excess of the amount for the previous year by nearly a million sterling, which again was nearly a million in excess of the average grant of the four years from 1859-60 to 1863-64. Of the increase under this head in the current year half a million is due to increase in the special grant made to Bombay in consideration of receipts to be realised by sales of land in connection with the removal of the ramparts of the old fortifications. Looking at the different objects on which that sum is to be expended we find that the grant for military works (£1,274,000) is nearly double that of the previous year; also that the grant for civil buildings is increased by about £280,000, while that for public improvement shows a reduction of £200,000. The large increase to the military estimate is to carry on to completion as fast as possible the permanent buildings required throughout India for the accommodation of the troops. The increase in the grant for civil buildings is in consequence of a demand for increased jail accommodation, especially in Bengal, Punjab, British Burmah, and the central provinces. Of the remaining six millions of "total estimated outlay" a sum of £36,000 is set aside to meet the expenditure on guaranteed irrigation works and unguaranteed railways. A sum of £207,425 is set aside to meet the expenditure on guaranteed railways. This makes a total State outlay of £5,667,425. A further sum of 1½ million is supplied by local funds, and the outlay on railways and irrigation works of which the interest is guaranteed by the State is £4,165,000.

INSOLVENCY AND MR. JUSTICE ANSTHEY.—Justice Anstey has been severe on reckless insolvents and time-bargainers, but not too much so. His manner is gruff, but his justice is sound and hedged round with a high moral tendency, or, more properly, a rogue-preventive power, which is likely to do good. Many a man who rushed to the Insolvent Court for the benefit of the Act, has crumpled up his schedule since he has learnt how Anstey manages the affairs of the court, and they prefer making the best settlement they can to suffering the infliction of Anstey's whitewash-brush. In fact, the other judges seem to have left the honour and glory of adjusting the lost balance of our commercial credit to Anstey, and well and quick is he performing it.—Bombay Correspondent of the Englishman.

THE BOMBAY BAR.—The question of pre-audience at the Bombay bar has been decided by the Chief Justice. It is now settled that the Acting Advocate General is only to have pre-audience when engaged on Crown business.

ALLOWANCES OF SUSPENDED OFFICIALS.

Extract from the proceedings of the Government of India in the Financial Department, dated Simla, Sept. 26, 1865.

Read a letter from the Government of Bengal, No. 668, dated Feb. 15, 1865, requesting that some definite rule may be laid down to regulate the allowances of ministerial and other officers of Government suspended from office pending inquiry into their conduct, and eventually restored; and to fix definitely the principle on which any period of such a suspension can be reckoned towards pension.

Read a circular from the financial department, No. 962, dated June 23, 1865, calling on the Governments of Madras and Bombay to furnish information as to the practice in those presidencies.

Read the replies from those Governments, No. 385 and 377, dated respectively April 26 and Aug. 8, 1865.

Resolution.—The Governor-general in Council pleased to pass the following rules:—

1. Subsistence to an unconvenanted servant who is suspended pending an inquiry into his conduct should be limited, before the result of the inquiry is known, to one-fourth of his salary, unless he be an European on pay exceeding Rs. 25, in which case the subsistence is to be allowed at one-fourth of salary to an amount not less than Rs. 25 monthly.

2. Should the officer be reinstated, he may, at the discretion of the local Government or of the head of department to whom the local Government may delegate such authority, be allowed full salary if he shall have been fully acquitted, or a portion of his salary if the result of the inquiry should be censure or admonition; but where censure or admonition is awarded, the subsistence allowance during suspension must be so adjusted as not to involve additional charge.

3. When the payment which the local Government may adjudge for the period of suspension to an officer who is reinstated involves additional expense, it must be separately provided for.

4. An officer whose suspension is followed by dismissal will not be allowed more than the subsistence which may be admissible to him under Rule 1 for the period that he was suspended.

5. The time passed under suspension pending inquiry is taken into account as service towards pension in cases of reinstatement: where suspension has been adjusted as a penalty, the period is disallowed.

Sept. 26.—No. 2,592a.—The Governor-general in Council is pleased to appoint Mr. H. Ives, a patrol on the Hoshungabad customs line, to be 4th class collector of customs, Chutteesgurh line, in the Central Provinces, from the date on which he may join his appointment at Raepore.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

MONDAY, November 6, 1865.

THE SCANDALS IN THE INNISKILLING KILLING DRAGOONS.

It is difficult for two men to be very intimate friends if their wives happen to be very intimate enemies; but peace and quietness at least may be preserved with a little discretion; and we know of no law which deprives military men of this advantage any more than civilians. Supposing in either case that the men have not interfered in the quarrel, they may still preserve outward courtesies to a certain extent, and supposing that they have made the affair their own, they may agree to be "cuts," if they think proper, upon all social occasions. But our readers who may have perused certain accounts which have appeared of late in these columns concerning the Inniskilling Dragoons—or rather the officers of that distinguished regiment—will see that military men may be denied this happy arrangement if they happen to have arbitrary commanding officers, or under circumstances of peculiar pressure exercised upon them in the regiment. It appears from the proceedings which have been very circumstantially narrated, that the wives of Captain Weatherly and Lieutenant Davies were on such bad terms—the former "calling the latter names"—that the husband of the aggrieved lady considered himself bound to notice the fact. But no particular harm need have been done by Mr. Davies quietly dropping Captain Weatherly's acquaintance so long as their respective duties were not interfered with in consequence. The mischief was made by the complaint of the captain of his brother officer failing to return his salute on the public drive, and by Colonel Crawley having made the mistake of entertaining the charge. We all know that when Colonel Dawkins refused to shake hands with Lord Rokeby the other day, on an occasion of a social meeting of a professional character, it was found impossible—with every desire to stretch the law—to make the omission a formal military offence. But Colonel Crawley most improperly chose to consider the omission of Mr. Davies in that light, and reprimanded that officer in most unjustifiable terms for his conduct. The commanding officer would have had good reason for "pulling up" Mr. Davies for his use of such language as "an infamous lie"—provoked though it was by Captain Weatherly's "explanation" that his wife had only said that Mr. Davies's wife was not a lady. But Colonel Crawley obviously failed to take proper action on that ground, the threats which he employed to the offending officer having simply reference to his omission to return the salute. The colonel, in fact, from the circumstances of the rencontre taking place in the orderly-room, had an opportunity for interference which he would not otherwise have possessed, and by the exercise of a little judgment and discretion he might have stopped the quarrel at that point. But it is evident that Mr. Davies was in the colonel's bad books, and was not intended to receive any favour.

That the affair would not end with the scene in the orderly-room was to be expected. It is wonderful, indeed, that Mr. Davies escaped unscathed for so long a period as from May to July. But the occasion was sure to come, and the little matter of the Court Journals was as fair a chance as could have been expected. It is declared in the impartial account furnished to the Delhi Gazette, that the "little black boy in the cupboard," upon whom the Pall Mall Gazette has been so facetious, was posted for observation by the sergeant in charge, and not by Captain Weatherly; but the latter, as President of the Library Committee, should have been aware of the means of detection resorted to, and he most certainly took a prominent part in the subsequent proceedings. And apart from the impropriety of the mode by which the evidence was obtained, Mr. Davies was most unfairly treated in not being allowed the benefit of the failure of that evidence in its most essential respect. The "little black boy in the cupboard" declared that he saw Mr. Davies enter the mess ante-room, remove two newspapers from beneath his stable-jacket, and deposit them among the other papers on the table. After his departure the two missing Court Journals, which he had declared had not been in his possession, were found on the table; but the boy could not say that these were the papers he had seen deposited; and Mr. Davies declares positively that they were not—the papers which he had returned to the mess being the Times of India and another journal which he named. This statement was corroborated by Mrs. Davies, who declared, on her honour, that she saw her husband, before leaving the house, place the papers in question under his stable-jacket, where he was in the habit of carrying such things. Whatever might be the value of the lady's evidence in a Court of Law, it should be of at least as much weight as that of the little black boy in a Court of Honour, even were there any discrepancy between the two. But it so happened that the statements were perfectly reconcilable; and, nevertheless, we find the Court of Inquiry accepting the little black boy's evidence in every particular, and rejecting that of both Mrs. Davies and her husband, though there would have been no inconsistency or improbability involved by accepting it also. It was in consequence of Mr. Davies's explanation being considered unsatisfactory that the case was handed up to the General commanding the division—upon whom, and not upon Colonel Crawley, must rest the blame of placing Mr. Davies under arrest—a measure which, we need scarcely remind our readers, was immediately reversed by the Presidency Commander-in-Chief. But even now there is a very pretty quarrel or two to be settled before this unfortunate affair can be considered at an end. Sir Charles Straubenzeel, we are told, accompanied his order for Mr. Davies's release with a strong "wiggling" of the other officers concerned in the proceedings. These, it seems, have manifested great indignation at the tone of the document in question, and have taken the remarkable course of calling upon Colonel Crawley to address a reply to head-quarters upon the subject, repudiating the sentiments imputed to them, &c., &c. Should the Colonel be so foolish as to lend himself to any such folly as this, we may safely suppose that things will be made worse instead of better; and in the meantime Captain Weatherly has introduced a further complication by horsewhipping the manager of a local bank—"before all his clerks"—for being the author of an obnoxious article upon the subject in the Deccan Herald!

In the end, it seems not improbable that Colonel Crawley will lose his command of the Inniskilling Dragoons, and a few other saddles also be emptied in the commissioned ranks of that regiment—all because one officer was not allowed to cease social intercourse with another officer who appears to have been at least an accomplice in insulting his wife—such a mode of resentment being nothing more than a right belonging to every man, a right continually exercised in the service as well as out of it, and against which there is no provision whatever in military law.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE LATE LIEUT.-GEN. SIR J. B. HEARSEY, K.C.B.—The colonelcy of the 21st Hussars is rendered vacant by the death of Lieutenant-general Sir John Bennett Hearsey, K.C.B., who died at 24, Rue Marquetra, Boulogne-sur-Mer, on the 23rd ult., from bronchitis, in his seventy-third year. Sir John Hearsey, who formerly belonged to the 6th Bengal Native Cavalry, had received the Indian war medal, with three clasps, for the Nepaul war (slightly wounded on three occasions), battle of Sectabuldee (dangerously wounded), and the siege and capture of Bhurtpore (slightly wounded). He commanded a cavalry division in the Punjab campaign of 1848-49, including the battles of Chillianwalla and Goojerat; and commanded all the cavalry in pursuit of the Sikhs and Afghans; and at the surrender of the Sikh army of 13,000 men and sixty-three guns, for which he received the medal with two clasps, and the Companionship of the Bath. Sir John was nominated a Knight Commander of the Bath for services during the Indian mutiny, when he commanded the Presidency division at Barrackpore, and dealt very effectually with a mutinous native corps. In 1841, having then served 34 years in India without furlough, he was presented by the Bengal Cavalry officers with a handsome silver vase, with the names of the battles in which the Bengal Native Cavalry had been distinguished, and also their own names inscribed thereon, as a testimonial of their esteem, and a recognition of his services in that branch of the Bengal Native Army. The deceased general's commissions bore date respectively as follows:—Coronet, 14th September, 1808; Lieutenant, 1st November, 1809; Captain, 31st August, 1819; Major, 19th November, 1835; Lieutenant-Colonel, 28th December, 1838; Colonel, 19th March, 1849; Major-General, 28th November, 1854; and Lieut.-General, 15th June, 1862.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for 35,00,000 rupees in bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 1st inst., at the Bank of England. The proportions allotted were:—To Calcutta, 19,16,000 rupees; to Madras, 5,84,000 rupees; and to Bombay, 10,00,000 rupees. The minimum price was as before, 1s. 11½d. on Calcutta and Madras, and 1s. 11¾d. on Bombay. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 11½d., will receive about 52 per cent., and on Bombay, at 2s. 0¼d., about 17 per cent.; above these prices in full. According to a notice from the India-office, it appears that the amount for which tenders for bills of exchange will be received at the Bank of England on Wednesday, the 15th instant, will be 35,00,000, of which not more than 10,00,000 rupees will be drawn on the Government of Bombay.

DESPATCH OF THE INDIA AND CHINA MAILS.—SOUTHAMPTON, Nov. 4.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Poonah, Captain Field, sailed hence with mails for Gibraltar, the Mediterranean, Egypt, Aden, Ceylon, India (except Bombay), and China. She took out 118 first and 60 second-class passengers, and on freight a general cargo, including 344 boxes of specie, value £96,815. 3s., for the following ports, viz.:—Suez, jewellery, £70; Galle, jewellery, £95; Madras, bar silver, £26,250; gold coin, £3,314. 8s.; gold thread, watches, &c., £1,048. 15s.; Calcutta, bar silver, £33,870; silver ware, &c., £1,390; Singapore, jewellery, £290; Hong Kong, dollars, £12,168; sundries, £1,079; Shanghai, dollars, £300; Calcutta, five franc pieces, £15,000; and for Alexandria, sovereigns, £2,000.

DEATH OF MRS. CAMERON.—The sympathy of the country will be painfully moved by the announcement of the death of Mrs. Cameron, the mother of Consul Cameron. Her health has been undermined, and she has at last sunk under the suspense and misery she so long endured in consequence of the cruel imprisonment and torture of her son. — Pall Mall Gazette.

CONSULAR APPOINTMENT.—(Foreign Office, Nov. 2.)—The Queen has been graciously pleased to appoint George West, Esq., now British Vice Consul at Suez, to be her Majesty's Consul at the same port.

THE REDUCTION OF THE MADRAS ARMY.—The military authorities at home have consented to the proposition of the Indian Government to reduce the strength of the Army in Madras by one battalion. The relief of the 1st battalion 18th Royal Irish, by the 2nd battalion 24th, from the Mauritius, is, however, being carried out, and the consequence of this step will be that the 80th Regiment will return to England in the spring, its place in Bengal being taken by one of the battalions now quartered in the Madras Presidency. The 80th will follow the 44th, 72nd, 54th, 56th, and 1st battalion 18th, already under orders for home.—Army and Navy Gazette.

THE HEAVY CALCUTTA AND CHINA MAILS.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Tanjore, Captain Brooks, with the above mails, and 120 passengers, arrived at Southampton on Saturday. She brings on freight five packages of specie, value £1,777 and a general cargo, including 1,573 bales of raw silk, value £140,000 sterling. The Tanjore experienced between Malta and Gibraltar strong head winds, along the coast of Spain N.W.E. gale and heavy head sea, across the Bay rain, and northerly fresh winds up the Channel, a decreasing northerly gale. On the 22nd the Tanjore spoke the Nyanza, 23rd the Mongolia, both for Alexandria.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.—The half-yearly meeting of the shareholders was held on Tuesday at the London Tavern. Mr. W. J. Hamilton was in the chair. The chairman moved the adoption of the report, the substance of which has already appeared, and congratulated the shareholders on the very satisfactory position of the company. The motion having been seconded by Mr. Frith, was carried unanimously. Mr. C. Packer was elected an auditor, and a vote of thanks to the chairman and directors closed the proceedings.

PASSAGE OF OFFICERS' WIVES.—A War-office circular has been received at Chatham Garrison, announcing that the Secretary of State for War, with the concurrence of the Secretary of State for India, has decided that the wives of general officers appointed to the staff in India, who may be unable through sickness to accompany their husbands to India, will have their passage paid at the public expense.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The India and China mail steamer Poonah takes out specie to the value of £92,842, of which £2,000 in gold is for Alexandria; £3,314 in gold and £75,120 in silver for India; and £12,408 in silver for China.

DR. LIVINGSTONE has delivered an address to the members of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, and to which the public were admitted. He gave a very comprehensive view of the physical geography of Central Africa, and of the ethnology of the inhabitants. He spoke of the slave trade as the only barrier to the civilisation of Africa, expressing his determination to devote all his energies to the establishment there of lawful commerce, and to make an opening for Christian missions. He explained in detail the geographical objects he will have in view in his forthcoming explorations.

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS

14, CATHERINE STREET, STRAND, LONDON.

The great superiority of the Billiard Tables manufactured by this Firm is fully attested by the fact of their Tables having been patronised by Royalty since the reign of George III., during which period they have been honoured also by the patronage of the principal Nobility and Gentry of England, nearly 250 of Her Majesty's and the Native Regiments at home and abroad, and more than one hundred of the principal London, Provincial, and Foreign Clubs.

BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

GIBSON AND COMPANY

Respectfully invite the attention of MILITARY MEN, EQUESTRIANS, and OWNERS OF HORSES, to their Newly-Invented EXPANDING SADDLE, which admits of ready adjustment to the size of any horse, creating a secure and easy seat without the slightest inconvenience to either horse or rider. The principle of EXPANSION and CONTRACTION comprises a simple arrangement of mechanism, which the saddle so perfect, that by merely turning a screw the pad is proportioned to the size and form of the animal, on which it firmly rests with a uniform pressure, and is securely retained in its position by means of an ordinary girth.

This invention has obtained the approval and distinguished patronage of HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, and from the very favourable opinions expressed by competent judges, and all who have had an opportunity of testing its merits, there is no doubt it will come into general use; indeed, its success is already established.

THE NEW THEORY IN RIFLES.

Lieutenant James Forsyth, in his excellent work, "The Sporting Rifle, &c.," first promulgated the startling theory that Rifles could be so constructed as to lessen the elevation by increasing the charge of powder. This theory, which the Advertiser has proven to be correct, alters the whole position of Rifles in favour of the sportsman. Formerly, with a high trajectory, the bullet which would have hit a tiger in a vital spot at 100 yards, would pass over his back at 25 or 50 yards. By the new system, as elaborated and perfected in DOUGALL'S LOCKFAST BREECHLOADERS, there is a point-blank range to 150 yards, combined with a velocity and stopping power hitherto unknown.—(See Times, 11th October, 1864.) No other Rifle possesses the same advantages.

street, Piccadilly, London.

SARSAPARILLA.

WILKINSON'S (late BRIDGES)
ESSENCE OF FLUID EXTRACT OF RED JAMAICA SARSAPARILLA is a preparation for its Purity, and marked superiority, daily prescribed by the Faculty for Lymphatics of the Blood, Affections of the Liver, Constitutional Debility, Attenuation of Body, as an Alterative Medicine at the Change of the Seasons, and for freeing the system from the effects of Mercury.

In India and the Colonies it is extensively used to prevent taking cold, and is incidentally to Tropical Fevers, and as a regenerator of the system after sickness invaluable.

"A superior preparation, that may always be relied on."
—Sir Astley Cooper.

"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.

"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medical Review.

"I latterly, in consequence of much debility, &c., subsequent to Cholera, I have freely used Bridge's Sarsaparilla myself, with complete benefit and success."—J. Foote, F.R.C.S.

Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter pints. One pint equal to eight pints of the ordinary preparation.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against cheap preparations of Sarsaparilla, when instead of being what they profess, are nothing but a decoction of common herbs, sweetened with molasses, and flavoured with American Winter Green. The genuine has "Thos. Wilkinson (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London," engraved on each bottle.

AGREEABLE SEIDWITZ POWDER in one bottle, protected by a case with measure and spoon included. This preparation is highly recommended, not only as a Mild Aperient, but to allay Fever, Thirst, &c.

AROMATIC TINCTURE OF QUINIDINE for the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria. No person exposed to the influence of or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for it taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria. Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by Thos. Wilkinson (late Wilson, Bridge, & Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

ING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR

TEETH.—This invaluable remedy has preserved hundreds of children when their first past recovery from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as milk, and tending to produce the teeth with ease, and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery, where there are young children, for if a child wakes in the night with pain in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this remedy during the last twenty-five years is attested by numerous testimonials, and under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and giving parts of Mrs. Johnson's Balm, &c. Parents will be induced to buy it, and to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARKER and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS,

Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had,
and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips
being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 225, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.;

PLASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inelastic, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price, 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

CHILDREN'S WORM TABLETS

(KEATING'S).—The recently-discovered and long remained for worm disorders in children and adults has now been concentrated in the form of a purely Vegetable Sweetmeat.
The Tablet is eagerly taken by children, and one to three given twice or thrice a week, will effect a safe and certain cure.

Prepared and sold in Tins, 1s. 14d. and 2s. 9d. each, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, &c., 79, St. Paul's Churchyard, London, E.C., and Retail by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Vendors in the World.

Observe the words "KEATING'S WORM TABLETS" are engraved on the Government Stamp of each Tin, without which none are genuine.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

—These potent remedies constitute a materia medica in themselves, for there is no internal or external disorder controllable by medicine for which the one or the other of them is not a positive remedy—scrophulous, tumours, scrofula, scirrhus, cancer, asthma, rheumatism, gout, and dropsy entirely subside and disappear under the action of these potent medicines; and in cases of indigestion, sick headache, bile, liver complaints, dyspepsia, and other disorders originating in the internal organs, the Pills produce the most astonishing results imaginable. The student of nature knows how simple are her ways, and one preparation can throw out all the medicine from the blood, and cause it to flow out—art triumphant, because it admits the supremacy of nature.

The majority of our Dyes are entirely soluble in boiling water, and will dye without the addition of other ingredients.
ANILINE DYES.—“I shall commence my observations on dyeing, by referring especially to the remarkable and beautiful colours derived from coal tar, the introduction of which into this art may be said to constitute the chief distinction, as far as dyeing is concerned, between the present and the former Exhibition, creating, in fact, a new era in the industrial art.” Coal tar colours deserve attention for their power, as well as for the facility with which they may be applied, for one grain will deeply tint half a gallon of water, and little or no skill is required for their application.”—Vide Report by Grace Calvert, Esq., F.R.S., Ph.D., Honorary Professor of Chemistry.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE have received our usual files of papers, from Calcutta to the 8th of October, and Madras to the 13th of that month—only one day later, as far as Calcutta is concerned, than those received by the Bombay mail.

The City of Palaces was still under the influence of the holidays, and a dead calm prevailed in the sea of intelligence. The affairs of Bhootan occupied a little attention, but very little indeed. The old game, the Hurkaru considers, is apparently to be played over again between the Deb Rajah and his recalcitrant chief, the Tongsoo Penlow. The former is wearied of the state of submission in which the latter desires to keep him, and has accordingly issued a proclamation to all his "barons bold" to meet him on "Tassiusudon's heights," to concert measures for the coming struggle with the British. Irritated at this sudden display of energy on the part of the monarch, Tongsoo Penlow has declared that he will take no part in the programme, but will fight or yield as his individual interests may happen to require. In the meantime, the writer considers, the action of the Government is not altogether free from blame. It is still proceeding upon the assumption that the work before the troops is comparatively an easy one, and little is, therefore, done in the way of either throwing a larger force into Western Bhootan, where the game will really have to be played out, or in securing correct and reliable information as to the routes in the interior.

The Eagle Speed inquiry has resulted in Captain Heath, of the Lady Elgin, who acted the principal part in the abandonment of the coolies, being deprived of his certificate—the most severe sentence, we presume, which could have been awarded, but a very lenient one as regards deserts. The obstinacy of the Marine Department, in not providing an inner floating light in the channel of the river, has been very properly exposed, and the omission is to be supplied for the future. Had such a light been provided, it is considered that not a soul on board the Eagle Speed would have been lost.

The negotiations which the Government have been carrying on for some time with the Court of Katmandoo, for the repression of crime on the border territory between the British possessions and Nepaul, have come to rather a lame and impotent conclusion. The Resident had an interview with Jung Bahadoor on the subject, when His Excellency expressed himself highly favourable to the British proposals; but the result of a correspondence upon the subject was that the Durbar would not agree that Nepaulese offenders should be surrendered for trial in the English courts. They promise, however, an efficient system of police of their own in furtherance of the object.

Murders among Europeans appear to be on the increase in Calcutta. A ruffian has beaten his wife so severely that she died. We are inclined to think that crimes of the kind, committed by our own countrymen, are treated too leniently in India—unless the victim be a native, when every now and then it is found necessary to make a severe example.

Madras, as regards news, has holidays nearly all the year round. There are more items than usual, however, by this mail, which will be found elsewhere. The horse-whipping case at Bangalore is making some noise in what are called "military circles," where the cantonment magistrates' remarks upon the cornet's conduct are not much relished. There has been a great rise in the Madras markets—principally on account of cotton. Particulars will be found elsewhere.

One report in connection with Madras has a home source. It is considered probable that Lord Napier will be the next Governor, in succession to Sir William Denison.

The next arrival from India will be the Bombay Mail, which is due on the 20th inst., but has not yet been telegraphed from Suez.

Among home news we much regret to include an accident to Sir Charles Wood in the hunting-field, which was at first believed to be of a dangerous character. We are assured, however, on later authority, that the right hon. baronet was not so much hurt as was supposed, and that a few days will restore him to his accustomed health. The Army and Navy Gazette of this day states that the accident was nothing but an ordinary "cropper," and that some scratches about the forehead are the whole of the injuries sustained.

While referring to Sir Charles Wood, we may mention a report current in the clubs that his labours are to be transferred from the India-office to the Admiralty, in which latter department Sir Charles has had experience in former times.

The Matella Coffee Estates Company of Ceylon (Limited) has just issued a very attractive prospectus, which will be found in another column. The objects of the company are the acquisition and working of coffee estates, and the sale of their produce. Three valuable estates have already been purchased, and 614 acres have been planted, 552 being in full bearing, and the remainder will be so next year. Considering the extraordinary prosperity of coffee cultivation, and the immense profits made by other companies engaged in it, the prospects of the present undertaking appear remarkably good; and the names on the direction are an assurance that its interests will not be neglected.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE INNISKILLING DRAGOONS.—The Army and Navy Gazette of this day contains the following:—"We believe that the Duke of Cambridge is only waiting for the complete official correspondence to be placed before him, in order to deal with the unfortunate affairs of the Inniskilling Dragoons. We trust that when he has consulted deliberately he will act decisively in whatever way he may think just and most advisable in the interests of the service. We are informed of some circumstances connected with the later occurrences in the Inniskillings. It would appear that it was only a few days before the last mail left Bombay that Major-general Green, who commanded at Mhow, ordered all the officers of the Inniskilling Dragoons to assemble. With the brigade staff officers, they did so; and then the General told them that he was ordered by the Commander-in-Chief at Bombay to read to them his remarks on the subject of the officer's remonstrance on his, the Commander-in-Chief's, late decision regarding Lieut. Davies. Among other things he was glad to observe from the letters of the officers generally that most of them had nothing to do with the espionage, but, on the other hand, he, the Commander-in-Chief, was justified in what he had formerly said on the subject, in so far as that four of the officers had wished this espionage to be established, and especially Captain Weatherley, had stated that it was the wish of the dining members that it should take place. The Commander-in-Chief then went on and analysed the whole of the evidence, and said from it he came to the conclusion that there was not a shadow of foundation to prove that Mr. Davies had been seen to put the Court Journals down in the reading room, or had them in his possession, "and he honourably acquitted him of the whole of the affair;" and the Commander-in-Chief advised the officers to behave to Lieut. Davies in the same way as to any other brother officer, and on no account to continue keeping him in Coventry. This letter occupied four foolscap pages; when it had been read, General Green intimated to the officers that they might go away, with the exception of the field officers, who were to remain. The General then read another letter from the Commander-in-Chief, which was very nearly as follows:—"He, the Commander-in-Chief, said as nearly all the officers of the regiment present at Mhow had forwarded letters to him, commenting on his decision, such conduct appeared to him very like a combination of the officers to set discipline aside. He alluded especially to the letter of Colonel Crawley as highly insubordinate, and of so grave a nature that he intended forwarding it on to higher authority, and also the letters of Major Thesiger and Major Wirgman." The Commander-in-Chief said that "the discipline of the British Army could not be kept up if such letters were allowed."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SATURDAY, November 11, 1865.

A MYSTERIOUS DESPATCH.

A FEW months since, in commenting upon the case of the Talookdars of Oude, we published the substance of an official despatch on the subject not included in the Oude Blue-book, but which we had good reason to believe authentic. It is addressed by Colonel Durand, on the part of the Supreme Government, to Mr. Davies, on his appointment to the Financial Commissionership in Oude, and is dated September 15, 1864. It declares that the Viceroy "views with much displeasure the system which has sprung up in Oude since the mutinies of conferring upon Talookdars the sole proprietary rights in lands, to the exclusion of all tenants' rights; thus placing the sole power in the hands of an aristocracy who, until very recently, were our open and avowed enemies. This system," continues the Colonel, "has been based upon a mistaken policy. While his Excellency is willing to concede to the aristocracy of Oude all the privileges to which they are by hereditary right entitled, he cannot consent to place in their hands irresponsible power, thereby subjecting the tenants to an evil nowhere else existing in India. A total revision of the sunnuds therefore becomes necessary. Your first duty will be to investigate carefully all claims to proprietary rights, recording each case separately. Claims that have been in abeyance for upwards of twenty years need not be interfered with." Mr. Davies is then directed to "report to Government each district separately, in a tabular form, similar to the reports on the Punjab jaghires;" and he is "authorised to correspond with the Foreign Department concerning all matters relating to financial matters in Oude." The despatch concludes with the expression of his Excellency's "fullest reliance on Mr. Davies' ability to carry out the measures now proposed in a masterly manner, without respect of persons," and the announcement that it is intended, "as soon as the land tenures in Oude have been adjusted, to abolish the Chief Commissionership, and place the province under the control of the Lieutenant-governor of the North-West Provinces."

The importance of the declaration of policy here conveyed—made before the decision of the Calcutta Council on the subject, and opposed as it is to Sir Charles Wood's subsequent statement, that after a searching inquiry no trace could be found of the supposed rights of hereditary occupancy—need scarcely be pointed out; and Mr. Davies having since affirmed, in an official circular, that the despatch in question was never received by him, the genuineness of the document has naturally been called in question. By several writers in India—principally "our own correspondents" in Oude—it is denounced as a forgery; but it is curious that those who so denounce it are in favour of the policy which it avows. Here, for instance, is a specimen from a letter in a Bombay paper, referring to the appearance of the despatch in the Press, which, with the Standard and the Morning Herald, published it in common with ourselves:—"What a rascally piece of fabrication that was which the Press published, and which was evidently the work of some one in Oude. Mr. Davies' most unqualified contradiction of it will teach the Press to be careful in future how it allows itself to be imposed on again by designing scoundrels. No more incendiary a statement could have been put forward than that Sir John Lawrence desired a revision or recision of the talookdaree sunnuds, and that Mr. Davies had been instructed accordingly. Mr. Davies has promptly denied ever having received any such instructions, and the lie thus directly given to the statement will at least have the effect of destroying all belief in such other statements which the Press or any other London or Indian journal may put forth in future. It is not likely that Mr. Davies will interfere much with existing arrangements, but there cannot be a doubt that sooner or later the whole of the talookdaree tenures will be subjected to the strictest investigation. The whole system is rotten."

Supposing that the concluding statements, which we have marked in italics, be true, the assumed fabrication of the despatch has, after all, only anticipated the instructions which Sir John Lawrence ought to issue, if he has not done so; and the injury done to the Government is not, therefore, very great, however unjustifiable may be the act in itself. This consideration is, however, apart from the question of the authenticity of the document, with regard to which one fact is important—that although Mr. Davies has denied receiving it, the Governor-general has made no disclaimer of his own alleged share in the transaction. Until such a disclaimer be made, from the highest authority, the charge of forgery cannot be sustained. Moreover, a very brief examination of the correspondence of about the same period, contained in the Blue-book, will show that the instructions here purporting to be given to Mr. Davies are thoroughly consistent with the opinions of Sir John Lawrence then expressed; and, but for the fact that it anticipates the decision of the Council, and even of the Advocate-general, the despatch would seem to have a natural place in the collection. Indeed, on the 19th of September, four days after the date of the document in debate, we find the following extract (the only portion of the communication published) of a letter from the Governor-general to Sir Charles Wood:—

"The subject of the land tenures in Oude has engaged our attention, and a despatch will be addressed to you as soon as we are in receipt of the Advocate-general's opinion on certain points connected therewith, which we have considered it necessary to refer to him. Meanwhile, we have not deemed it expedient to delay giving Mr. Wingfield the assistance which he requires and has asked for."

One supposition is the not unnatural one that the despatch was suppressed by the Home Government. But we have good reason to believe that Sir Charles Wood knew nothing of its existence until a copy was shown to him by a member of the House of Commons, and that he immediately forwarded it to Sir John Lawrence for an explanation, which does not seem to have arrived. The only effect of Sir Charles Wood's communication, apparently, is the disclaimer of Mr. Davies to which we have referred. For ourselves, as being responsible, in common with some of our contemporaries, for the publication of the substance of the document, we may here repeat our previous statement, that we accepted it on what appeared excellent authority, of whose good faith we are still assured. The supposition that the document was forged, either in India or in this country, is scarcely compatible with the consistency to which we have referred as existing between it and the published correspondence on the subject; for the despatch was received in this country in March last, long before the issue of the Blue-book, which might have supplied the material; having been obtained, we are informed, by more or less direct means, from the Foreign-office in Calcutta!

"AN HONOURABLE MAN."

Under the above title the Friend of India has an article upon a question arising out of the Hon. Ashley Eden's unfortunate mission to Bhootan, of which the following is the most important part:—

"The Westminster Review declared that Mr. C. U. Aitchison, in a precis of the Bhootan papers in the Foreign-office, wilfully suppressed that Mr. Eden had represented to the Government, at a very early stage of his progress, the unfavourable results of his mission; and that, because Colonel Durand, the Secretary, replied he 'did not think the state of affairs unfavourable,' the whole responsibility of the further advance of the Envoy rests with the very Government which afterwards rebuked him for advancing. Such a charge against a brother secretary, Mr. Eden must have been well aware was the most serious that could be brought, involving as it did forever the private character and public reputation of the most distinguished of the competition civilians. It was based by the well-tutored Reviewer on Mr. Eden's elaborate defence of his conduct, dated 25th July. If it was true that Mr. Eden had represented these difficulties and had been instructed to advance, the letters were not in the Foreign-office, Mr. Aitchison never saw them, and they formed no part of the Blue-book published by the Secretary of State. In alluding to this matter a fortnight ago we said there might have been a private or demi-official correspondence between Eden and Colonel Durand, and if so it ought to be published, since Mr. Eden had referred to it in a public letter. Mr. Aitchison seems, naturally enough, to have taken the same view. In defence of his reputation he applied to the Government of India officially for information as to the existence of the demi-official letters, and for their publication if they existed. The Government of India has, we believe, informed him that they do exist, and has recorded a minute entirely acquitting him of the charges brought by Mr. Eden and his unscrupulous supporters. The demi-official correspondence is to be put upon record in the Foreign-office, and sent to the Secretary of State, so that, when the next Blue-book on Bhootan is published in England, it may appear.

"In referring to these letters in a public despatch Mr. Eden committed, as every public man well knows, the most heinous breach of official etiquette. Such letters are unavoidable in public life, and Sir C. Wood has often employed them to neutralise despatches written under the pressure of his Council and against his views. Lord Canning suffered grievously from them, especially in the White Mutiny, of which he was made the scapegoat. But he never allowed the public to know of their existence, confining himself to similar letters under which Sir C. Wood must have often winced. Did Mr. Eden commit a breach of the strictest law of official life and cause a distinguished member of his own service to be grossly traduced, as an injured man under the pressure of the stern necessities of self-defence; or did he thus act in the belief that his audacious and unsupported assertion would be unchallenged, and he would have the benefit of this really baseless but seemingly sound defence in his great straits? It pains us to be obliged to have to say of any English gentleman in India, that all the facts show he was guilty of the latter course. Will it be believed that these letters justify a far severer condemnation of Mr. Eden's conduct than the Under-Secretary calmly and officially passed in his precis? When the Secretary of State publishes the letters answered by Colonel Durand, to which the Envoy alludes in his tardy defence of 25th July, the public will be able to judge what were the difficulties to which Colonel Durand referred when he said they were 'not unfavourable to a successful issue.' Mr. Eden had reported that the Dalimkote Soubah had received him with honour, firing constant salutes. He expressed the belief that even if a split in the Bhootan Durbar took place, though unfavourable to the progress of the mission in some respects it would be favourable in others, since both parties would be likely to court the Envoy's favour. The only difficulty he anticipated was rationing the camp. That was the state of affairs Colonel Durand referred to as not unfavourable to a successful issue. We do not hesitate to say that the publication of all the letters side by side with Mr. Eden's official report of 21st April will prove that, in his eagerness not to be kept from pushing on, he concealed every difficulty except that of rations, and represented every circumstance as most favourable.

"In the whole course of our experience, it has never been our lot to read or to deal with a case in which conduct so contemptible on the part of a public man has been defended by means which we cannot characterise as they deserve. Mr. Aitchison's reputation has been most nobly vindicated by the Government of India. The Honourable Ashley Eden's we leave to the public."

The letter referred to from Government is as follows:—

No. 1,909.

From the Secretary to the Government of India, to C. U. Aitchison, Esq., late Under-Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

Simla, Sept. 20, 1865.

Sir,—Your letter, dated 14th instant, having been under consideration of the Right Hon. the Governor-General in Council, I have received his Excellency's command to communicate, for your satisfaction, the following reply:—

2. The statement contained in your precis regarding the Bhootan Embassy is entirely borne out by the records of my office. There is no letter, public or demi-official, upon the records, nor was any received in the office, at the period referred to, other than those you have noted in the extract at the beginning of your letter.

3. You are doubtless aware that certain demi-official communications were received by the Viceroy and the Secretary. These will now be brought upon record officially, and copies of the same will be transmitted at an early date to the Secretary of State, for the information of Her Majesty's Government.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant,

(Signed) W. MUIR,
Secretary to the Government of India.

On this the Englishman makes the following remarks:—

"As requested, we publish this morning the correspondence between Mr. C. U. Aitchison and the Foreign Secretary, which appears in our correspondence columns. This correspondence simply shows that no official letter had been received in the Foreign Secretariat when Mr. Aitchison drew his precis, not referred to by him. We are quite willing to believe that the demi-official communications, referred to by the Secretary as having been received by the Viceroy and the Secretary during that period, were kept from Mr. Aitchison's knowledge. At the same time, we believe that there is not the least doubt that Mr. Eden informed the Government of his departure, and kept them fully acquainted with his progress. The correspondence brings to light the singular fact that communications from Mr. Eden, which it is now considered proper to transmit to the Secretary of State, have been suppressed for upwards of a year."

ADMINISTRATION OF OUDE.

We have had for some time on our table the annual report on the administration of the Province of Oude for last year, but the discussion of topics of greater and more general interest compelled us to let the volume stand by. In this dull week, however, when Calcutta looks something like Tadmor in its solitude, Oude may very possibly furnish food for thought and comment. We naturally turn to the political section, not because we think it possible that it may supply stirring tales of incursions by border tribes and dashing raids by truculent mountaineers, but because of the general barrenness of the sections around it, which deal with "excise" and "land-tax" and other such dreary stuff. It appears that there have been one or two differences of opinion with the Nepaul Government as to certain boundary lines which have been laid down between the countries, but these are said to have been of little importance, whereas the restrictions which have been imposed upon trade by the Court of Khatmandoo are productive of serious losses and inconveniences. The Nepaulese Government had prohibited its subjects from taking their goods into Oude, with a view to compelling all British subjects to repair to Nepal-gunge to purchase Nepaulese products and sell their own. The consequence is, that the bazaars within British territory which were in a flourishing condition not long ago, have now been nearly ruined. It is added that the subject has been referred to the Supreme Government, but we scarcely see what it can do in the matter. The Court of Nepaul is a tolerably pachydermatous one, and has more than once already turned a deaf ear to the charmings of this Government, and it is not likely now to resign a system by which it avowedly benefits, and by which its people are advantaged. It is true that it is a very shortsighted one, but Jung Bahadoor's visit to England did not make a finished political economist of him, whatever else it might have done. It taught him, doubtless, the gigantic strength and resources of Great Britain, and silently inculcated the necessity of holding a "calm sough" instead of falling out with so unpleasantly powerful a neighbour, but the great Minister of Nepaul and de facto king of the country, did not form the acquaintance of that excellent lady Mrs. Marcett, and is not, therefore, able to see that in the long run the policy he has adopted must prove detrimental to his country.

The report next turns to the Mahomedans of Oude. Ever since the mutinies this section of the population has given the Government a great deal of trouble, and caused the public considerable uneasiness throughout the Bengal Presidency. The terrible failure of their grand coup to butcher us all and recover the sovereignty of India has only taught them to conspire with greater caution and circumspection. There is now no Poorbeah army to corrupt, and there is no great personage about whom to rally, unless it be the wretched debauchee at Garden Reach; and so they have put the finger of patience between the teeth of conspiracy, and are incessantly brooding over disappointed hopes, and visionary prospects of vengeance and triumph. Plausible, courteous, and smooth-tongued, it is impossible to believe that we have conspirators in such men, and yet the revelations at Umballah made us lay our hands on one, of whose fidelity and loyalty the late Opium Agent at Patna had not a shadow of doubt, and whose conduct and deportment towards the officials with whom he transacted business were unimpeachable. That this hatred to the British Government is the feature by which the Wahabee is more particularly distinguished is admitted, but it is equally beyond doubt that no sincere and conscientious Moslem can be altogether free from the taint of disloyalty. The fermentation caused by the Sittana campaign has, to some extent, subsided, and we are glad to believe that the Government is not ignorant of the fact that Mahomedan India is sleepless though quiet. When our arms were crushing the endeavours of fanaticism in the defiles of Sittana, several bands of faqueers arrived at Lucknow from the Punjab; they stated that they had come to bathe first at Adjudia and then at Allahabad; but as the political horizon looked murky towards the West, it is not surprising that the officials of Lucknow looked upon these men with suspicion, and carefully watched their proceedings. We are glad, however, to learn that nothing was elicited to show that their advent had any political significance. India is too deeply indebted to Punjabees to receive any tales of their disloyalty without the greatest hesitation and distrust. When their co-religionists were lapping the blood of Christians in the N.W.P. and Oude, they execrated them in tones both loud and deep, and testified to the honesty of this outburst by sabreing and bayoneting them wherever they found them in arms against the Government under whose banners they themselves fought and bled. The Punjab Cavalry hesitated as little to run a Mahomedan traitor through as a Poorbeah sepoy whom the latter had deluded. It is gratifying, therefore, to learn that these bands of faqueers had nothing else in view than the professed object of their journey, i.e., a quiet pilgrimage to Adjudia and Allahabad, at a time when their co-religionists in Patna had been arming the Sittana fanatics through the instrumentality of a commissariat contractor at Umballah, were warring on the heights of Ambeyla against the English infidel.

The attention of the Chief Commissioner of Oude appears to have been called to the exorbitant expenditure which attends marriages among the Talookdars. The same subject was taken in hand in the Punjab not long ago, when the Chiefs and Rajahs of that province were induced to consent to certain conditions for the more economical regulation of such expenses. The Talookdars of Oude have subscribed to the following conditions, but the Chief Commissioner adds that it will be difficult, in fact impossible, to enforce them unless the Rajpoot Chiefs of Rajpootana, Mynpooree, and Rewa can be induced to co-operate:—

"That no Chuttreya should borrow, or help to borrow, of another, superfluous paraphernalia on occasions of celebrating marriages, such as elephants, horses, camels, &c."

"That the bridegroom's father should take no money from the bride's father, more than would simply suffice to entertain the party accompanying him at the marriage."

"That the Chuttreyas should give their daughters in marriage to none but those of equal rank."

"That the marriage expenses should not exceed one-half of the annual income of the contracting parties."

"That this covenant be binding for two years, unless the Chuttreyas in the North-Western Provinces adopt it for their guidance. The honorary secretary was requested to take steps to obtain the concurrence of the Chuttreya clans in the North-Western Provinces to the covenant."

The transition from marriage expenses to female infanticide is unfortunately easy in this country. Mr. Wingfield states that inquiries leave no room to doubt that this inhuman practice still prevails, especially among the higher caste Rajpoots in the east of Oude. It was found in 611 villages in Pertabgurh that there were only 2,081 girls to 6,012 boys. There is, however, a general impression that the crime has materially diminished of late years, and this opinion is fortified by the census returns of between two and three hundred villages, "which show the proportion of girls under one year of age in Rajpoot to those in non-Rajpoot villages, to be as 63 to 91, while under four years of age the proportion was only 45 to 87." Here also, we may say, that unless the principal Rajpoot clans in other parts of the country co-operate with their brethren in Oude, and put down the chief cause of female infanticide, viz., the ruinous expense of marrying daughters, no permanent change will, or can, be effected. The expedient of quartering extra police on all villages where infanticide is proved by the marked disproportion of the sexes, is doubtless a good one, but it is on every account desirable that the chiefs should be induced to take this matter more energetically in hand, and cause the hideous practice to be abandoned, by the introduction of measures which will strike at the root of the evil.—Hurkaru.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MILITARY ITEMS.—Major-general Showers returned to Fort William on Thursday evening from Berhampore. He is still suffering from illness, and has not yet re-assumed his divisional command.—By the death of Lieut.-general Salter, just reported, Major-general Wheeler, commanding the Meerut division, will succeed to colonel's allowances. This prize he will thus obtain after forty-seven years' service. So much for the assertion which Lord Dufferin ventured lately to make in the House of Commons—that whereas colonel's allowances were ordinarily obtained in forty-five years, they are now (through the beneficent arrangements made by Sir Charles Wood) gained in thirty-nine years.—The command of the 43rd N.I., vacant by the death of Major Mayne, has been given to Major S. B. Cookson, lately appointed to organise the Bhootan Cooly Corps.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief will leave Simla on the 15th of September, accompanied by the Quartermaster-general and Military Secretary. He will be at Umballa on the 17th, and at Meerut about the 20th, visiting Landour and Roorkee en route. The remainder of the staff will be at Meerut on the 27th. From Meerut, His Excellency will visit the stations lying adjacent to the railway, including Delhi and Agra. The Government, at the recommendation of the Commander-in-Chief, has conferred the local rank of Major-general on Brigadier-general Tytler, C.B., to take effect from the 1st October, and to continue during the time he holds command of the Bhootan field force. A second in command, with local rank of Brigadier-gen., has also been allowed, with an Assistant Adjutant-general, and an A.D.C. We hear that the following officers will be gazetted to these appointments:—Brigadier-general Turner, C.B., Peshawur; Lieutenant-colonel Wright, A.A.G.—his service on the divisional staff at Peshawur having just expired; Lieutenant Beaumont, H.M.'s 80th Foot. Major-general Tytler, in addition to his present staff, will be allowed an Assistant Adjutant-general. Captain K. J. W. Coghill will be appointed to this post. Captain Norman, Assistant Quartermaster-general at the Presidency, will join the force in Bhootan.

THE NEW SIMLA CLUB.—The correspondents of the papers are still attacking this scheme for its exclusiveness. One of them remarks:—"It is no novelty to have United Service Clubs, and Army and Navy, and Rag and Famiah, and Travellers and Orientals, and Athenians, and the like classes, forming themselves into clubs; but in this country, where the eligibles beyond the pale of the services are so few, the exclusiveness intended is not creditable to the promoters of this club. Perhaps the idea is to make Simla altogether a place of residence for members of H.M.'s service alone. Members of Council are, it seems, to be eligible without ballot; they are the superior deities of this community of demigods, and require no scrutiny. The prospectus does not say whether this means the Executive Council only: this should be amended or explained, for there is the Legislative Council, with two European and three native members not on the rolls of the chosen people. Only imagine the horror of admitting two merchants into this exquisite society, without ballot even! Fancy the Rajah of Burdwan, or of Vizianagaram, walking into this club, with mouthful of paun, in skull-cap and general deshabille, calling for hookahs, quite at home, under the exclusive rules! The oversight would then be evident."

NEWS FROM LAHORE.—A letter contains the following:—"Our commissioner, Mr. Cooper, who left at the beginning of the month on a visit to Murree and Cashmere, is said to have met with an accident up-hill by breaking his leg, which will prevent his resuming his duties so early as expected. In the meantime Mr. A. Brandreth officiates as commissioner. I hear rumours of the probability of our Volunteer rifle corps, the first in efficiency and the oldest in India, and of which Sir Robert Montgomery was so proud, coming to an end—a catastrophe every one here most sincerely regrets, not merely for the amusement and recreation it afforded us all through the winter months, but for the moral effect it undoubtedly exercised over the ill-disposed portion of the population. The cause of its being likely to be broken up is said to be owing to the commanding officer's objection to recommend the present officers for regular commissions, which, according to the new constitution of Volunteer corps, I believe is necessary. This is deemed a slur on the body who elected them, at which they have taken umbrage."

THE KING OF BURMAH AND MADAME D'ORGONI.—Who has not heard of M. D'Orgoni, the French adventurer who went to Ava some time ago to make a fortune, and would have made it, too, if death had not cut short his career? We believe he made a great noise at the Court of the Golden Foot about his extraordinary influence at the Tuilleries, and all that sort of thing, by which Royal tigers in the East are generally tamed. At any rate, he succeeded in securing from the King the monopoly of exporting earth oil, engaging to pay his Majesty the annual sum of Rs. 1,20,000, in return for which that potentate was to make over to him monthly 3,00,000 viss (whatever that may be) of earth oil. The enterprising Frenchman having died, his widow intimated to the King her intention of carrying on the engagement, having completed the necessary arrangements. Common gallantry, to say nothing of humanity to a widow and her children, ought to have secured his Majesty's consent, but, unfortunately for the lady, he had heard that the value of earth oil had greatly "ris," and so he quietly quashed the monopoly, and issued his orders for the sale and exportation of all the earth oil which had been produced already. The distressed lady proceeded to Mandalay to try the effect of a personal interview, but his Majesty had already received an offer of Rs. 1,50,000 per annum for the monopoly, and so nothing came of her last cast. A correspondent of the Rangoon Gazette, from whose letter we have gleaned the foregoing facts, adds, that every article which is produced in Burmah Proper, and which can be profitably disposed of in British Burmah, is bought and sold on his Majesty's account by his agents or factors. He has put his hand on wheat, gram, cutch, timber, and cotton, and now, hearing of the enhanced value of earth oil, has grasped that also. We pay this gentleman seven or eight lacs of rupees in the shape of frontier customs.

MOVEMENTS OF BRITISH REGIMENTS.—Intelligence has been received from Madras, that on the arrival of the 2nd Battalion of her Majesty's 24th Regiment from the Mauritius, where they are now stationed, the corps would be despatched to Rangoon, to relieve the 3rd Battalion of her Majesty's 60th Royal Rifles, which would proceed to the coast and disembark at Madras. The 24th were to leave the Mauritius in October, and allowing six weeks for the voyage, they would reach India towards the end of November, and Rangoon about the middle of December. A fine selection could be made in that month of ships in this port, for the conveyance of the gallant Rifles to Fort St. George. A couple of steamers, the Madras and the Arracan, might be employed to facilitate the movements of the sailing vessels across the Bay of Bengal at that period of the year.—Rangoon Times, Sept. 9.

THE RICE CROP.—We regret to learn from the Rangoon papers, that the King of Siam has determined not to remove the restriction which he imposed on the exportation of rice, until it is certain that a fair crop will be gathered at the close of the season. Rice is now scarce and dear even in Bengal, we believe, and a sharp demand will have to be made on British Burmah for that article. It appears that the prospects there are very reassuring. With a cultivation of two and a half millions of acres, no diminution in the yield, on comparison with last year, is anticipated in the Akyab-district. There are, moreover, seventy-three thousand acres in Ramree and twenty-three thousand in Sandoway under cultivation, so that the prospect is a very fair one, of there being a surplus for exportation at the coming shipping season.

WRECK OF THE SHIP "IDAS."—Some days ago the fine ship Idas, bound from Moulmain to the United Kingdom with a cargo of timber on board, was blown by a severe squall on the eastern end of the Barragua shoal, where she finally stuck and became a complete wreck. As the sea was rolling over the vessel there seemed to be no hope of doing anything towards saving her, especially during the rough monsoon weather which is now being experienced on this coast. The crew took to the boats to save their lives. The captain and some of the officers and men came up to town early last week, but the long boat, with the stewardess and eighteen men on board, was missing for several days, and there was no doubt that it had been swept out to sea by the tide. Fortunately, the missing boat has arrived, and no lives are reported to be lost. The day following the arrival of the captain in town, the wreck and cargo were sold for the benefit of the underwriters. Under the provisions of Act I. of 1859, the Commissioner of the Division, Major R. D. Ardagh, has appointed a Marine Court of Inquiry to be held, composed of the Master Attendant, Captain Harold Lewis, and George Bulloch, Esq., honorary magistrate, to cite such persons who appear before them, and to institute such investigation as may be necessary, to ascertain the cause of the disaster, and whether blame can be attached to anyone for its occurrence. The Court will meet on an early date.—Rangoon Times, Sept. 9.

THE CINCHONA CULTIVATION AT DARJEELING seems to flourish beyond expectation. In July no less than 14,000 cuttings were made, a greater number than has ever been made since the establishment of the plantation. The higher elevations seem to suit the more common specimens Cinchona C. Succurubra, and C. Officinalis admirably, and we have seen what is literally a large Cinchona plantation from which we may spread the cultivation at other and favourable spots along the southern ranges of the Himalayas. The extreme humidity which characterised July, and the high temperature of that month were of the greatest service to the plants, and fostered their growth in the most extraordinary manner. During the month the total rain fall at the fourth plantation was 44.4 inches, or nearly half of the total rain fall for the seven months of the current year 95.58 inches. At this plantation the maximum temperature for the month was 87.10, the minimum 67.9, and the mean for the month 77.54. During the month a specimen of the C. Pabudiana at the fourth plantation shot up from a mere sprout to a fine plant of 13 inches in height. The total number of Cinchona plants in various plantations at the end of July was 80,717.

THE "EAGLE SPEED."—The inquiry into the causes of the loss of the Eagle Speed has resulted in the punishment of Captain Heath, of the steamer Lady Elgin, by depriving him of his certificate, and in the exposure of the Marine Department, to whose dogged official obstinacy is to be attributed the absence of an inner-floating light in the channel of the Mutlah. Had that light been there, not a soul on board the ill-fated ship would have been lost. The subject had been pressed upon the attention of the Bengal Government more than once, and it was referred by the Lieut.-Governor to the department in question, when the Superintendent, Captain Reddie, strenuously opposed the project, although a ship, the P. C. Kinch, had been lost only a short time before the reference was made, very much in consequence of the want of an inner light. The destruction of 300 human beings in the Eagle Speed has roused the Government at last, and the Charlotte schooner has been converted into a light vessel.—Hurkaru.

THE GARRISON GRAVE-YARD AT LUCKNOW.—After the relief of the Lucknow Garrison, a grave-yard was opened out on the ground between the Residency and the Inayet Bagh, for the burial of those who might die among the troops occupying the Kaiser Bagh and neighbouring buildings. In the alterations now in progress, that grave-yard has been demolished, and the ground is now being levelled. We have been asked how the remains of our countrymen interred there have been disposed of. We have no doubt that they have been removed with care to consecrated ground, but it is desirable that the authorities afford positive information upon this point.—Oude Gazette.

NATIVE ESCORTS CUT DOWN.—Some time ago a proposal was made to Government, arising, we believe, from a visit paid by Scindiah to Allahabad, [that native chiefs and sirdars should not be allowed to enter a walled city, when accompanied by a large number of retainers. The proposal was negatived at the time, but orders have recently been issued, by which it is ruled that henceforth, when chiefs or sirdars enter British territory, they must be accompanied by a limited number of followers, instead of the multitudes they have hitherto rejoiced in leading.

MAJESTY STRIPPED OF ITS EXTERNALS.—It is somewhat singular to note how long it takes the Government to discover matters which may be called important trifles. When the King of Oudh was deposed and brought to Calcutta, it was not thought necessary to impress upon him the necessity for a change in the style of his signature, and he therefore continued to write himself "Shah Aalum." Considering the state of Moslem feeling in India, and the position and circumstances of the ex-king, it was intimated to him that this signature had better be abandoned. The suggestion was complied with, and the king now writes his name only, "Wajid Ally." It is said that since the alteration was introduced there is a marked change in the bearing and conduct of this prince. It is not difficult to imagine that he would cling to even the veriest trifle which seemed in any way to intimate that his rank and dignity were still real.—Hurkaru.

HORRIBLE MURDER IN CALCUTTA.—We are sorry to learn that another murder has been committed, the victim on this occasion being an unfortunate lady named Macleod. She had been grievously maltreated by her husband on several occasions, and on the night before last he assaulted her so severely with a thick stick that he beat her to death. He then placed the body in a palanquin and sent it to the hospital, thus endeavouring to create for himself such a loop-hole as that through which the ruffian Lefevre was allowed to creep by the sapient jury before whom he was tried for braining his wretched leman, Eliza Nash. The particulars will be duly laid before our readers.

THE "ENGLISHMAN" learns that it is in contemplation to substitute cloth for serge in the dress regulations of the army. It also states for those interested in the question that the service of officers of the Staff Corps counts towards promotion under all circumstances, except during absence on leave, or loss of employment from misconduct; and that it has been recommended by the Commander-in-Chief that warrant officers in India, holding the departmental ranks of Deputy, Assistant, and Deputy-Assistant Commissioners, receive honorary commissions. Also an order has been received from the Horse Guards, that, from the 1st of January next, an officer, before being appointed on the personal staff of a general, must pass the examination laid down in pp. 78-79 of the Queen's Regulations, 1859.

CATMANDO AFFAIRS.—The negotiations which the Government has been carrying on for some time with the Court of Catmando have come, we are sorry to say, to a very important conclusion. Those negotiations were intended to suppress crime in the border country between the possessions of the two States, by which the frontier is frequently vexed and disturbed. The Resident had an interview with Sir Jung Bahadur, at which the views of the Government were fully explained. Those views, and the result of the interview, are given elsewhere, and need not, therefore, be dwelt on here. A promise has, however, been given that an efficient police along the frontier will be organised, which will co-operate with the British Police in our territories.—Hurkaru.

STATIONERY REFORM.—Orders have been issued by Government to the effect that whatever letters are despatched from Government offices are to be written on Europe paper. It is intended to continue the use of country-made paper to docketts, &c. This measure has been necessitated by the discovery that country-made paper is not durable; and much inconvenience has arisen from important public documents becoming illegible.

THE INDIAN BRANCH RAILWAY.—Erroneous reports from time to time have been sent from this place respecting the Indian Branch Railway; with a view to correct them, and to furnish the public with an account of matters as they actually are, we give a prominent place to the following notes of progress on works under construction, with which we have been kindly favoured:—The first land, viz., for about two miles of the line, was made over to the company by Government in June of last year. The railway, from the Charbagh Station at Lucknow to the banks of the Ganges at Cawnpore is 42½ miles long. The last of the land for this first section of the company's operations was obtained in May of the present year. The average time during which the works have been in progress throughout is about nine months. The result is as follows:—Embankments and cuttings finished; bridges and culverts finished with the exception of two (2), the arching of which is in progress. Many of the level crossings and much of the fencing completed. The remainder in a forward state. Ballast collected, and being laid down ready for the sleepers. Permanent way and rolling way stock on the way from England. Lucknow Station, which is intended to form eventually a central depot for Oude under military protection, is in an advanced state. Some twenty buildings are in course of construction. The first roadside station will be at Harownee on the Sundeela, Mohan and Bunnee road, the second at Ajaen, near Nawabgunj, and third at Oonao. These are all in a forward state, some of the buildings being about to be roofed. A temporary terminus is being erected on the bank of the Ganges near the pontoon bridge, and is in an advanced condition. There are about 5,000 people in regular employment. The line is expected to be ready for traffic about the middle of next year. Upon another occasion we purport making a few remarks upon the benefit this place has derived, and is deriving, from the execution of these works.—Oudh Gazette.

NEARLY DROWNED.—The Sam Prokash contains an interesting account of the wonderful escape from drowning of Captain Etrick, late Adjutant of the 7th Fusiliers, and Mr. White, connected with the Baliankadee Factory, in Faredpore. They were riding along the road to the west of the factory; and the accident, which very nearly proved fatal to them, took place at a spot where a fierce current had broken through the road. Mr. White's life was saved through the heroic efforts of his companion, but with the help of a peasant who was passing, who descended into the water up to his waist, and seized hold of Mr. White and drew him upon firm ground. Mr. White's aunt has given a liberal reward to this peasant.—Indian Daily News.

GOVERNMENT have issued instructions for the erection of barracks for a British regiment and a Goorkha corps, and the construction also of a convalescent depot in the neighbourhood of Dalhousie. The Goorkha regiment will be placed at Buklah.

SIRDAR GOOR BUKSH SING, who was committed by the magistrate of Loodianah for aiding and abetting in the murder of Sirdarnee Mehtab Kour, has been acquitted and released by the sessions judge.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MADRAS STOCK AND SHARE MARKET.—During the fortnight our market has been adversely affected by the anxiety shown by holders to realise securities, partly in consequence of the advance in the value of money, but chiefly on account of the excitement in the cotton market. The demand for accommodation has greatly increased, and large remittances of specie in payment of cotton continue to be made to the Mofussil. On the 10th instant the Bank of Madras further advanced their rates one per cent. all round. Government Securities are being forced on the market, and there being but few purchasers, rates have declined from 1½ to 2 per cent. during the fortnight. Four per Cents., which on the 6th ultimo were saleable at 8½ discount, were barely worth 12 discount on the 6th instant. Fives, which were worth 4 premium, declined to 3 on the 6th inst., but have since advanced to 3½ premium. Five-and-a-half are worth about 8½ premium. Madras Bank shares are maintained at 73 per cent. premium, at which sales are reported; but little is doing either here or in Bombay. Exchange is steadily rising, though there are not very many drafts offering at the moment. Credits which were placed at 2s. 1½d. on the 4th inst. have been sold for this mail at 1s. 2d. 5-16 to 7-16. Documents have been negotiated at 2s. 1½d. Bank bills at six months' sight have been purchased at 2s. ¾d. for this mail. Drafts on Bombay have been sold to a large amount during the fortnight at rates ranging from 2 per cent. discount on the 28th ult. to 3 per cent. on the 12th inst. The rate on Calcutta drafts declined about ¼ per cent. between the 27th and 29th ult., but has since advanced to 2 per cent. discount.

THE FRACAS AT BANGALORE.—Another correspondent has favoured us with an account of the assault case which has just created such a commotion in Bangalore, and it is curious to see how widely his view of Captain Hill's magisterial conduct differs from the view taken in the letter we published yesterday. According to one writer, Captain Hill has shown himself to be all that a magistrate should be; according to the other, he has furnished an awful example of what a magistrate should not be. The key to this discrepancy would be very simple if both writers were interested parties, but we have every reason to believe that they are both wholly disinterested, and we know quite enough of both to be sure that they are not guilty of any intentional unfairness. It is therefore a tolerable presumption that each view contains a certain amount of truth, and that Captain Hill has at once fairly laid himself open both to praise and blame. We are inclined to think that the praise ought very much to predominate. The public is more concerned with what a magistrate does than with what he says, and Captain Hill appears to us to have ingeniously earned Charles the Second's epitaph reversed. What he did was wise enough, but another epithet must, we fear, be accorded to what he said. For the interests of the public it was most necessary that Cornet Watkin's offence should be treated with exemplary severity, and Captain Hill deserves the highest praise for the moral courage, which, as a military magistrate in a military cantonment, he has shown in braving the prejudices, professional and local, of his brethren, whose sympathies very naturally were strongly in favour of the defendant. It is therefore much to be regretted that Captain Hill should have marred the effect of this course by ill-judged talk about "military tyranny," and an altogether uncalled-for severity of comment upon the character of the offence brought before him.—Athenæum.

THE INDIAN TRAMWAY.—The formal opening of the Indian Tramway Company's line between Arcotum and Conjeeveram took place on the 30th September, when the agents and secretaries invited a number of gentlemen to make the trip, hospitably entertaining them with breakfast and tiffin. At the latter meal the toast of "Success to the Tramway Company" was proposed by Mr. Pycroft, and received due honours. The cost of the line has been somewhat less than five and a half lacs of rupees, or in round numbers 30,000 rupees a mile, and its construction is said to be excellent in every respect. A lucrative traffic has already sprung up, and will doubtless soon increase, and lead, we trust, to the early formation of other branch lines of the same kind, which are calculated to be of great advantage to the country through which they pass, as well as to benefit the main lines of railway, by serving the purpose of feeders to them.—Athenæum.

PROVIDENTIAL ESCAPE.—On Saturday evening last the horse of Captain Hill, the cantonment magistrate, fell with him, and threw his rider. We are happy to say that beyond a few scratches on the face Captain Hill escaped other injuries. On the same evening, also, Mr. Ricketts, the first judge of the Small Cause Court, met with an accident, his horse having fallen and rolled over, and in this case also we are glad to hear his rider was uninjured. These were lucky escapes for the gentlemen named and for the public. It would have been very inconvenient to themselves and the public to have had both judge and magistrate on the sick list. Suitors and prisoners, be thankful!—Mysore Paper, Sept. 12.

COLLEGE BOARDING HOUSES.—Steps are being taken to institute boarding houses in connection with the Presidency College. This measure has already been adopted with respect to several scholastic institutions in the Bombay Presidency, where the system works well, as it no doubt will do here likewise, not only tending to the convenience of scholars whose families are not residents of Madras, but further to render more intimate the relations between them and the masters of the college, one of whom will be placed at the head of the contemplated establishment. The necessary building for the above purpose will be erected within the precincts of the Chempauk Palace.—Athenæum.

THE HORSEWHIPPING CASE AT BANGALORE.—The Athenæum, alluding to the case of Cornet Watkins and the editor of the Bangalore Herald, says:—"The case, which was a very gross one, has been committed for trial by a higher Court, but it is yet uncertain where the jurisdiction over it lies. Most probably the matter will have to be dealt with at Calcutta, as Mysore is beyond the limits within which the Madras High Court can act under the existing state of the law."

THE GOVERNOR continues for the present on the Hills, but will return to the Presidency next month.

EXPORTS.—The price of Western cotton has advanced fully Rs. 80 per candy since the 27th ultimo. During the fortnight purchases have been made at Rs. 205, Rs. 210, Rs. 230, and Rs. 250 per candy, the last rate having been reached on the 12th instant. The dealers are now asking Rs. 280, but as it is doubtful whether the dealers could supply a large quantity immediately, this rate can hardly be regarded as the actual price of the day. The demand is very active, and it is believed that at no date during the American War were there so many orders in our market as there are at the present time. At Tuticorin we hear of purchases of Tinnevely cotton at prices ranging from Rs. 175 to Rs. 200 per candy. Our last quotation is Rs. 220, but nominal only, sellers holding off. At Cochin the price of cocoa nut oil continues to advance, and as much as Rs. 106 per candy is asked, at which unprecedented rate for immediate delivery the article is not obtainable in any quantity. Every candy is being purchased for Bombay by native shippers.

IMPORTS.—The exciting intelligence received from England during the fortnight has had a great influence on this market, and stimulated a very active enquiry on the part of the dealers. Holders are, however, indisposed to effect large sales at current rates, and the transactions during the fortnight have consequently not been very extensive. Some speculative purchases at greatly enhanced prices, supposed to be on Bombay account, are reported, and the market closes with great firmness. In 7lb. Shirtings which are held in but very small quantities by native dealers both here and in the Mofussil, an advance of 12 to 14 annas per piece has been established. In 40 Mule Twist sales have been made during the fortnight at prices ranging between Rs. 5-4 to Rs. 6-6. In Grey Madapolans and Jaconets no transactions are reported, and prices are nominally unaltered. Turkey Red Goods are a little dearer. Prints are maintained, but no advance has been made. There is a good demand for Turkey Red Yarn, other colours are enquired for at a slight advance, but not much business has been done. Metals are cheaper and over supplied.

THE GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.—One of the latest instances of niggardliness on the part of the Supreme Government we purpose alluding to this morning, and the subject has been particularly impressed upon us by reading Dr. Oldham's "Report on the Geological Survey of India and of the Museum of Geology, Calcutta, for the official year ending on the 30th of April, 1865." The Geological Survey of India was established under Lord Dalhousie's auspices some ten years ago. It might have been deferred many years later, only that the influence of science at home had been brought to bear upon the late East India Company, and the importance of a systematic geological survey of the country had been demonstrated to the satisfaction of the magnates of Leadenhall-street. The numbers of the surveyors, however, as sanctioned, were ridiculously small, having regard to the amount of territory to be examined. A few additions have since been made to the strength of Dr. Oldham's establishment, but at the present moment we believe that the total number of gentlemen connected with the survey is below twelve. During nine years of hard work, we observe, from the index to the Indian Atlas, that one square sheet (No. 79) of the Madras Presidency has been completely surveyed and mapped, that the main portion of sheet 61 has been surveyed and mapped, while portions of sheets 77 and 78 have been surveyed, but the maps and reports thereon are not yet ready for publication. The area "in progress" at the present time is represented by sheets 58 and 76 of the Atlas. As compared with other parts of India a large extent of ground has been got over by the three gentlemen belonging to the Madras branch of the survey. It must be remembered that each sheet of the Atlas represents an area of 14,500 square miles, and as for geological purposes it is necessary to cross and recross the districts under examination without reference to the existence of roads and thoroughfares, it will be evident that a large amount of tedious and toilsome work is involved in the survey and mapping of a single sheet of the Atlas. In Bengal the Ramagunde coal-fields have been surveyed and mapped, and also a considerable portion of the country in Central India, including the valley of the Nerbudda. In Burmah considerable progress has been made in the examination of the delta of the great rivers. A beginning has been made in the survey of the Bombay Presidency, and also in the Punjab and the Lower Himalayas. The work as yet finished, however, is so small in comparison with that which remains to be done, that the surveyed portions are represented in the Map of India by small scattered dots and blotches of red, not one fiftieth, perhaps, of the whole area. At the present rate of progress the Survey may be perhaps completed about the year 2,000, when it will perhaps be necessary to recommence and go over the whole with greater minuteness.—Athenæum.

THE CAERNATIC COFFEE COMPANY.—We are glad to learn that the profits of this company for the year ending March 31 last amount to Rs. 51,000, and that it is proposed to declare a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. on the paid-up capital. The directors have every confidence in the ultimate success of the undertaking as a remunerative investment; and although they would not lead their friends to expect any great results at the next declaration of dividend, they mention that a large increase is looked for in the season after next, as much land of the company's own planting will then come into bearing. The valuable land on the Annamallay Hills obtained from Government at the upset prices of five rupees per acre is being opened up by Mr. Lees, an experienced Ceylon planter, who is now on the spot.—Athenæum.

THE PARIS INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION.—On the 13th ult. the Secretary to the Government of India was instructed to inform the Madras Government that a reference having been made to the Secretary of State on the question of expending money from the public revenues for the collection of articles for the Industrial Exhibition proposed to be held in Paris in 1867, it is desirable that, pending a reply from him, no such expenditure should be incurred. It does not appear that there is any pressure as to time, the Exhibition not opening till May, 1867, so that there will be a full year for the collection and despatch of articles after the receipt of the Secretary of State's orders. There is, however, says Mr. Bayley, no objection, but the contrary, to the immediate appointment of committees, who, it is hoped, will, as is the case in England, find some occupation in furthering the object of individuals who may be desirous to contribute to the support of the Exhibition, or to send articles to it.

NATIVE ENLIGHTENMENT.—We may mention as particularly worthy of notice, because it shows how the value of a superior class of European education is rising in native esteem, the fact that one of the smaller districts of it, and by no means a wealthy one, namely, Canara, has offered to Government a contribution of Rs. 65,000, toward the establishment of a provincial school. That large sum has been subscribed for the purpose by little more than two thousand persons. Their liberality was of course cordially responded to by Sir William Denison and his colleagues, and the school is accordingly to be established at Mangalore. A more gratifying incident it has seldom fallen to our lot to record.—Athenæum.

THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The authorities of the Central Provinces, we hear, contemplate the discontinuance of the exclusive use of the Oordoo language throughout the province, and the substitution of Mahratta, the vernacular of the province. The substitution of Mahratta in a few of the courts of the Central Provinces has worked most satisfactorily, the people having taken every opportunity to express their gratification at the change.

GOOD NEWS FOR DOG FANCIERS.—The Coldstream, which has just arrived from Australia, has brought among other things a consignment of dogs, about forty in number. We hear that the canine cargo comprised Kangaroo-hounds, greyhounds, Italian greyhounds, sheep-dogs, bull-dogs, mastiffs, spaniels, and bull-terriers. In addition, there are two emus, and a number of parrots and other birds. We understand that information concerning these new arrivals may be obtained from Messrs. Goodchild and Co.—Madras Times.

CASHMERE.

Familiar with Himalayan travel and life in the Happy Valley we can testify to the general correctness of the descriptions furnished to the Bombay Gazette by a correspondent. His pictures are not overdrawn in any way—they rather fall short of the truth—they are simple pencil sketches, and cannot be called finished pictures. With an eye for the beautiful, the means at his command, travelling as a European, are few, and do not permit him to give finished pictures. His aesthetic taste finds but incomplete expression in words. The work on Cashmere is yet to be written. The item for such a work is rapidly passing away. There can be little doubt that Western civilisation will force its way into the valley not very long hence, and then, as everywhere else, it will be found "stale, flat, and prosaic." Travel in the Himalayas, however, will always continue invested with peculiar charms. The solitude and grandeur—the vast immensity of nature, will remain untouched amid all the social or commercial revolutions of the earth, and continue to attract the lover of the solitary, the beautiful, and the grand. Probably in all the vast surface of the globe there is nothing to rival travels on the Himalayan valley of the Sutlej, the Beas, the Chenab, and the Indus. In some parts far north the scenery becomes oppressively grand:—

—Rocks on rocks in wild confusion hurl'd,
The ruins of an ancient giant world.

Many travellers have said that the beauty of Cashmere women has been much exaggerated. They must either have been crusty old bachelors, who mistook their coolie women for Cashmerees, or people who never possessed a spark of enthusiasm for the fair and the beautiful. Excelling all Asiatic races in face and form, their minds are peculiarly feminine. Their colour is a warm, rich, rosy brown. Forms which embody the very poetry of motion, and features perfect whether taken as a whole or in detail, these make Cashmere women perfect models of beauty. It is next to impossible for a European to converse with them, and very difficult even to get a passing glance at them. We can speak confidently on this point. In private life and among one another there is none of that mock modesty and false shame which make Hindoo and Mus-sulman women in India appear so unlovely. Feminine in the tone of their mind, their wit and jests are as remarkable as those of their European sisters in polished circles.

It is remarkable that not far from Cash-mere, and next, too, to some of the ugliest district famed for the perfect beauty of its women. We refer to Khutan. Separated from Cashmere by about two hundred miles from the very wildest Himalayan territory, and on the other side of the Karakorum range, Khutan is one of the sub-divisions of Eastern Toorkistan. The people are mostly Mussul-mans, and fanatic beyond all expression. The beauty of the women there has passed into a Central Asian proverb, and the Emperor of China's seraglio was chiefly supplied thence. Khutan will soon probably become a Russian outpost.

The occasion of this article was the state-ment regarding Cashmere shawls which ap-peared in our last extract of the Gazette's cor-respondent. It is partially erroneous, and calculated to mislead. Cashmere shawls, as is well known, are made in great variety at Amritsar, Noorpoor, and Loodiana, in the Punjab, where weavers from Cashmere have settled. Most residents in North India are imposed on with shawls called Cashmere, but made in the Punjab, inferior in every way. Of inferior wool, work, and colour, it is only the experienced and long practised eye which can tell which is Punjab and which genuine Cashmere stuff. Even respectable Punjab natives, who should be expected to know these things, are very much out in their practical knowledge of the subject. There is, perhaps, only one shawl trader out of Cashmere who can show genuine Cashmere stuff—old Lalla Juggut, of Delhi, who sup-plied the old Imperial family. Not one genuine Cashmere shawl is possessed by the scores of Cashmerees themselves who wander about North India and the Hills with their so-called Cashmere stuffs. Failing Lalla Juggut, the only resource is Cashmere itself. The correspondent is pretty correct in his prices of shawls worked on a sheet. He is, however, out in saying that those worked in pieces cost only from six to seven hundred rupees. He must have seen only the very poorest speci-mens, but even then the price is never below fifteen hundred. It is a trick with Cash-mere dealers not to show good shawls till the last extremity. The shawls worked on pieces are the real and true variety. A de-cently good shawl of this kind can hardly be got under three thousand rupees. The Cashmere correspondent does not seem to ap-preciate their fineness, he under-rates their price, and he very nearly puts both kinds—those on sheets and those in pieces, under the same head. The difference between a shawl worth Rs. 150 and one worth Rs. 3,000 is considerable, and can hardly be mistaken. The shawls sent so abundantly to Europe are mostly of the cheaper sorts. The reasons for the wide difference between the two sorts are too many to be mentioned here. Suffice it to say that the true Cashmere shawl will attract the most prominent attention anywhere, that it is lovely and fine beyond description, hav-ing no other work that will compare with it, and that it will last a century and longer.—Athenaeum.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A GENERAL PEACEMAKER DEPUTED TO MHOW.—More than a fortnight ago, we be-lieve that a general officer was deputed to Mhow with the object of his promoting a re-conciliation between contending parties at that cantonment. The general is a man of experience, and his views should command re-spect, even amongst officers who could so far forget themselves as to resent the decision of the Commander-in-Chief. But the peacemaker will require to exercise very considerable impartiality as well as firmness; and we trust that he is not a man who can be misled in his judgment because on one side of a question the numbers and even influence of interested parties may greatly preponderate over the few in whose side right may happen to be.—Times of India.

CURIOSITIES IN BRIGADE ORDERS.—The Friend of India has some remarks upon an affair which has excited considerable amusement in the North-West. "It appears," says the Friend, "that not many weeks ago Brigadier-General Auchmuty Tucker was forced, on promotion to the rank of major-general, to give up the command of the station of Rawul Pindiee. He took advantage of the occasion to issue a final valedictory order. In this order he thanked everybody. He thanked the commanding officers, and, through them, the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men; he thanked the cantonment magistrate, the executive officers, the executive engineer, the divisional paymaster, the barrackmaster, the brigade major, and the deputy-inspector-general of police; he thanked the Church of England chaplain, the Presbyterian clergymen, the Roman Catholic priest, and the inspector of post-offices; and, finally, he congratulated the older residents of the station generally, civil, military, and mercantile, on the transformation of Rawul Pindiee, during the tenure of his command, from being 'the most desolate, ill cared-for, and neglected station Sir Hugh Rose had ever seen, into a station second to few in general appearance; and he urged on householders to continue their efforts to make it "one of the prettiest and best cared-for stations, as it was assuredly one of the healthiest in Upper India." There was, we admit, nothing treasonable in this farewell order: it was the harmless prattle of a garrulous old Indian. It was absurd, and of a nature to excite laughter; but these are the characteristics of such prattle. And in that light it seems to have been regarded by the residents of Rawul Pindiee in general. One member of the community, however, thinking it a pity that the world should lose so sentimental an adieu, wrote a parody upon it, and published this in an up-country newspaper. The parody was read also at Rawul Pindiee, and was enjoyed there, as elsewhere, by all except one. This one was the officer who succeeded to the command of the brigade—Colonel E. R. Priestley.

Colonel Priestley's notions of the privacy of a communication seem to have grown wonderfully since he last dined at the United Service Club in Calcutta. In fact, he was so penetrated with horror at the idea that any one could be so dishonourable, so wanting in good feeling, good sense and good taste as to turn a Brigade Order into ridicule, that to rebuke this perpetrator of the infamy he rushed into print, and issued an order which we do not hesitate to designate as the most remarkable of the three. We need not quote the rest of the Friend's remarks. The order is as follows:—"These recently made of a Brigade Order communicating the thanks of the General Officer who has so long been at the head of the brigade, in turning it publicly into ridicule, deserves direct and unqualified censure. It would be useless to appeal to the good sense, good taste, and good feeling of the person who has allowed himself to be betrayed into an act, which plainly proves the absence of those qualities in all who may have to do with it. Orders are confidential communications addressed by officers to those under their command. To treat therefore orders with open disrespect, is to court prompt retribution. It may seem safer but it is less honourable to do so secretly; and to communicate them to any person or persons by whom they may be turned to bad account and made use of to injure the general or troops, either materially or in character, discipline or morals, is an offence of the same nature, and differing from it only in degree as betraying the watch-word to, or holding communication with, the enemy."

ROUMURED TROUBLES IN CENTRAL INDIA.—Central India is always rife with all sorts of rumours. At one time, we learn, that a big chief has threatened a little one, or that the Bheels and Meenas have been more than usually troublesome, or that the religious feelings of some Mohammedan prince have led him to outrage the social ties of his Hindoo subjects. Battle and murder, and sudden death, seem common, and security, and order, and justice uncommon amongst a people who live under an intensified form of Oriental Government. The last rumour of the kind is that the chiefs or Nazims of East and West Bhopal have grievously fallen out, and are consequently anxious to prove to each other that the world has only room for one of them. The cause of the quarrel has not transpired, but it is very likely to be some question of revenue or precedence. At all events each Kardar has bit his thumb, and now grasps the hilt of his tulwar, whilst he breathes out to his "Moosahibs" and "sellahkars" the most dreadful threats. The tutelary deity of peace, however, in the shape of a political agent will probably step in and dissolve with the charm of his presence the elements of the feeble tempest.

A MODEL STATION.—Here is a cheerful account of Kussowlie, from a letter in the Delhi Gazette:—"As regards the residents in the station, their case is truly miserable. The soldiers have at any rate their own theatricals to go to; but the civilians and officers, with their ladies, have no amusement of any sort, except in the day time, that lively game, croquet! A more frightful place than Kussowlie for a civilised being to spend six months in could not be found, I am sure, on the face of the earth. Nobody is ever seen out taking a walk; and the houses are so scattered that their occupants might be supposed by a stranger to be passing penal sentences of solitary confinement. By parties who ought to know, I am informed that the liveliest house in the station is the dark bungalow. There are almost as many cliques in the station as there are people; and the place is so awfully moral that it is a positive fact that two officers were hauled up to the orderly-room the other day for smoking in the verandah of the theatre during one of our performances! Though the number of residents is very limited, there are many of them who never enter anybody's house but their own; so you can easily imagine how glad these jarring elements must be of meeting in some building, where they can enjoy an evening's amusement without compromising one another."

THE RUSSIANS IN CENTRAL ASIA.—The last news from Central Asia is startling if reliable. The only country with which Bokhara has hitherto condescended to maintain permanently courteous relations is Russia. In the dismemberment of Kokhan both Powers have been as friendly as Prussia and Austria in Schleswig. But the advance of the Christians in the shape of the Russians has roused the fanaticism of the only class whom the Ameer of Bokhara fears—the Moollas of Samarkand. After exciting the revolt in Chinese Tartary, which has resulted in the defeat of the Chinese garrisons, they have stirred up the Ameer to fight the Russians. Accordingly, as the story is told in a Kokhan letter to some Cabul merchants quoted by the Delhi Gazette's news-writer, the Moollas, along with the regular troops, suddenly attacked and defeated a Russian regiment posted near the city of Kokhan. The Russian general remonstrated on this breach of friendship, and gave the Ameer a week's grace, during which the latter attacked the whole force, 4,000 strong, and was defeated. Acting on their skillful policy, which is to convince the people that they have come to deliver them from the yoke of fanatical tyrants, the Russians are said to have presented each captured sepoy with two gold mohurs, and to have nursed the wounded. They then occupied the city of Kokhan. This news reached Cabul at the end of August. Meanwhile, the Ameer of Cabul has declared his intention of wintering in Candahar, and boasts that he will re-conquer Toorkistan next April. At the same time he has taken refuge in the Candahar fort. Abdoolruhman Khan has driven the Ameer's Lieutenant out of every stronghold in Toorkistan, and is likely to make himself master of Bamean, the Governor of which is calling loudly for troops and guns. Our own information confirms the Russian story to this extent—that Russia, having Bokhara in her power, proposes to seize the Toorkistan provinces just revolted from the Ameer of Cabul, and is ready to make use of the civil war there for the accomplishment of her design of making her frontier march with that of British India.—Friend of India.

CHINA & JAPAN.

We take the following from the Overland China Mail of the 27th September:—

"The news of the fortnight has no significance whatever, which is perhaps the best intelligence we are able to convey. It is noticeable of late that no species of complication has arisen between the Chinese and foreign authorities. There appears to be a tacit agreement among us all to keep the peace heartily, and we are glad to think that this decision has been mutually arrived at. His Excellency the Prince of Kung is fully aware of the value of foreign alliance, and seems inclined to grant every facility for the carrying on of trade between China and foreign nations. It cannot be denied that the past few years have witnessed a very distinct change in the attitude of the Chinese Government towards ourselves. The strong feeling of repulsion which once characterised the rulers of Peking has entirely disappeared, and we have now to do with a set of officials who are perfectly willing to meet us more than half way. This is so far fortunate, and it is worthy of notice that English diplomacy is mainly entitled to the credit of such pleasing results. No doubt the other nations deserve credit for the cordial manner in which they have supported the policy of England, and there can be no doubt that they will continue that support steadily.

"So far as regards the internal affairs of the empire, there is nothing particular to record. The numerous petty rebellions which formerly menaced the peace of the empire seem to be melting away, if we may judge, at least, from the absolute absence of advices to the contrary from any of the former seats of contention; and we are glad to believe that the lethargy that has long oppressed the rulers of China is rapidly being thrown off. It would be too much to expect that a vast empire of some thousand years' existence should become modernized in a single generation; but there are distinct prospects of a thoroughly civilized future for China in the course of 20 years.

"From Japan the news regarding foreign relations is not of great importance. Rumours, however, are afloat that Sir Harry Parkes is not to be allowed his own way; but to these rumours it is not necessary to attach any consequence. Sir Harry's fame has, we understand, preceded him to Japan. His career in China has been fully reported to all those with whom he has to do in the country of the Rising Sun, and the utter uselessness of attempting to persuade him into any sinister political measure is very well known to the Daimios and to the Japanese officials.

"Shanghai is not at present over-prolific of news of a stirring nature, everything appearing to move pretty smoothly in that portion of the north. The Supreme Court for China and Japan was formally opened there on the 4th inst.; and the conduct of the new occupant of the bench, Sir Edmund Hornby, seems to give general approbation.

"All is quiet at Canton and Macao. Affairs are improving at Manila.

CHAPLAINS' LEAVE TO EUROPE.

The following extract from a despatch from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, ecclesiastical dept., No. 14, dated Aug. 17, is published for general information:—

Para. 1. It is stated in the certificate furnished, on the 26th Oct. last, by the civil paymaster in the Punjab, to the Rev. C. E. Hadow, a junior chaplain on the Bengal estab., that leave to Europe on m.c. was granted to that gentleman for two years. Under the present regulations, however, the utmost period for which it is competent to the Governments in India to grant to chaplains sick leave to England is eighteen months. I have, therefore, informed Mr. Hadow that eighteen months must be the limit of his original leave. Should he be allowed in this country an extension of leave beyond that period, you will be duly advised of the same.

PRIVILEGE LEAVE.

The foll. ruling of the Govt. of India, regarding the grant of priv. leave to covenanted civil servants, in instalments, is published for general information:—

"From the civil pay master, N.W.P., to the Secretary to the Government of India, financial department, No. 413, dated Oct. 12, 1865.

"As officers are now applying, under para. 8 of the new civil rules, for an 'instalment' of accumulated leave, I have the honour to ask the effect of such division on future accumulations. An officer entitled to three months' leave is absent for one month only, from April 1 to April 30, 1865—when will he be again entitled to full three months' leave? would suggest that a continuous service of eleven months should give him one month's leave in addition to the unexhausted accumulation. Thus, in the case given above, if he served continuously from May 1, 1865, to March 31, 1866, he should again become entitled to three months' leave; but if he take a second instalment from Aug. 1 to 31, 1865, he should serve from Sept. 1 to Aug. 1, 1866, before becoming again entitled to two months' leave.

"I suppose the division of accumulated privilege leave under this rule is left wholly to the discretion of the Government granting leave."

From R. H. Hollingbery, Esq., 2nd Assistant Secretary to the Government of India, Financial Department, to the Civil Paymaster, North-Western Provinces.—(No. 93, dated Simla, May 6, 1865).

In reply to your letter No. 413, dated April 12, 1865, I am directed to state that the Governor-general in Council is pleased to approve of your interpretation of the rule respecting the division of accumulated privilege leave.

(A true copy.)

(Signed) J. E. COOKE, Asst. Secy. to Govt.

The above ruling is applicable to military officers in civil employ.

By order, H. HUDLESTON, Acting Secy. to Govt.

No. 361.—The Gov. in Council is pleased to make the following appt. and proms., the latter subject to H.M.'s approval:—

Lieut. P. Sanderson, R.H.A., to act as extra A.D.C. to H.E. the Gov.

27th Regt. N.I.—Senior Lieut. E. Faunce (staff corps) to have the position of capt., v. Mecham, dec.; dated Sept. 13.

Cadre 42nd Regt. N.I.—Senior Capt. (Brev. maj.) H. D. Faulkner to be major, and Senior Lieut. H. R. Elliot to be capt. v. Atkinson, dec.; date of commissions, Sept. 16.

Capt. W. A. Beath, cadre 45th Regt. N.I., doing duty with the 13th Regt. N.I., is perm. to proceed to Madras and the western coast on furl for 2 years from date of departure, under the furl. regs. of 1854.

ERRATUM.—In the movements of R.A., notified in G.O.G., Oct. 3, No. 350, the destination of No.

OFFICERS EMPLOYED.

No. 363.—The following extract from a letter from the Secy. to the Govt. of India, military dept., No. 800, dated Simla, Sept. 21, is published in G.O. :—

The Right Hon. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to decide that all military officers employed in depts. under the military dept. of govt. shall be under the military rules, in respect to priv. leave. Officers employed under the foreign and home depts. [political, public, judicial, and revenue, in Madras] are under the civil rules, except those officers serving in the few native corps not under the military dept., who remain under the military rules.

These rules apply equally to medical officers.

TRAVELLING ALLOWANCES—DEPUTY-INSPECTOR-GENERAL OF HOSPITALS.

No. 864.—The Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to publish the following decision [communicated to the milly. acct. dept. in proceedings of Govt., No. 355, of Feb. 2, 1863, with effect from that date] of the Govt. of India.

H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council sanctions the grant to a dep. insp. gen. of hospitals, when on tours of inspection, of the rate of travelling allowance drawn in Bengal, in lieu of the major's extra batta, hitherto admitted to him.

The rates are 3 annas a mile, when the journey is, or can be, performed by railway, and 8 annas a mile when ordinarily travelling by land by other modes of conveyance.

When the duty involves a journey by sea or river steamer, a passage may be granted at the public expense, instead of the travelling allowance, the officer paying the usual rate of table money.
